H. G. ROGERS.

College Man, War

I think someone should write a poem I wonder if I could Draw the people's attention To the product we call wood.

WOOD

It is one of the oldest products That we are taught, I do believe, It was placed in the Garden of Eden | kle family. long with Adam and Eve. The trees kept multiplying fast

And it was right they should: For what in this world would we If it wouldn't have been for wood.

What would have become of Noah When on the ocean he was to embark.

If it hadn't been for Shittim wood From which to build the Ark. On the wooden Ark he sailed the ocean, It seemes he had no fear And through his belief and courage

That's how you find us here. It seems the whole world was flooded But Noah reached his goal.

And some of the flooded trees de cayed And formed our wonderful coal.

Now, don't give coal too much praise I really do not think you should: For you will find the coal we have

Comes from our precious wood. Long years it seems they had to wait better taken care of especially in Leroy F. Confer_

To warm the chilly breeze. Some one invented the great saw-

But they were small in number, Then they began cutting down the trees

And manufactured lumber. Today you'll find thousands of mills In North, East, South and West; They are wasting entirely too much.

They only take the best. Some are cut into great thick planks And others in large square sticks, And then they are whittled down

Into matches and tooth picks. For them they should use the smaller stuff,

What is left in the woods to decav. They say it takes too much work. It really does not pay.

You see from wood our furniture is made. That shines in our homes so bright And also this good paper

On which this poem I do write Then we have plenty of chemical plants

That quite often get a call. For most all kinds of chemicals Especially denatured alcohol.

So you see man can make most everything But take this tip from me: If he has the ready material, But it takes God to make a tree.

And as we travel along through life Let all of us be good
