STORED VEGETABLES AID TO GOOD WINTER MEALS Storing vegetables is one of the easiest ways of saving surplus garden products and supplying plenty of vegetables for winter meals. To help provide a leafy or green vegetable three or four times a week, a farm family or five might store 150 pounds or 50 heads of cabbage, 50 stalks of celery, and 25 kale plants, says Miss Helen S. Butler, home economics extension representative of Centre County. These foods can be used along with the canned greens so that the family will not tire of either one. Two bushel of both beets and carrots, a half bushel of rutabagas and turnips, and a half bushel of parsnips for a family of five will help add variety to the vegetables served each day. In addition, this family also may store 25 to 35 winter squash and pumpkins, 25 bushel of potatoes, and 25 pounds of dried beans and peas. The beans and peas will help provide protein for muscle building and repairing when meat rationing starts. Proper methods for storing vegetables are given in leaflet 84. Copies may be obtained from the Agricultural Extension Office in Bellefonte. Family Gathering A family gathering was held Sept. 29th, at the George Stover cabin along Penns Creek in Union county. THE CORN YOU BUY

With hybrid corn, the important thing is NOT where the seed was grown, but how it performs where you plant it. The best way to compare varieties and decide which one suits you the best is to see them growing side by side in a soil and climate similar to yours. That's why DeKalb has more than 3300 proving grounds or demonstration fields, scattered throughout the corn-growing areas. Another reason why you should visit your DeKalb proving ground is to keep acquainted with the newest varieties that DeKalb is continually perfecting. Be sure to visit the DeKalb proving ground in your neighborhood. Your DeKalb dealer will be glad to show you the varieties that you are interested in and what they will do for you on YOUR FARM. COUNTY RESIDENTS GET TIRE AND TUBE PERMITS When the air line on the school bus which Grant Clyde of Ridgway, was driving at Ridgway, broke as he was traveling down a steep hill, he probably saved some lives by good judgment. He had discharged his load of children and started down the hill, when the accident happened, making the brake inoperative. Knowing that at the foot of the hill traffic was heavy on the cross street, he guided the bus between two trees, which held it from further progress. He was unhurt, and the bus was not badly damaged. A telephone pole which the bus struck was broken off at the base. Silver For Industry All "free" silver about five million ounces, held by the Treasury, has been made available to war industry. The silver is that held in excess of currency requirements. Already about 1,350,000,000 ounces of silver belonging to the Treasury has been earmarked, or is in use on loan as an electricity conductor in war plants. After the war, it will be returned to the Treasury.
