Sarah Ann's Cooking Class

When the hot days come upon us, it is a relief to have a meal that requires the minimum of preparation on the part of the housekeeper. Treat the family frequently to fruits for the first course, a salad that looks and makes them feel cool. Use plenty of vegetables, simply cooked but well-seasoned. Use these menus and if liked, put them away for future use.

that it could do no further damage by following the lower portion and going down through the house.
Firemen stated that had Gearhart been two inches more to the side of the bed he would have been crushed by the larger piece which struck the bed and crushed it to the floor.
Lightning struck the flue about two months ago and it is believed that this weakened the flue and caused it to buckle. It had been repaired at that time, however, and seemed in apparently good condition. Considerable damage was done to the house in Sunday night's "bombing" attack.

Good Tools Can Speed Pulpwood Preparation

Good tools well cared for, can make a great difference in the output of pulpwood. For that reason, County Agent R. C. Blaney thinks that it is a good idea to take time to keep them in shape.
The following tools and equipment are needed on a pulpwood job:
1. A cross-cut saw, preferably with a 5 to 5 1/2-foot blade of medium width sharpened carefully.
2. A bark spud not too sharp. Various types are used.
3. An axe, sharp, either single or double bit.
4. One felling and one splitting wedge.
5. A cant-hook.
6. A bottle of kerosene.
7. A sledge or maul, if much splitting is to be done.
The saw, a vital tool, should be kept well fitted. It should be even set (not over 1-100 of an inch), carefully jointed, the raking teeth adjusted below the level of the cutting teeth (1-64 of an inch for hardwood; 1-32 for softwood), and the cutting teeth well tapered.
The axe needs a sharp edge and a gradual taper to the blade. A file can be used to keep it in shape.
Further information on choice of tools and their care can be obtained from the County Agricultural Extension office in Bellefonte.

Comfortable Hens Lay More Eggs in Summer
To keep hens laying well during the summer, every effort should be made to have the poultry house cool and comfortable.
Not only is heat detrimental to production, but egg size may be reduced. County Agent R. C. Blaney points out. Glass windows left in front of laying houses are responsible for excessive heat in the houses. It is better to lift the windows out of place or remove them entirely from the front of the house.
Open windows in the rear of the house are desirable in providing cross-ventilation. Also, all front and rear ventilation boards should be open. Fowls are more comfortable on the roosts at night if there is full movement of air around them.
Another aid to adequate ventilation around the birds is that of having the droppings boards so constructed that they can be moved away from the back wall or built in sections with an alleyway between them. One definite advantage in the use of pits instead of droppings boards is the opportunity for air to move freely around the birds at night.
