

Modern Etiquette

1. When a hostess and three guests have sat down for a game of bridge, and a fifth friend drops in, what should the hostess do?

7. What is the difference between the formal and the informal tea?

Answers to Modern Etiquette

1. The hostess should either invite the guest to take her place, or suggest some other game such as hearts or rummy, in which five persons can play.

7. The decorations of the informal tea are not so elaborate and the refreshments are more simple. The hostess at an informal affair mingles with her guests and does not remain at the door to greet each newcomer.

Parchment Shades To clean soiled parchment shades, dip a wool cloth into cold water and wring it quite dry. Repeat this until all the soil has been wiped off; then wipe with a clean cloth dampened slightly with furniture polish, to bring back the luster.

The Stepladder To prevent the legs of the stepladder from slipping or scratching the wooden floors, bind the tips with squares of discarded cloth, held in place with stout cords or heavy rubber bands.

The Oven Allow the oven door to stay open after using the oven, and this will permit the warm air to evaporate without rusting the oven.

Transplanting Before transplanting a plant in a new flower pot, it is a good idea to soak the pot in water over night, and then the moisture needed to fill the pores of the new pot will not be drawn from the plant. When this is done, the transplanted plant rarely wilts, even for a day.

Lipstick Stains Some brands of lipstick are very difficult to remove from table napkins, handkerchiefs, etc. In this case, use lemon juice full strength on white wash fabrics to remove the stains. On colored materials, dilute the lemon juice.

A Handy Rack A towel rack screwed on the inside of the bedroom closet door is excellent for holding neckties, ribbons, and belts.

Bowed Legs If your child's legs are a bit bowed, buy him or her a tricycle a size too large. In trying to reach the pedals, the child will exercise the muscles of the legs and this will tend to make them grow straight. This has been known to be a very effective method in some serious cases.

The Canary If the canary refuses to take a bath in its bird tub, try sprinkling a little clean sand in the bottom of the tub. Often, the reason for the bird's refusal to enter the bath is its slippery bottom.

Finger Marks The efficient housewife will remove all finger marks from the paint every week while cleaning her woodwork. This requires only a few minutes' work and means clean, fresh-looking woodwork.

Bronze Ornaments Dust the bronze ornaments well, and then rub them with a cloth moistened with sweet oil. Polish with a soft chamois until they shine and all stains are removed.

HOME NURSING-Part One Sickness usually finds the average low income family wholly unprepared for it. They are not able to go to the hospital on account of the expense, unless they have special arrangements made by which they can enter free of charge, or else they incur a debt which proves to be a great burden.

Only the rich or the poor can afford hospitalization for any length of time. The former pay with the money with which to pay, while the latter are cared for free of charge. It is the middle class who can get along quite well so long as life moves along routinely, and the bread winners have work and are able to perform it.

However, when the gaunt figure of illness enters the door, they have no extra money with which to pay for trained nurses and hospital fees. Fortunately indeed is the family who are so situated that they can take care of sick members at home. Of course this requires intelligence and some training on the part of those upon whom devolves the duties of caring for the sick.

If the illness is contagious, the patient is isolated to protect the family and the community. Diseases are often carried in the secretions from the nose and throat as well as in the excretion from the wastes of the body.

For this reason the bed linens, clothing, basins, dishes, utensils and everything that comes into contact with the patient be kept separate. If possible they should be boiled before being used by other members of the family. When boiling is not practicable, disinfectants should be used.

After contact with the patient the attendant should thoroughly wash her hands before leaving the patient's room. The doctor will advise as to the disinfectants which are best.

One person should assume the responsibility for seeing that the schedule is carried out promptly and efficiently without annoyance to the patient. He should not be burdened with having to watch clocks to take his medicines at the proper time, unless he is well on the road to recovery, or is only indisposed and needs a little rest in bed. In those cases he can help himself with but little assistance from others.

Where the patient is to be cared for at home, the doctor will give instructions which must be carefully followed. Below is a rather typical order, which should be put on the chart and routinely followed. Other items are arranged to fit in as they come up:

Take pulse, temperature and respiration every four hours. Chart the daily routine.

Hour for medicines; Hours for treatments; Diet and hours for administering; Hours for morning care; Care of bed and room; Rest hours (chart times); Keep a written report on the patient. It will prove very helpful to the doctor who can only spend a few minutes daily in the sick room. Of course, you record in chronological order everything that you do for the patient.

A pleasant manner and slow steady voice is a great boon to the sick room. I have seen patients who showed every evidence of distaste and nervousness when the attendant or visitor spoke in loud, rasping, shrill voices. There are few things that irritate the nerves and are harder for sensitive people to bear than loud, shrill voices.

The attendant should have the bed raised to the height of the hospital beds in order to avoid so much stooping and bending. This can be accomplished by having four blocks of wood about 5 inches wide and 6 to 8 inches high with a hollow in the tops for the bed posts to rest in.

ANTIBODIES Some people go through life and die of old age without contracting contagious diseases. This is not because they are not exposed, for they run the same risks of getting typhoid fever, diphtheria, etc., as others who succumb to these germs when they come in contact with them.

"Why is this?" you ask. You see some folks are immune to certain diseases, say, for instance, typhoid. For example, those who travel in infested water and yet escaped the disease had something in their blood that protected them from the infection.

This something is called antibodies. They help police the body. They are good fighters, for when they apprehend the skulking typhoid germ sneaking around trying to destroy an individual, they pounce upon him and beat him to a pulp.

Some folks take diphtheria, or influenza, or what not, on exposure. Others do not, because they are protected by the antibodies of the disease in question.

Pasteur, the great scientist, found out how to create antibodies in the blood. He inoculated animals with weak solutions of germs. The animals got sick, but they recovered. He repeated the experiment and injected strong solutions, but the animals remained in health. This was because they had developed antibodies in their blood with which to fight the disease.

Before Pasteur made his experiments on dogs, there were many terrible cases of hydrophobia constantly occurring throughout the world.
