Stirring Memorial Day Address Delivered at Mooresville Church

(By William Gregory Moore)

Americans were admonished to get hardboiled and give up all dreams of soft, easy living by Dr. John H. Frizzell, a Penn State Professor, whose address highlighted the Memorial Day program in the Mooresville Methodist Episcopal church, Huntingdon county, Saturday afternoon. "For the past 25 years," said Dr. Frizzell, head of the public speaking department at Penn State, "we have been whizzing around on rubber tires and allowing our muscles to atrophy on comfortable cushions. But today with Germany and Japan at our throats, we are paying an awful price for that quarter century of luxurious living.

"Because of our size and vast potential power," added Dr. Frizzell, "We, Americans, always have felt we could lick our weight in wildcats. But thus far we aren't doing it, you will agree. To date we've been at the receiving end mostly when punishment was handed out. By wallowing in luxury we have given Hitler, Hirohito and even the Italians their opportunity.

"In order to subdue the gangster Axis nations and preserve individual freedom, that glorious heritage handed down by our forefathers, we must follow the thorny path of sacrifice and tribulation." At this juncture he gave his audience a slogan, "Trust in God, but keep your powder dry," quoting a famous Revolutionary general.

Dr. Frizzell next expounded his viewpoint on the problem of 100 per cent Americanism. "What is a 100 per cent American?" he exclaimed. "When I hear a man describe himself as a 100 per cent American, I know he's exaggerating and lapsing into the error of over-statement, because in Nature and absolute does not exist. None of us ever attain this goal, not even the man talking to you today. But in my case I try hard to measure up to that high ideal, a common aim of us all."

Dr. Frizzell gave his Mooresville audience a brief glimpse into his family history, declaring he is only two generations removed from a steerage immigrant, a grandfather, who came to America from Europe, poverty-stricken, and grateful for an opportunity to work out his destiny in this land, the haven of the oppressed. This immigrant grandparent made good, achieving an honored place in his community and leaving his descendants the legacy of an untarnished name.

The Penn State professor speculated some on the post-war world, what may happen after the Axis nations are subdued. "We must prepare for a great peace, the greatest peace mankind has ever known, and humanity only can attain great peace by shaking off extreme personal selfishness and adopting a broad world viewpoint." The speaker also dwelt at length on humanity's reaction to war. "There are some compensations springing from the bloody conflict in which we are involved. People find their souls and the common perils that hover over our fighting men jolt them out of the personal selfishness antedating Pearl Harbor. Millions of men, once struggling for livelihoods in the highly competitive world we knew before Pearl Harbor, now are welded together in a mighty war machine with thoughts of personal success fading into the background."

Dr. Frizzell accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Roy Porter of State College, to the Memorial Day celebration. Mrs. Frizzell also being along.

Music was furnished by the Petersburg High School orchestra with Miss Grace Guyer, high school music director, in charge. A business session of the Mooresville Cemetery Association preceded Dr. Frizzell's address with Rev. J. H. Farrar, new Mooresville Methodist pastor in charge. Two present trustees, Chas. Thompson and Ralph Gregory, were re-elected for terms of three years, Marshall Croyle, a Mooresville merchant, was chosen to fill the unexpired term of William A. Myton, deceased several months. Only one candidate, Carmon Hutchinson, was nominated for auditor to succeed the late Nevin Miller, his election being unanimous. The report of Ralph D. Gregory, representing the board of trustees, showed a balance of $685 in the treasury.

Military ceremonies at the Mooresville cemetery were conducted by a delegation of veterans from the Clyde Davis, American Legion Post at Petersburg.

One member of America's fighting forces, Ted Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thompson, Petersburg, R. D., and widely known in Shavers Creek Valley for his skill with farm tractors, attended in uniform. He is a private located at Ft. Meade, Md. Before being drafted into the army Private Thompson did much custom plowing in Shavers Creek Valley, breaking all records in this line.

A Spanish-American war veteran, Leslie Harpster, Franklinville, Huntingdon county, also was present and looking resplendent in the uniform worn by veterans of the 1898 struggle on such occasions. When he appeared in company with his sister, Mrs. Oliver Scott of Cottage, several youngsters in the audience born long after he left Shavers Creek Valley, and unacquainted with him, centered their gaze on the visitor, figuring some noted American general, perhaps Hershey or MacArthur, was honoring Mooresville with his presence. Mr Harpster was warmly greeted by numerous friends.
