

Echoes From the Past

Fifty Years Ago

Rudolph Schad has opened a plumbing establishment at Hastings. The attendance at the Grange picnic last week was not as large as last year.

On last Sunday morning all the ministers of Bellefonte delivered sermons upon the observance of the Sabbath. Most of them strongly opposed the sale of Sunday newspapers.

Mr. Will Reitmeyer, of Lewisburg, who is well known throughout Centre county, has been engaged permanently to play the cornet in the Stopper & Plisk orchestra of Williamsport.

Mr. H. C. Brew has sold his handsome residence in Tyrone and expects to remove with his family to Bellefonte early in October. On Tuesday morning Mr. E. Barry, who had been ill for some time, died at 10:30. The funeral will occur on Saturday. Mrs. George L. Potter has been ill for a number of weeks at Snow Shoe and could not return to her home, this place.

The Phillipsburgers are of the opinion that the Pennsylvania Railroad will soon erect a new passenger station at that place. The present building is a bad one and should be torn away for something better.

Guy Mattern, who has charge of a supply department at Carnegie's Homestead steel mills since the strike, came home to attend the Grange picnic. He says a large number of Centre county men obtained positions there.

The remains of a little child of Mr. and Mrs. Cal. Brachbill that died at their home in Hughesville on Saturday, were buried in Bellefonte on Monday for burial. The Lutheran church at this place is under roof and the spires are being completed. The building will make a fine appearance when completed.

Dr. Kiebler, of Bellefonte, dentist, will visit Howard on the first and third Monday of each month to meet such as may desire treatment.

Mrs. Nancy Barger, of Poland, Centre county, was one hundred years old last Saturday. The old lady is in excellent health and her centennial was celebrated by all her relatives. The Milesburg G. A. R. post arranged to pay her a visit and take part in the birthday celebration, her husband having been a soldier in the late war. Mrs. Barger is a native of Washington and her death and her centennial occasion of every presidential contest since 1801. She was present at the first two executions in Centre county, those of "Negro Dan" and the famous "Monks." Notwithstanding her having reached the century mark she is as spry as most women of fifty, managing her farm and doing most of her own housework. Her youngest child is 58 years of age. The exercises were held out of doors and H. B. Shaeffer, the photographer, took several good views of the gathering. Col. Austin Curtin, in behalf of the post, then made an address in which he reviewed some of the prominent periods of her life. She was a mere child at the time Washington died. Her husband was enrolled and participated in the War of 1812 and three sons were enlisted in the late rebellion. A handsome chair, the gift of Potter Post, was then presented Mrs. Barger by the speaker.

Twenty Years Ago

Hilda, aged 11, twin daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Gaul of near Centre Hall, suffered a fractured arm in a fall while playing.

Martha Hugg, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Toner A. Hugg, of Milesburg, had three unusual playmates. When a fox which was caught robbing a chicken coop at Milesburg was shot, three young foxes were left motherless, and they were adopted by the little girl who had taught them a number of tricks.

Stray dogs killed seven sheep and three pigs owned by Robert Gilmore, at Salona. R. B. Tyson, of Longton, lost six cows as the result of turning them into a field of sweet corn. The animals overate and the corn proved poisonous to them, according to a report by Dr. Kirk, Jersey Shore veterinarian, who performed an autopsy on one of the animals.

Harold Zimmerman, a brakeman on the Bellefonte Central Railroad, was painfully injured while shifting cars at the American Lime and Stone plant, No. 23. He was caught between a cement wall and a moving car. The space between them being wide enough for his body. As a result he suffered a fracture of the right collar bone and numerous cuts and bruises and was undergoing treatment at the Bellefonte Hospital.

Mrs. H. J. Robb, formerly Miss Alma Fletcher, daughter of Squire A. A. Fletcher of Howard, was painfully burned at her home in Butler when a gasoline stove exploded. Mrs. Robb was attempting to light the stove when a gust of wind blew out the match. When she struck the second match, gas which had accumulated in the stove exploded, burning her about the face, neck and hands. Her husband, a druggist, applied first aid. Mrs. Robb formerly taught in the Howard schools.

Bossard DeHaas, one of the employees of the Electric Supply Company, and a friend, a Mr. Henig, were spending a vacation in Clarksville, West Virginia. George T. Bush delivered an address at a Freshman smoker held at the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity in State College, speaking on incidents which happened on his trip around the world. Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Shultz of Bellefonte, were rejoicing over the birth of a son, born in the Bellefonte Hospital. Miss Grace Mitchell entertained a number of friends at a house-warming at her newly-constructed bungalow at the rear of the John P. Lyon residence on West Curtin street. Paul Miller, an employee of the Electric Supply Co., and Miss Esther McDowell, of Axemann, were united in marriage at Egerstown, Md.

The D. R. Foreman family of North Spring street, motored to Frederick, Md., where Miss Lois Foreman entered Hood College as a first-year student.

Frank Dasher, farmer near Pottery Mills, was loading hay on a wagon when he made a misstep and fell from the wagon, landing in such a manner that one of the lines of a hay fork penetrated his left arm between the wrist and elbow. The line was thrust its full length through the arm.

Daniel McGinley, aged 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. McGinley, of Bellefonte, suffered a severe injury to his right knee while playing in the debris at the site of the old Bellefonte laundry. He was taken to the office of a physician where it was found that an artery had been cut and that he had lost much blood. The youth was taken to the Bellefonte Hospital for treatment.

Martha Wallace, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Wallace, of State College, was drawing a pitcher of water from a faucet when she was somewhat horrified to see a small snake slip from the pipe into the pitcher. Examination revealed that the snake, alive and well, was about nine inches in length and was of a brownish color, resembling a copperhead. The snake was placed in a jar and was put on exhibition as a curio.

An event which occurs only once a year in State College—the bursting into bloom of a night-blooming cereus, occurred last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Jodon, at the end of West College avenue, State College. Seven of the plant's blossoms bloomed almost simultaneously. The 17 flowers were present last year, but all did not bloom at once.

FARM CALENDAR

Timely Reminders From The Pennsylvania State College School of Agriculture

Fog Puts Out Fire—Effectiveness of water fog in fire fighting was demonstrated at the recent state-wide Fire School at the Pennsylvania State College. Farmers who have power spray machines can readily use an orchard gun to put a fog over a fire. The water needed is about one-tenth that of a solid stream and the mist generally is more effective. This is important in the case of inadequate reserves.

Examine Stored Grain—Farmers should examine stored grain at short intervals this month and next. Immediate fumigation will be needed if the grain shows signs of heating or insects are present, say entomologists of the Pennsylvania State College. A circular on the subject may be obtained from your county extension agent.

Keep Milk Flowing—Many cows drop in milk production and in flesh during the fall months, dairy specialists of the Pennsylvania State College point out. They urge that dry heifers be fed daily, that dry cows be fed as soon as the silo is filled, and that grain be fed in proportion to the amount of milk each cow gives.

Fertilize the Lawn—Fall is the best time to fertilize the lawn and right now is the best time of all. Agronomists of the Pennsylvania State College say that nitrogen is hard to get, but phosphate and potash can be used with cottonseed or soybean meal.

Prevent Wheat Damage—To avoid infestation by the Hessian fly, wheat should be sown after danger from the fly is past. Extension entomologists of the Pennsylvania State College say that you can get fly-free dates from your county agricultural agent.

Collect Rubber Scrap—A Millin county 4-H girls' club set a goal of 1,000 pounds of scrap rubber and collected 1,175 pounds.

Sunday School Lesson

JOSEPH: AN EXAMPLE OF FORGIVENESS

International Sunday School Lesson for September 27, 1942.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving each other, even as God also in Christ forgave you." —Ephesians 4:32.

(Lesson Text: Genesis 45: 1-15; 47: 11, 12.)

The years of famine brought about a reunion of Joseph and his family. No story could be more dramatic. Driven by need of food, all of Joseph's brothers, save Benjamin, appear before him to buy corn. Joseph, recognizing them, accuses them of being spies in order to question them thoroughly, especially desiring to find out if his young brother, Benjamin, and his father, Jacob, were still alive. His desire to see his brother caused him to demand that he be brought down, when they came to buy more corn. All of the brothers, save one, Simeon, return to old Jacob.

When hunger presses again, they persuade the old patriarch to let Benjamin go back into Egypt with them. Reuben offered his own sons as sureties for Benjamin's safekeeping and Judah likewise pledges himself for his safe return.

At length, they stand before the powerful and, to them as yet unknown Joseph. Joseph practices a shrewd strategy to test their presence. He wants to ascertain whether or not they could make any sacrifices to rescue Benjamin from threatened evil, or if they would callously abandon him as, in previous years, they had been heedless to Joseph's fate.

The test proved happily the fidelity of the brothers, for when Benjamin was arrested for theft of the egyptian, every one came back with him to Egypt. Judah, in particular, made an impassioned appeal that he might be allowed to enter into slavery instead of the younger Benjamin, in a speech which moved Joseph greatly.

Overcome by emotion, Joseph desisted from making himself known to his brethren. Ordering his Egyptian servants from the room, he gave way to his emotions and wept loudly, crying, "I am Joseph." In the very next breath, Joseph asked a question which he had asked several times before. "Doth my father yet live?"

Jacob dwelt for seventeen years in Goshen, where he died after Joseph had given his word that his bones would be taken back to Canaan for burial in the cave of Machpelah. A magnificent procession bore his body to its last resting place in Canaan, beside Abraham and Sarah, Isaac and Rebekah and Leah.

After their father's death, the brothers were fearful lest Joseph should decide to punish them for their evil deeds. However, this was not in Joseph's thoughts. He remained as an elder brother to them, dying at the age of one hundred and ten. His body was embalmed and put in a coffin, to await its return to Canaan, for he had made his brothers promise that they would take it with them when they returned to dwell in the Promised Land. This pledge was fulfilled, as recorded in Exodus.

NEWS IN THE WORLD OF RELIGION

Laymen are to occupy many hundreds of Protestant pulpits throughout America on Sunday, November 8, to bring to the attention of congregations the fact that men generally are thinking this time of the winning of the peace as an integral part of winning the war.

This movement, which has as its basis the application of Christian principles to all of life, is sponsored by the newly-organized "Laymen's Movement for a Christian World," of which Wesleyman C. Huckabee, 156 Fifth Ave., New York City, is secretary. According to Dr. Huckabee, the Sunday nearest Armistice Day has been selected for "Laymen's Sunday" because of the dramatic fact that peace of the first World War was a "failure because of our unwillingness to dedicate our lives to the building of peace in a way as fanatical as we fought the war."

"We Americans are great believers in education, but we sometimes forget that there can be education in evil as well as education in the good things of life," President Roosevelt states in a letter to General Secretary Roy G. Ross, of the International Council of Religious Education, Chicago. "This is self-evident now: in the great struggle in which we are engaged our enemies are not the deluded peoples of the earth, but the false and evil standards which have deluded them. We are at war with the forces of evil abroad, and this does not remove the responsibility of eternal vigilance at home. The young must be taught, and they must be taught truly if the spring-waters of democracy are to be kept untaunted."

Bishop W. Y. Chen, noted Chinese leader recently elected to the episcopacy by the Methodist church in China, is in the process of organizing a National Christian Council for "free" or "unoccupied" China. This will include practically all Protestant churches and missions in West China. Bishop Chen was formerly secretary of the National Christian Council of China with headquarters at Shanghai, which has not been possible for that body to function in Japanese-controlled territory. Dr. Robert E. Brown, missionary in Chengtu, where he is organizing a medical center and hospital for research work by the four medical colleges of that city, is to be medical secretary for the new council, while in a unit the work carried on by 268 mission hospitals and 500 American doctors and nurses before the outbreak of the war.

"The establishment of peace in the new world after the war demands, in the name of humanity, that the nations make up their minds to contribute something of their own sovereignty, in order that there may arise in the world tomorrow a supra-national society, armed with the necessary powers to make it, in the nucleus of the universal community, the supreme court of last appeal in international disputes." This is the core of the message recently brought to North America by the Most Rev. Miguel de Andres, auxiliary bishop of Buenos Aires, Argentina. He added: "The love which each one of us has for himself must never be indulged to the detriment of that which is due
