Here's one way to get all the coffee you wantjoin the Navy.

It might not be a bad idea, in 1943, to plant vegetables instead of flowers.

We can be thankful this year beacuse no bombs are falling upon American cities.

We hope there will be some tires for civilian use pretty soon-our tires are getting tired.

Americans are too extravagant. Here they are with an income tax for 1943 that few of them can ing of Ambassador Grew, that the Japs will fight to the last man, there is little reason to expect major Japanese opposition after the sinews of war, which Japan carefully husbanded before Pearl Harbor, have been expended.

1 1 * ....

In fact, it is not exactly foolish to expect a Japanese collapse. Certainly, this would follow deple-tion of Jap shipping, a defeat of the Jap navy and irreparable losses in air power. Manpower alone cannot sustain a prolonged guerilla warfare when an island empire is cut off and its people starving.

It is not safe to draw too many conclusions from events upon a single battlefield, but the steady bombing of Japanese ships, the successes of our submarines and the effective use of navy dive-bombers and torpedo planes against Jap warships are exacting a heavy toll which is, it appears, already having some effect upon Japanese war plans.

While we favor a confidence, as we face the war, there must not be any over-confidence. Despite favorable indications of our coming victory the nation must redouble its efforts in order to be ready for whatever happens. If necessary, we must fight to the last man and it is impossible to stage such a desperate struggle, if needs be, without adequate preparation for such a contest.

The people on the home front have a great role to play in the successful prosecution of the war. We must speedily respond to appeals for scrap, willingly surrender luxuries and loyally realign our lives in order to make the nation powerful in battle. There must be less waste where, in a sense, the war must be fought and won.

MACARTHUR AND THE SOLOMONS

There has been much loose talk about the campaign in the Solomon Islands, with some newspaper correspondents going so far as to suggest that the division of the South Pacific ocean into war zones was done to prevent Gen. MacArthur from commanding the proceedings

The American General has denied the story. The United States News points out that the area was divided in Washington, without reference to the President, and that "it was concurred in by Gen, Mac-Arthur.

This ought to dispose of the particular yarn. There is another one, going around the circle, to the effect that there is not the proper cooperation between the Naval command and Gen. MacArthur, that the attack upon Guadalcanal was launched as a "heavy show" and that our soldiers were left out of the campaign in order that the Navy might grab the glory

What about this one? Well, the United News reports that there was consideration of a land offensive, from Australia aimed at New Guinea and New Britain, but that lack of shipping and the long supply line involved caused the high command to veto the plan. It adds that "the situation was explained and General MacArthur concurred when the action was taken.'

The Solomon Islands operation was a naval operation and had to be under command of a naval officer. The plan was for the Marines to seize the area, after which the Army would move in. There has been delay in moving an adequate number of soldiers because of the lack of adequate sea control but "there is closest cooperation between General MacArthur's air forces and naval air forces."

Incidentally, the attack upon Guadalcanal was launched upon the decision of Admiral Leahy. Admiral King and Gen. Marshall and the United News says the "Army pressed harder than did the Navy for this particular operation."

1943 SHOULD PRODUCE DECISION

From the Solomons there come unmistakably some intimations that persistent attacks upon Japanese shipping have depleted the enemy merchant marine. The recent failure of the Japs to reinforce New Guinea adds weight to the belief that American operations around the Solomons have seriously weakened Japanese sea power. These conclusions may not be correct, we admit, because it is impossible to know the exact truth of the war strength of the contending nations. Nevertheless, they are suggested by the trend of war events and represent fair inferences from what has occurred. Until there is conclusive evidence to the contrary, we may assume that they indicate actual conditions. It could be possible that Japanese weakness in the South Pacific are due to preparations for offensives in other areas, possibly India or Siberia, Nevertheless, we doubt it. It could be that German failure to send air forces to Gen. Rommel, or to vigorously combat aerial raids in western Europe. is due to strategic considerations. Again, we doubt it. People not on the inside of the high councils that determine the facts upon which decisions must be made can only draw legitimate conclusions from evidence that is published to the world. They can study the battlefields and consider developments that while known do not show up in ground gains. Upon these factors there is solid foundation for a quiet confidence that the Axis nations are slipping and that the year 1943 will witness triumphs for the United Nations.

THE WAR, AS WE SEE IT

There is a growing realization that the United States is in a war of growing proportions. It is now taken for granted that we will experience heavy loss of life and material as the struggle develops. Few people now cling to the idea that our enormous resources will tip the scales without participation in the fighting on a scale that will dwarf any previous foreign war in which the nation has been engaged.

We are not wise enough to attempt to estimate how long the war will last. Every American can study the news accounts that flow from the battlefields and judge what they mean. A long war is a possibility but, despite all words of caution, a short war is likewise possible.

Just at this time the general war outlook, all over the world, including Russia, Africa and the South Pacific, is considered favorable. The German army is suffering heavy losses in its fight with the Red army, the situation in Africa is improving and the outlook in the Far East is that Japanese shipping is severely strained. The aerial attacks from Great Britain and the enormous production of the United States are factors to be weighed in appraising the war situation.

There is reason to believe that a German collapse is possible in 1943 and despite the stern warnmund Blanchard.

WHY GERMAN SABOTEURS CAME

Some American citizens are wondering why the German saboteurs were landed on the coasts of the United States and what they expected to accomplish.

The answer comes from one of them, testifying for the government in the trial of certain Americans for treason. They are relatives of one of the saboteurs already executed

This man. Ernst Peter Burger, says that destruction of key American aluminum plants was one of their main objectives, together with the crippling of trunk railroads connecting the smelting plants with rolling mills and finishing plants.

Burger says that the saboteurs were especially trained for their work, attending a secret sabotage school near Brandenburg, where they practiced blowing up railroad lines. Moreover, they were given a chance to study a building modelled after American warehouses.
