Let the Junior Commandos tell you. Those bombs and bullets and bayonets are right in your homes, they are gathering dust, cluttering up your attics, cellars, garages and barns. Partial Strike at Whiterock Quarries old employees be given special consideration—such as jobs they were physically able to perform.

The Union spokesman said one man was given more suitable work but that nothing was done for four or five others, and the strike resulted. He indicated that if the company should see fit to give these old employees other jobs, the strikers would return to work at once. No other complaints enter into the present situation, the official said.

The Union spokesman said none of the men on strike wanted to interfere in any way with production. Company and Union estimates revealed that there are from 40 to 60 men on strike. Both sides declared that the strike was peaceful until yesterday morning when, according to spokesmen, those going to work were called names and the road leading into the plant was blocked by picketers.

Company officials said one workman, who reported for duty earlier than the main body of the shift, was stoned by pickets, but that none of the stones hurled at him struck his mark. Sheriff Edward R. Miller was called to the scene about 7 a. m., and again later in the morning, but the situation seemed to be well in hand when he visited the plant, it was said.

Bigger Returns On Potato Crop

Pennsylvania's potato growers this year will reap an increase of $10,000,000 over last year's total valuation of $20,000,000 for the potato crop.

The Pennsylvania Potato Growers' Association, now holding a joint conference in Pittsburgh with the Pennsylvania Chain Store Council, also disclosed that the crop for 1942 will total approximately 29,000,000 bushels. Higher prevailing consumer prices account for the increase in valuation of this year's potato crop.

Members, in addition, were told that two new varieties of Pennsylvania-grown potatoes had been developed, one of which is considered the finest yet grown for potato chip manufacturers. Both varieties were perfected after experiments conducted over a period of six to nine years at the 278-acre Camp Potato Coudersport.

Listed as the five largest potato growing belts in the state were Lehigh-Lancaster, Somerset, Cambria, Erie-Crawford, Allegheny plateau, and Columbia-Luzerne. Each center produces more than 3,000,000 bushels of potatoes annually.

Prominent Woman To Speak at College

"Community Leadership to Meet War and Post-War Needs" will be the subject of Bonara Overstreet's talk when she addresses the North Central district meeting of the Pennsylvania Federation of Women's Clubs, to be held at the St. Paul's Methodist church, State College, on Wednesday, September 23. Mrs. Overstreet is nationally-known as a poet, author and psychologist.

At the present time Mrs. Overstreet is profoundly concerned with the American individual in war-time and will draw upon her years of direct contact with American people to bring to Pennsylvania women a message vitally associated with the war effort and the part women will be called upon to play in meeting this problem within their own communities.

Mrs. Overstreet, wife of Harry A. Overstreet, who is equally well-known as an educator and lecturer, is a co-director with her husband of the Leadership School at Town Hall, New York, and will be accompanied on her Pennsylvania tour by a representative of the Pennsylvania State College extension services. The College scene of past meetings of the Federation, is assisting the state organization again this year in preparing its program for the various district meetings.

Bellefonte Native Is Youngest Top-Kick

December. In May of '41, a first class specialist rating was added to the one chevron he already had. In November of '41, he broke into the non-com ranks as a corporal, and about three months later, in February of '42, he was promoted to sergeant. On the 15th of last May, the first "rocker" stripe was added, and it was now, Staff Sergeant Reiber. Nine days later, Reiber was appointed Top-Sergeant in recognition of his knowledge and training in office work, so necessary to the maintenance of the high efficiency in his organization.

To sum up briefly, the secret of Sergeant Reiber's success, is to say that he has the unconscious security and poise of the skilled artist; and so he meets everyone on equal terms, frank, friendly and ever courteous. Not that there is the slightest conceit about him, it is simply that he is well aware that he has mastered his job and so can face any situation with calm confidence.

It is not exaggeration, when it is said that his squadron is a monument to his thoroughness, skill and strength of character. His friends are legion throughout the field, for all know that he stands four-square.

First Sergeant Reiber's ambition is to earn a commission in the near future; and so plans upon filing an application for aviation cadet.

Good luck—Sergeant Reiber—Keep 'em Flying.

Palatial Schwab Estate Goes On Public Auction Block October 3

The colorful life of the late Charles M. Schwab and his palatial estate, "Immergrun," which he built at Loretto, was brought to light today with the disclosure that the 940-acre estate will go on the auction block on October 3rd at a public sale.

Anyone who wants to buy a "home-ey-coosey" little place consisting of several good sized farms, several dozen houses and buildings in addition to the three-story mansion with its 44 rooms, should attend the auction on Saturday afternoon, 2:30 o'clock, on October 3. The estate may be purchased in one piece, or falling a buyer, it will be divided into 31 parcels and sold separately.

There is a fascinating story of how Charles Schwab came to select this particular location to build his estate. It was said that he was brought to Loretto in 1865, when he was but three years old, and that the beautiful countryside was something he remembered through the years until he created his "Immergrun" estate about forty years ago.

No Central Pennsylvania who has ever passed by the huge estate or visited the gardens will ever forget the tale of "The house over the trees." Two years before the turn of the century, the steel magnate built a summer home on the very spot where the manor house now stands. In 1914, in order to save destruction of a single tree, the house was raised over the tops of the huge trees and moved to its new location to make room for the erection of the more pretentious dwelling, where Mr. and Mrs. Schwab lived for many years.

Farming on the Schwab estate was done in a scientific manner and the capitalist delighted in serving his famous sausage and other farm products in his New York home. The fruits and vegetables grown in the orchards and gardens were Mr. Schwab's pride and delight. A special kitchen was installed where great quantities of jellies and preserves were made under her personal supervision.

The placing of "Immergrun" on the auction block would have been more than a passing interest even in the days when large estates were being disposed of for what they would bring. Schwab built his home in a grand manner with the intention that it be handed down intact from generation to generation.

Schwab, who became one of the

Dunlap Street Graded, Widened, Resurfaced

Dunlap street, parallel to the Gamble Mill Race and extending from High to Lamb streets, during the past week was graded, widened and resurfaced with odd-sized stone obtained from the Martin Miller quarries near Jacksonville. The repairs were made by Bellefonte Borough workmen.

Dunlap street long has been one of the most poorly maintained in town. Large buses and heavy trucks serving the Titan Metal Plant No. 2, regularly use the street.

Last week's improvements were the most extensive ever accorded that street and it is believed that the stone base, well rolled, will be much easier to maintain than the former cinder base.

Mr. Davis, who will preach the sermon, and Seminaryman Neil I. Gray, son of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Gray, who will read the Epistle.
