350-PAGE HISTORY OF CENTRE HALL PUBLISHED

The most extensive and detailed contribution yet made to the history of folk lore of Centre Hall and vicinity appeared last week in the form of a 350-page paper-bound volume entitled "Centre Hall," and published by the Centre Hall Fire Company.

This volume was inspired several years ago when the fire company planned to print a pocket-edition containing its constitution and a history of Centre Hall's major fires.

At the close of the book the authors make their acknowledgements and add, in part, "By no means do we present this book with the thought of its being a masterpiece. Rather it is, may we say, a rambling story of events, persons, and places. Our chief regret is that we could not enlarge upon the scope of interesting material. To the files of the 'Centre Hall Reporter,' printed weekly in Centre Hall from January

1868 to February 1940, we are glad to give credit for the major portion of our copy. Your committee searched 14,432 pages from which to reproduce the "highlights" of the Old Home Town. (Signed) William W. Kerlin, C. William Booser and William B. Hanna."

The fire company figures prominently in the make-up of the book, including its constitution and membership. Centre Hall's major fires, and numerous photos of the fire fighting equipment and marching unit.

The actual historical data begins with a section on Centre county and continues by means of brief local and personal items through sections on "Centre Hall Becomes a Borough," "America Is At War" and similar captions up to Pearl Harbor.

Additional chapters near the end of the book include: "Organization and Development of the Centre Hall-Potter Band," the tragic death of George L. Goodhart; Penn's Cave; a page dedicated "In Loving Memory to Mrs. Lucy Henney," baseball from 1875 to the present; "Woman's Club," Centre Hall's churches, postmasters, and schools, and an eight-page section of poetry about local scene by Harvey W. Flunk.

The format of the book is attractive. Thirty-two plates were used to add interest and variety. These date from 1875 and include, among the older prints, two general scenes of Centre Hall and one of the "bank corner." More recent pictures include the fire company, high school band, baseball teams, churches, cemetery, schools, and eight pages of scenes in Centre Hall at the present time.

This book is a credit to the Centre Hall Fire Company and a testimony of painstaking work on the part of Mr. Kerlin and the committee.

Then Lucy marched with the delegation to the P. R. R. station where the group boarded a train for New Cumberland. Before getting on the train one of the Selectees, John Falls, approached Lucy, presented her with a cigar box and said: "Here's a little token of appreciation from the boys. They wanted to do something for you."

Lucy opened the box, counted a total of $7.06 in bills and change and found at the bottom of the box the following note:

"Presented to Lucinda Hall by the Jap Assassins of America, August 31, 1942. John Falls." Lucy greatly appreciated the gift.

That "Jap Assassins" business isn't bad, either.

175 Dollar Bounties? Claiming copperhead bounties of one dollar each on 175 snakes, Fred Rice, Hornbrook, Bradford county, presented something of a problem to state game officials at Harrisburg. All except two were baby snakes and four of the batch were sent to Harrisburg for further identification. The snakes were caught in a quarry near Quarry Glen.

The man who yells for hot weather in January and cold weather in July is consistent; he is always against the weather, whatever it is.
