

Modern Etiquette

- 1. Is it proper to thank a hostess for a meal?
2. Isn't it a friendly gesture to hold a person's hand, or place a hand on his arm, while talking with him?
3. Is it permissible to use the knife and fork when eating fish?
4. Is the word "stationery" proper when referring to one's paper that is used for social correspondence?
5. Are there any certain guests who should be the first to leave a dinner party?
6. Is it all right to announce a wedding engagement at a tea or a card party?
7. When a verbal invitation has been extended to a person, isn't it rude for this person to say, "All right, I'll come if I can?"

- 8. If the wedding is to take place in church on a summer morning, is it permissible for the men of the bridal party to wear dark blue coats and white flannel trousers?
9. When a man meets a woman on the street, with whom he is well acquainted, should he offer his hand?
10. Which is better, to have a dozen real friends, or to be like some people who seem to be friends with everyone?
11. Is it very permissible for the parents of a young man who is to marry, to announce the engagement?
12. When a man is the guest of another man in a restaurant or hotel dining room, should he leave a tip for the waiter?

Answers to Modern Etiquette

- 1. No; the only one who gives thanks for a meal is a beggar. Do not say, "Thank you for the delicious dinner," but instead, "I've had a delightful time; it is nice being with you." It is more proper to indicate your enjoyment of the visit than of the fact that you've been fed.
2. It may be a friendly gesture, but it is very annoying to some people and should be avoided.
3. The fork only is used.
4. It is better to reserve "stationery" for a commercial term, and refer to the paper used for social correspondence as "note paper, writing paper, or letter paper."
5. Yes; the guests of honor should be the first to depart.

- 6. Certainly.
7. Yes, this indicates a lack of good breeding. One should say, and without hesitation, "I am very delighted to come," or, "I am very sorry, but it will be impossible for me to accept your kind invitation."
8. No.
9. No; this is the woman's privilege.
10. It is preferable to have a dozen real genuine friends. The old proverb says, "A friend to everybody is a friend to nobody."
11. No; only the parents of the girl are entitled to do this.
12. This is not necessary; it is the duty of his host.

Lessons In English

Words Often Misused
Do not say, "I laid down for an hour." "I lay down (past tense) for an hour." "I laid the book down" is correct.
Do not write, "I enclose herewith full instructions." Omit herewith, or write, "I send full instructions herewith."
Do not confuse "odororous," meaning "fragrant with odors," meaning "deserving of hatred."
Do not say, "This money is for yourself." Say, "This money is for you."
Do not say, "We shall meet you in the evening." Omit on.
Do not say, "Mary is some pianist." Say, "Mary is a good (talented, or an accomplished) pianist."

Words Often Misspelled

Word Study
"Use a word three times and it is yours." Let us increase our vocabulary by mastering one word each day. Words for this lesson:
HABITUATE; to accustom. "A mind long habituated to a certain set of objects insensibly becomes fond of seeing them."—Goldsmith.
FURTIVE; sly; secret; stealthy. "The man's furtive glances made her feel uncomfortable."
IMPERATIVENESS; quality of being commanding or authoritative. "There could be no question as to the imperativeness of his command."
PARADOX; that which in appearance is absurd, yet may be true in fact. "This was sometimes a paradox but now the times gives it proof."—Shakespeare.
INITIATIVE (noun); an introductory step. "I am willing to take the initiative in this matter."
ALLUREMENT; that which lures, entices, or attracts. "She has all the allurements of a coquette."

Plant More Crops to Keep Garden Working
The county home gardeners are now at the halfway point in the season. Back of them is the spring garden; ahead of them is the fall garden. Spinach lettuce peas, green onions, radishes, and some early cabbage have been harvested. In the back yard, more crops can be planted to keep the garden working.

ing, says County Agent R. C. Blaney. Plant carrots now for winter storage and beets for fall canning and winter storage, and sow turnips for winter storage. In the salads and greens group are Chinese cabbage, eggplant, and kale which will mature more quickly if seeded now and thinned rather than transplanted. Celery, also, can be planted. This is the last call for planting sweet corn, but snap beans may be planted until the middle of July.

Man's Disappearance Is Still Unsolved

boys searched about the quarry for nearly an hour before concluding that Fisher actually had drowned. The boys explained that Fisher and the others frequently swam in the old quarry and that one of their favorite games was playing "hide and seek." Fisher was particularly adept in hiding himself, they said. About 9:30 they gave up the hunt, walked down a steep road from the quarry to Fisher's car, got his car keys out of his clothing and drove to Bellefonte where Mr. Fisher's parents were notified. The Undine Fire Company departed for the scene in an emergency truck, and the Logans took a pump to the quarry, which is in Armor Gap, about a mile northeast of G. Edward Haupt's place near Pleasant View.

Working under lights provided by the Undines' emergency lighting system, firemen began grappling from a boat. When that was unsuccessful, a series of dynamite blasts was set off under water by Ralph Righlin, American Lime and Stone Company miner, in an effort to bring the body to the surface. The Alpha Fire Company of State College prepared to put its diving apparatus into use, but abandoned the project upon learning that water in the quarry hole ranged up to 40 feet in depth. The apparatus is good only to about 20 feet. Members of the Explorer Troop of Boy Scouts of Bellefonte built a fire and served sandwiches and coffee provided by the Penn Belle Hotel and the Diamond restaurant.

The hunt continued all day Friday, Saturday and Sunday, and a watch was maintained at nights by firemen. Boats for grappling operations were obtained from Hassell Lose, Bellefonte; from Hecla Park, and from Black Moshannon Park. As time passed and the body remained unrecovered, public interest heightened, and on Sunday a steady stream of people hiked along the rough roads and paths leading to and from the quarry. The Hope and Reliance Fire Companies of Phillipsburg were present to aid in grappling, and fire police were on duty all day keeping spectators back of danger lines placed at various points about the quarry.

Luther Smith, Bellefonte blacksmith, turned out dozens of sets of various sized grappling hooks in an effort to meet requests by firemen for hooks that would not snag on the old tree trunks, junked mine cars, automobiles, old wire, boulders, and other debris found in the bottom of the pond. Many sets of hooks were lost when they became hopelessly snagged. Friday night Robert McMullen and his brother Melvin, waterproofed an electric light, and Paul Emerick and Hassell Lose lowered it into the water from a boat. With the aid of the light the workers could see beneath the water for a depth of about 15 feet, revealing large rocks with crevices described as "large enough to put the boat into." But the light was ineffective at greater depths.

After firemen, working until late Sunday, had probed every part of the pond which is about 600 by 75 feet in size, without turning up any sign of the body, the Centre County Commissioners and Bellefonte Mayor Hardman P. Harris were asked whether public funds couldn't be used to pay for the cost of pumping out the quarry, or sending divers down to seek the body. After consideration reports regarding the police investigation of the matter, the County Commissioners declared that there wasn't sufficient basis at this time for the county to expend funds to drain the quarry or to conduct other means of search for the body. They indicated, however, that if more substantial evidence is forthcoming, some action might be taken.

It is reported that some persons interested in the matter got in touch with deep sea divers in Philadelphia and that an estimate of the cost of searching the pool was approximately $600. Divers in nearby cities are unable to handle the matter since their equipment permits work at a depth of 20 feet or less. Doubt that Fisher drowned in the hole by himself with vague whisperings Friday, and increased steadily until Tuesday when county officials quoted police as saying they had reason to believe that Fisher may not have drowned.

The official said police learned that when Fisher left his parental home to go swimming, he was wearing a pair of slippers. In his hand he carried a pair of heavy black shoes. A member of the family is said to have asked why he was taking two pairs of shoes, to which the youth is quoted as having replied that he intended to throw away the slippers. So far the heavy shoes have not been found. This factor was confirmed by members of the family. Police reported Tuesday that they had located a youth residing near Bellefonte, a close friend of Fisher's and a reliable person, who some weeks ago had a rather odd conversation with the missing man. Fisher was quoted as having told his friend: "Say, if you ever hear of me drowning, don't take it seriously. I'm tired of this kind of life."

Other factors which may indicate the man did not drown, but which can't be proved, are that a zipper cigarette case which Fisher always carried is missing; a flashlight which he usually carried in the glove compartment of his car is gone, and he had $19 and $30 which he is believed to have had in his pocket at the time of his disappearance. He had received a pay day before disappearing, and had not turned the money over to members of the family to be banked as was his usual procedure, according to reports from the household.

All of Fisher's clothing was found at the car, with the exception of the heavy shoes. All of his other wearing apparel is said to be in his clothes closet at home. Fisher was married last year to Marie Kerchner Hawk, of Aaronsburg, who is an expectant mother. His brother-in-law is Alvin Fisher, of Altoona, Ind., with the U. S. Army, at Donald, California. Mrs. Naomi Heaton, Mrs. Lynn Derstine, and Carl Fisher, of Bellefonte, were born at Salona on September 28, 1920, attended the Bellefonte high school, and four years later were employed of the Harman Dairy near Bellefonte, where he was in charge of the pasteurizing plant and also assisted with deliveries.

In commenting upon the disappearance, the youth's parents, although deeply agitated over the matter, told a representative of The Centre Democrat that they are confident their son will be located. They believe he drowned in the quarry, but do not deny that he might have disappeared otherwise. "I don't know what happened," Mr. Fisher said frankly. "Melvin always said he wouldn't be drafted," the father added. "He's told me a number of times that when his name came up for induction he'd enlist rather than be drafted," he concluded, pointing out that fear of military service couldn't have anything to do with the disappearance. Fisher and his wife lived with Mr. Fisher's parents on Bishop street. Mrs. Fisher said that her son spent much of his spare time in the area around the old quarries and knew the region "like a book." She said that she always felt the quarries were a dangerous swimming place and urged her son to swim elsewhere, but he contended he didn't like to swim in shallow water. Since he was such a strong swimmer, his parents overcame much of their fear of an accident, they said.

The parents, in explaining their view of why the body might not have been located, reported that the son was wearing nothing but a pair of latex shorts. Grappling hooks would slide off such material unless the prong hooked under the edge, they said. Firemen also admitted that the chances of obtaining a firm hold of the body in the deep water were slight. At the point where Fisher was last seen a section of the quarry side caved in some time ago, and boulders, ranging from the size of a kitchen table down to pebble size fell into the water. The boulders form deep underwater crevices and holes into which a body could lodge and which would prevent its rise to the surface. It was explained.

The quarry, until about 20 years ago when it was abandoned, was operated by the American Lime and Stone Company, with Robert Kline in charge during World War I. It is another quarry on another level which also was operated by the same company. Between the two quarries is a strip of stone about 40 feet wide which prevents the water in the upper quarry from draining into the lower one. Water in the quarry is not stagnant. It is cold and clear and apparently comes from underground springs. Since the level of the water remains at the same point much of the time, it is believed that the excess water drains off into other underground channels. There is no visible surface drainage from the pond. Quarrymen pointed out that from Salona west to Tyrone all limestone quarries are located in a line and on the same vein of limestone. They claim that from a point high over Salona, the quarries there at Jacksville, at Bellefonte, in Buffalo Run Valley and near Tyrone, all would fall along a single line.

Another Tree in Hall of Fame
The latest addition to the hall of fame for trees, which now numbers more than 300 of America's most famous trees, is the giant holly planted by Nellie Curtis, adopted daughter of George Washington, only a few weeks before her death in 1846. The tree stands on the Curtis estate at Audley, Va., 75 miles southeast of the capital. Washington has six of these hall of fame trees within the city limits.

Summer times taste so much better when eaten out of doors; it is so much more fun in the garden, on the porch, or in the shade of the old tree. Try it and I think you will agree with me.
Chicken, Ham Casserole
3 cups cold cut-up chicken
2 cups cold ham cut in cubes
2 cans condensed mushroom soup
1 cup cream
1 cup mushrooms
Make a sauce using the mushroom soup and cream. Add the chicken, ham and mushrooms. Put in a casserole and bake until brown and bubbling.
Fresh Lime Sherbet in Melon Ring
Juice of 6 large limes
1-2 teaspoon grated lime rind
1-3-4 cups water
1-3-4 cups sugar (or sugar substitute)
Green coloring
1-2 teaspoons gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water
2 egg whites
Pinch of salt
2 small cantaloupes
Squeeze the juice from the limes and strain, add rind and 1-2 cups sugar to the 1-3-4 cups of water. Stir until well mixed. Bring to a boil and add remaining sugar a little at a time. Put the chilled mixture in a bowl. Beat quickly with a rotary egg beater. Fold in the egg whites. Return to refrigerator, when half frozen, beat mixture in tray with a spoon. Freeze until firm. Cut chilled melons, slice in 1-1-2 inch rings, remove seeds. Fill center with sherbet.

How Milesburg 'Missed the Boat'

If it failed they had nothing to lose. Its success would bring everlasting prestige to Bellefonte. It was a bold piece of strategy, but worth trying. That night, as tradition goes, a group of citizens fashioned a large raft out of timbers and boards and floated it down the rock course of Spring Creek to Milesburg. There they secured a quantity of furniture and other articles with which to load their improvised "boat" and succeeded in navigating it up Spring Creek. This done, they hurried a messenger to Lancaster, where the legislature was in session. The messenger carried the announcement, with a properly attested affidavit that the first boat of the season, with freight aboard, had arrived in Bellefonte. The electrifying news had the desired effect. The lawmakers accepted it without question. The statement of facts seemed to indicate that Bellefonte and not Milesburg was at the head of navigation. The claim being quickly pressed by the parties in interest, it resulted in the passage of the Act which made Bellefonte the county seat.

FARM CALENDAR

Timely Reminders From The Pennsylvania State College School of Agriculture
Store Surplus Seed—Gardeners who are planning to hold over surplus seed or to save seed produced this year should be careful about where they store the seed if it is to grow next year. Vegetable specialists of the Pennsylvania State College say that a cool, even temperature with 50 per cent humidity is best.

Protect Barns—Lightning is one of the chief causes of barn fires. Agricultural engineers of the Pennsylvania State College report that a good lightning rod system is rated as 98 per cent effective in protection. The rods should be well grounded, and metal hay racks should be connected to the rods, usually at both ends.

Plant Cover Crop—A good cover crop this fall and winter will prevent washing of the soil and bleaching and loss of soluble plant food materials before next year's crop is planted. Extension agronomists of the Pennsylvania State College recommend use of rye grass sown at the last cultivation of corn and truck crops.

Use Good Tools—Farmers who are cutting and peeling pulpwood will increase their output if they use good tools properly cared for, say foresters of the Pennsylvania State College. Axes with sharp blades and saws which are well fitted will speed up the work.

Hens Like Comfort—Have the poultry house cool and comfortable to keep hens laying well during the summer, remind poultry specialists of the Pennsylvania State College. Remove windows in front and rear of the house to allow cross-ventilation.

Plant Rape Pasture—Dwarf Essex rape can be planted up to the middle of July to grow fall pasture for pigs, say livestock men at the Pennsylvania State College.
