Salty Soup

If too much salt has been added to the soup, cut some slices of potatoes and place in the boiling soup for a few minutes. If the soup is still too salty, remove these potatoes and add some more. Continue this treatment until the potatoes have absorbed the excess salt. This method of saving the soup is not a wasteful one, as the potatoes may be used later in some other way.

A Secure Package

Wet the string when tying a package for parcel post. It is easier to make a good knot, and when the string dries it shrinks, and the package is more securely tied.

Stained China

A mixture of salt and bicarbonate of soda will remove all tea and coffee stains from china cups.

Ironing Board Cover

Often those smudges that appear mysteriously on freshly-laundered clothes can be traced to an ironing board cover that is not altogether clean. It is wise to have several unbleached muslin covers that can be laundered and changed for each batch of ironing.

Paraffin

Avoid heating paraffin to the smoking stage, as it is then very liable to separate from the sides of the jelly tumblers. Allow it to melt slowly until you have sufficient to cover the preserves.

Amber Beads

Amber beads and ornaments can be cleaned by washing them in milk and rubbing with a clean cloth.

Fresh Ham

A good test for the freshness of ham is to run a clean knife into it right close to the center knuckle. If the knife comes out sweet and odorless, the ham is good; but if it comes out smeary and has a strong odor, the ham is not fit for eating.

Care of Veils

The filmy veils so popular on hats these days can be kept in good condition by pressing them gently with a warm iron. As soon as any tiny tears or holes appear, sew them up with silk thread and a fine needle—or merely tie the hole together.

Cigarette Stains

Cigarette stains on the fingers can be removed with some powdered pumice mixed with a little peroxide. Follow this by a good wash in soap and water.

Milky Pan

Often the saucepan in which has been boiled some milk proves difficult to clean. This can be remedied if, after the milk has been poured out, the pan is covered immediately with a lid before the steam escapes. Allow the pan to cool and then fill with cold water. It will wash out easily.

YOUR HEALTH

The back bears the brunt of the burden. Low back pain in industrial workers is costly.

In Pennsylvania, in 1940, back ailments caused the loss of 208,311 working days in industry.

Muscular strain and sprained joints are a frequent cause of back pain.

A strain is the result of a force applied to ligaments surrounding a joint.

A common back condition is known as sacro-iliac sub-luxation, which is painful slipping of the sacro-iliac joint.

This occurs as a result of some sudden act of lifting while one leg is straight and the other slips.

Sometimes it occurs when suddenly rising from a stooped position in which the back is quickly twisted.

Poor posture is one of the most common causes of chronic back-ache.

Good posture is not a national attribute even in young people.

In industrial workers, advancing age, hard work, overweight, produce a chronic strain usually affecting the lower back.

Most lay persons are of the belief that a pain in the back must be due to injury.

Arthritis causes a lot of back pain, but is not caused by injury alone.

One of the most frequent types of back pain is a vague pain lasting for years to be followed by complete disability resulting from a comparatively minor injury.

This type of pain comes generally in middle age after a life of hard work.

Back pain in industry calls for careful medical attention.

HOME NURSING—PART TWO

No sick person is normal. He is often impatient, fretful and irritable. The room should be kept quiet, especially during his rest hours. People ought not to be indiscriminately let into the room, nor should they be allowed to remain for long periods of time. Above all the nurse should have tact and common sense. She must have sufficient judgment to know whether certain people should be admitted at all or not, and how long to permit them to remain.

On the other hand the patient ought to tell the nurse his needs. I have known patients who were so afraid of giving the nurse trouble that they would not ask for a cooling drink for fear of causing extra trouble. Patients who are like that should be made to realize that they not only add to their own discomfort but are very trying to their attendant who has never qualified as expert mind readers.

The nurse should not chatter nor indulge in idle gossip. No one who is an incessant talker can make a desirable nurse. A constant stream of talk is very wearying to a well person and is positive torture to one who is sick and nervous.

If an emergency arises, the nurse should always keep her head or at least conceal her perturbation and anxiety from the patient.

A gloomy room with little light or sunshine is depressing. Care should be exercised in regard to this. If possible put the ill one in a cheery pleasant room that has at least two or three windows in it that can be opened letting in air and sunshine.

TIME TO CHECK HOMES FOR ALL FIRE HAZARDS

As their part in National Fire Prevention Week, October 4 to 10, Centre County home-makers can check their homes for fire hazards and remove them.

Miss Helen S. Butler, home economist, district representative, suggests checking the following:

- 1. Be sure the stove or furnace is set away from woodwork at least three feet. If this cannot be done cover the wall with fire proof wall-board.
2. Have the stove or furnace set on a foundation that will not burn.
3. Put an effective screen before open fires to prevent sparks or bits of wood snapping onto a wood floor or a floor covering.
4. Clean the soot from the chimney and stovepipe.
5. Check flues and chimneys for cracks and leaks. Leaks are unsafe and waste fuel.
6. Clean the attic, cellar and closets. Take out old papers, clothes, partly used paints, and other articles that have collected over a period of time.
7. See that electric wiring meets the requirements of the National Electric Code.

Among other things for home-makers to do every day are: keep matches in tin containers and out of reach of children; never throw supposedly dead matches into wastebaskets, dried grasses, or onto wood floors; do not overload electric wire circuits and never substitute a coin for a fuse; use oil stoves and oil lamps carefully—move them as little as possible when they are lighted and be sure they rest on firm, steady foundations.

Using kerosene to start a fire, or dry cleaning clothes in gasoline, benzine, or naphtha is the cause of many fires and fatal accidents.
