

Echoes From the Past

Fifty Years Ago

A report was in circulation on the streets that a deal had been made whereby the mill works had been purchased by persons in Dunmore and the plant removed to that place. Upon hearing of the rumor we consulted Mr. Isaac Mitchell, a member of the company, who stated that the report was without foundation.

On Saturday evening there was a magnificent display of the Northern Lights, or aurora borealis, and the display was the chief topic for conversation the next day. Many were out watching the bright electric streaks flitting and darting through the heavens, at times seemingly frightful, but grand in the extreme.

On Wednesday a horse and buggy were stolen from a stable at Williamsport. The man who stole the horse, which was a bay and weighed 1000 pounds, is described as tall and slim with a small black mustache, and wore a black cap. The thief and his property were traced from Williamsport up through Sugar Valley, and was also thought to have been seen at Pleasant Gap and at Odenkir's hotel at the Old Fort. Officers with a warrant were in hot pursuit of the thief, but he was not able to overtake him. If captured he should be disposed of according to the western idea. Horse stealing is becoming entirely too common and frequent in the section.

A most appalling accident occurred on last Thursday morning in which William Immel lost his life by a fall of rock, crushing the life out of his body. Immel was employed in the Morris limestone quarries near Bellefonte, and had started to work as usual on that fatal morning. A blast had been placed in a ledge of rock which was intended to be brought down. The blast did not have the desired effect in loosening the mass of rock, but left several large stones, weighing several tons, overhanging in the shape of an arch, and it was desired that these should fall, too. Another blast would have knocked it loose, but Immel thought it could be broken easier by the use of crowbars and pries, and thus save the annoyance of a blast. He stationed two men on each side of the arch while he went under the ponderous mass and began prying at it with his bar to force it from its fastenings. He told the men beforehand that when they saw the keystone beginning to give way they should warn him. One of the men was a new hand and did not watch close enough, and when it gave way did not warn him in time to get from underneath and escape, and the whole mass of stone fell, crushing him to death. Immel was at once extricated and the rocks removed from the body. Medical assistance was summoned but he lived only fifteen minutes after the accident and did not regain consciousness at any time. William Immel was a young man who was married and lived with his father, Andrew Immel in this place. He was sober and industrious, well liked by all who knew him, and his parents have the sympathy of the community in this terrible affliction.

Twenty Years Ago

John Eckel, for five years proprietor of a butcher shop in Bellefonte, sold his business to Walter Armstrong of Zion. Mr. Eckel planned to take a vacation—the first in 16 years.

The American Lime and Stone Company was contemplating the purchase of land at the eastern end of Curtin street and northern end of Wilson street, on which to erect fourteen dwelling houses for the exclusive use of their office employees who were to be transferred from Tyrone to Bellefonte.

Marriage licenses were issued to the following couples: James M. Fetters, Bellefonte, and Viola M. Cresser, Mifflinville; Rudolph W. Williams, Port Matilda, and Anna Mary Hall, Fleming; James H. Algeo, Bellefonte, and Kathryn L. McIntire, Altoona; Fred C. Bechdel, Indiana, and Mary E. Fletcher, of Blanchard; Robert M. Gocher, of Johnstown, and Louise M. Grimm, State College.

While walking in the mountains near Boalsburg, Russell Bohn, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Bohn, of Boalsburg, tripped and fell and by a rare chance his fall caused a dynamite cap which apparently was in the leaves on the ground, to explode. The boy's left hand was so badly shattered that it was necessary to amputate the thumb and index finger, the operation being performed at the Bellefonte Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen S. Garman, of Tyrone, were at their summer home "Edgefont" at Axemann, for several weeks. The property was formerly the old Mann homestead. Mrs. George Ayers, of Philadelphia, will painfully burn about the left eye when a bottle of iodine she was lifting out of a medicine cabinet overhead, spilled into her face. She was taken to the McGirk sanitarium where the injuries sustained readily to treatment. The sight was not impaired.

Elton Koon, employed at Harvey's bakery and ice cream factory in State College, was repairing an ammonia pump when one of the valves broke and the gas burned him severely about the chest and arms. For a time his condition was serious. Just a few days before Koon was injured, George Harvey, dressed in light summer clothing, had been in the room for about 45 minutes.

The new instruments for the orchestra, for which Bellefonte's citizens liberally subscribed, have arrived and are in charge of Mr. Moyer, director of the orchestra. As soon as possible an open air concert will be given from the band stand in the court house yard. Several members of the orchestra are absent from Bellefonte.

The barn on the farm of Pierce Zellers in Sugar Valley was burned to the ground, Sunday afternoon. The barn was a large structure and with it were burned a lot of farm implements, harness and a small lot of hay. The outbuildings also were burned. The fire is supposed to have been of incendiary origin. The farm is about three miles from Loganton.

The Reporter (Centre Hall) says the cyclone that struck the town was a pretty well cleaned up, and some of the unroofed barns and houses are under cover again. The neighbors of the unfortunate people in large numbers put in a helping hand in clearing away the wreckage and assisting in preparations for new buildings, and in a few days after the storm an astonishing amount of work was done. There will be plenty of work in that vicinity for mechanics.

The 5-10 train from Lewisburg was delayed on last Thursday evening about Spring Mills by the bridge burning. A train passing over the bridge some time before dropped hot coals which set fire to the woodwork, and the bridge would have been entirely destroyed but for the timely arrival of the passenger train. The train was stopped and the fire extinguished. The bridge was badly damaged and it was with caution that the train proceeded on its way over the structure.

The practice of leaving horses on the street unhitched and unattended is dangerous as well as unlawful. Also, driving through the streets at a breakneck speed is unlawful. There are plenty of opportunities of enforcing the law in Bellefonte. . . . Col. Bayard put down one of his patent pavements in front of the residence of William Jenkins, on High street.

Gerberich, Hale & Co. have decided to rebuild the flouring mill which was destroyed by fire several months ago. The mill will be built on the old site and equipped with modern machinery and appliances. Arrangements are now being made for the construction of the new mill and work will soon begin. Mrs. Thomas Miles died at the home of her husband on Sunday evening at Milesburg. Mrs. Miles was stricken with paralysis a short time ago, and hopes were entertained for her recovery, but they were in vain. She was aged over sixty years and leaves a husband and four children. Her funeral took place on Wednesday morning from the Catholic church of which she was a devoted and consistent member.

Word was received by relatives that Mignon Willard and Herbert Emig, Bellefonte boys, had enlisted in the U. S. Navy at Brooklyn, N. Y. Charles, young son of Dr. P. P. Barker, of near Coburn, fell off a load of hay, suffering severe bruises and lacerations about the face and one arm. Several days later his father fell and fractured a rib and suffered other injuries.

A Holstein calf owned by George Hettinger, of near Penns Cave, was killed by a stroke of lightning which struck the barn. One other cow was shocked by the same bolt, but the rest of the livestock escaped injury.

Hon. Ives L. Harvey, of Bellefonte, was named general secretary of the Pennsylvania Sabbath School Association, and was put in charge of the large office in Philadelphia, and the 18 field workers throughout the state.

The home on East Logan street owned and occupied by Harry Ruhl was sold to John Barnes, of Pleasant Gap. . . . Frank Woomey, owner and operator of the Jersey Shore Laundry, spent the weekend at the home of Mrs. Samuel Showers, in Bellefonte.

A picnic which was to have been held at Hecla Park, for the benefit of the Bellefonte Hospital, was called off because of marked opposition to plans to have games of chance, fortune wheels and other similar devices. Instead, a special drive for funds for the hospital was to be conducted in October.

The State College High School scholarship, awarded annually to a member of the graduating class of that school, was awarded to Miles Hubler, son of Jeff Hubler. Announcement of the award was belated owing to the inability of the committee to get together to consider the merits of those eligible for the scholarship.

Fire of mysterious origin totally destroyed a dwelling house on the farm of J. F. Gates, of Pennsylvania Furnace, along with the summer home and a large barn containing some hay and grain. Howard Sticker and family were tenants on the farm and they were awakened by the odor of smoke. Three horses, all the implements, hay and grain were included in the loss.

Sunday School Lesson

GOD'S COVENANT WITH MANKIND

International Sunday School Lesson for July 26, 1942.

Golden Text "I will remember my covenant"—Genesis 9:15.

Lesson Text: Genesis 9: 1-16.

In our lesson we study the Hebrew story of the universal flood, which destroyed all men and animals except only a select few chosen to repopulate the earth and preserve creation. We say the "Hebrew story" because there are other accounts of a similar catastrophe in the traditional records of nearly every people, differing in detail, lacking in any spiritual interpretation or relating it to other gods, but everywhere, throughout the world, as scholars have delved into the secrets of centuries long past, as handed down countless generations by word of mouth before the art of writing was learned, a story of a great flood of destruction and a rebuilding of mankind is encountered.

There need be no difficulty about the fact we recall a devoted Christian who scorned the possibility of any authenticity in the Babylonian story of the flood as deciphered from ancient clay tablets. He challenged the existence of any such story except in Genesis. Yet he was badly in error, for in Genesis is a story of a flood, one engulfed all mankind, every living people descended from the survivors of that flood, and the fact of similar stories possessed by the entire range of mankind is strong evidence of an original, positive fact upon which all are based.

The discrepancies between these stories and legends need not worry any faithful mind. Many historical characters are the subjects of contradictory judgment, even although they lived after the beginnings of recorded journals. The origins and customs are likewise variously explained by historians and sociologists. So, why expect a primitive event, like the flood, to be carried mentally and passed down verbally through the ages to various folk scattered over the face of the world to coincide and agree in fully isn't it enough to know that in all parts of the world are found recognized traces of primitive stories all seeking to recount the essential fact that there was a great water disaster meeting the main features of our flood story?

On the other hand, there are similarities in various stories, only to be explained by the theory that these divergent tales were the children of a common ancestor, as they had to be, according to the Genesis story and all of them. Xanthus, the hero of one such record, was the ninth Babylonian king, as Noah was the tenth patriarch. The rainbow, as the token of God's promise, is every created object, is found not only in the Hebrew record but also in a Lithuanian flood-story. Both the Babylonian and Jewish descriptions of the "ark" or "box" refer to "bitumen." The sending out of birds are also prominent in these two records, several Indian versions, and others. Finally, after the flood, the grounding of the ark on a mountain, is fairly common, although the fabled location of this eminence is differently placed.

Geologists, as we pointed out in a recent lesson by their studies of the rocks have confirmed the story of creation as contained in Genesis by scientifically showing that the order in which animals appeared conform to this early record. So, with the flood, throughout the world, regardless of strata or formation, the geologist declares that all of our present land has once or more often been under water. The geologist says the process is continuing, that shore lines fluctuate in the ages, but the story of the flood can not be denied on any scientific proof that water hasn't covered all land.

However, the Genesis story may not necessarily imply a flood of greater extent than the inhabitable part of the world at that time, and scientific evidence proves the possibility of such a tremendous, wide-reaching flood. The melting of the ice-caps, the breaking of the Atlantic into the Mediterranean, and the overflow connection through the Red Sea to eastern waters, submerging vast areas of land formerly habitable, is recognized by geological evidence.

The Hebrew record of the flood, like their record of other things, links this great flood with the God of creation. For successive centuries following Adam man had developed, sin and crime had spread, violence was common, and God the creator of all things saw the necessity of a fresh beginning. Why? We have no answer, each soul can cope with the impossible task of interpreting the divine mind for himself, but, as the evidence above recounted shows a flood was adopted as the means to wipe out the evil. The Hebrew laid upon human wickedness the cause of the flood and Noah, a just man and perfect, was selected to start the human race afresh.

At the conclusion of the great flood, the Hebrew story tells of Noah's worship of God, and his recognition of the rainbow as the token of God's promise, as Jehovah. Whereupon a covenant is made with mankind, that not again should such a flood come. Nor has it. Not since then has any event of like nature taken place to give rise to records of all people of a flood—no story of the flood found among the primitive traditions, as far as we have met with, ever refer to two more floods. The Genesis story of one great flood and the promise of none other like it is not contradicted. The rainbow in the sky, caused by the breaking up of sunbeams and explained by modern science as the refraction of light, stand today as a pledge unbroken.

NEWS in the WORLD of RELIGION BY W.W. REID

If a better world is to be realized, Christians of all nations must unite their efforts in a common fellowship for the solution of post-war problems, according to Bishop Ivan Leo Holt of Dallas, Texas. He lists among the immediate post-war needs the feeding of the starving millions of Europe, the rehabilitation of better racial relations, the creation of a new international order, and the inter-fellowship of Christians of the nations now separated by warfare.

The Woman's Society of Christian Service organized in thousands of local Methodist churches in every state in the Union, is undertaking to make a "new friend" annually for each local society—a fellowship with some group of different background in the local community. Also each individual in each local society is "to make at least one friend annually in another group, seeking to know and understand that person and his background, and by exchange of experience draw closer together in facing the common task of Kingdom building."

According to the Moderator of the Church of Scotland (Presbyterian), German air raids on Scotland have damaged beyond use until later repaired 89 churches, manes and church houses; and also damaged 415 structures less seriously. He reports that three Scottish clergymen have lost their lives in the war and nine have been made prisoners.

Dr. Gordon Seagrave, missionary surgeon, and Dr. Brayton Case, an agricultural teacher—two of the outstanding missionaries of the American Baptist Foreign Missionary Society in Burma—have received distinguished mention in recent news dispatches from the Orient because of their service to the Burmese people and to the British-Chinese army during the days when Japan's soldiers were pushing their way into India. Word now comes that Dr. Seagrave, after traveling to India with General Stilwell, will establish a new hospital for wounded soldiers and for civilian refugees in Assam; while Dr. Case will remain in India and offer his expert services as an agricultural missionary and teacher to the people in that land.

A number of other Baptist nurses and doctors, American and Burmese, will become staff members of Dr. Seagrave's new hospital.

The Iglesia Evangelica Perkins Memorial in Contapequa, Guatemala, is celebrating its twenty-first anniversary. It all started years ago, when Miss Perkins' Sunday school class of boys in the Covenant Presbyterian church, Erie, Pa., became interested in two evangelical families in this little Central American country. The group that met in a home for worship began to grow, funds sent by the boys enabled them to buy a lot, lay the foundation, and the cornerstone and secure sheet iron for a roof; the rest of the material and labor they provided themselves. Today the church is self-supporting, has a fine building and manse, a Gaudeman pastor, and a flourishing congregation.

The evacuation of Japanese citizens and aliens on the West Coast of the United States has violated "Christian principles of racial non-discrimination and respect, of justice and fair play," according to a resolution sent to President Roosevelt and the governors of seven western states by the American Baptist Foreign Missionary Society and the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society. Many of the evacuees were members of Baptist churches. The denomination recently voted $50,000 for a year's Christian ministry among the evacuees.

Answering the question, "Are college students religious?" Secretary R. H. Edwin Espey of the Student Volunteer Movement, said recently: "The students themselves are clearly more receptive to religious influence than was the case ten years ago. They do not display their concern in demonstrative ways, and they are openly hostile to sham and undue sentimentality. Many even shy away from the normal outward expressions of religious life, including attendance at church. But there is probably less of scorn and more of open-mindedness than at any time since the first World War. The sands of students are not only willing but eager to hear a Christian message that is both genuine in spirit and practical in relation to problems that are real to them. They are seeking a religion that is intellectually tenable, socially relevant, and personally dynamic."

Good Advice: Pay your debts; then you will be better prepared for the future, whatever it presents.

Dervin Fetterolf, utility man on the lumber operations of his father, W. P. Fetterolf, of Millheim, cut a bad gash in his right foot last Wednesday afternoon on the mountains north of Millheim. The woods crew was cutting hemlock and peeling it at the time. Fetterolf's axe cut through the right shoe and into the instep, making a gash that required four stitches to close. He was taken to the office of a Millheim physician for treatment and has since been confined to his home.

The heavy wind storm that passed over the Millheim area last Monday afternoon did a neat job of assisting Russ Grazer to raze an old silo. Mr. Grazer has the materials on the ground for a new concrete silo, and was removing the old silo preparatory to starting construction on the new one. The steel hoops were loosened and workmen were about the structure with ladders when the wind came. They were called off immediately—and the wind soon brought down most of the wooden structure.

It is reported that many black snakes are seen in fields and woods and, in fact, that quite a number are being killed by automobiles on the highways. Coincidental to this news is the one that investigation reveals that the serpents found adjacent to mountain areas and killed on the highways, are found to be filled with eggs. Grouse eggs—orange eggs. Either of which presents a vital problem to sportsmen. The theory that black snakes is a deadly enemy of the ratter, some folks adopt a protective manner for the black reptiles. To us, he is just another snake and to sportsmen he is vermin to be destroyed immediately when seen.

A young lad reportedly from Halfmoon Terrace gave members of the Logan Fire Company a little light work last Monday morning about 12:30 when he became stranded on the roof of the United Brethren church on the corner of West High and Thomas streets. The lad and two companions had crawled to the church roof with the aid of rain-pipes to capture a turkey vulture nest on the eaves. The two companions descended in the same manner as they had gotten up but the third lost his nerve and called for help. Neighbors heard his call and notified Chief of Police Dukeman who sent in a call for the Logan fire truck whose ladders were used to bring the boy to the ground none the worse for wear.

Forty-six guests 5 to 13 years of age attended the 3rd annual Fishermen's Picnic as guests of former Fish Commissioner O. M. Delber at his property along Spring Creek last Wednesday afternoon. Fifty-five fish were caught during the day, the largest one a 19 1/2 inch brown trout being caught by Bobby Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Thompson, of East Curtin street. The guests were assisted in their fishing by Sheriff Edward R. Miller, Tom Mosier of Bellefonte, Dewey Bonnell and James Kell of Harrisburg, Ben Glippe, Fish Commissioner of Luzerne County, and Mr. Merritt, president of the State Sportsmen's Association, and Mr. Diebler. A lunch consisting of ham sandwiches, hot dogs, donuts and ice cream was served at noon to the boys and Bruce Wilson Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Wilson of South Allegheny street, won first prize for eating the most, 4 hot dogs, 3 ham sandwiches, 4 donuts, and 2 cups of ice cream. The group gave Mr. Diebler a hearty vote of thanks and promised to be ready for the picnic again next year.
