Fire Damages Three Lock Haven Stores

Several thousand dollars damage was caused by a fire in the central business district of Lock Haven Monday night which gutted one building and ruined part of the interior of two adjacent structures.

Apparently starting from an over-heated flue in the basement of the Elsemann jewelry store, the fire spread quickly into the first floor of the building, destroying a quantity of merchandise. The owner was able to save some material, but reported that much newly-purchased Christmas stock was lost.

The three Lock Haven fire companies responded and had the flames under control in a short time. Spread of the flames was rapid, however, because of a tin ceiling in the Elsemann store which had to be torn down by the firemen.

Damage to the Fromm Dry Cleaning establishment and the E. L. Stein Furniture store was caused mainly from smoke and water. Investigation disclosed.

Total loss was not announced but the unofficial estimate placed it at approximately $5,000.

Explorers become acclimated to the rigorous climate of the Antarctic, and in so doing develop a number of definite changes in their physiological processes, according to Dr. Ernest E. Lockhart, who served as physiologist with the U. S. Antarctic Expedition. Heart pressure, he says, increases from 25 to 35 per cent when a sudden change in temperature is the stimulus and both breathing rate and rate of heart-beat decrease somewhat.

YOUR HEALTH

After one year of war, the American people are healthier than ever before.

It is nothing less than startling to compare our health today with what it was during the first year of the last war.

Influenza and pneumonia caused great havoc during the last war. This year, the death rate for these two diseases was 33.9 per 100,000 of population—about one-quarter of the rate in 1917.

Influenza and pneumonia have responded remarkably to the use of serum and sulfa drugs.

For tuberculosis the record is excellent. Today's minimum rate of 42.1 per 100,000 is less than one-quarter of the death rate for tuberculosis during the last war.

Incidentally, the death rate from tuberculosis has declined more in the past year than in any of the years immediately preceding.

The decline is especially gratifying in the face of warnings that during the critical war years tuberculosis would likely increase.

We have not, as yet, suffered any food shortage and the housing shortage has been confined to defense areas.

Other conditions which were expected to be adversely affected by the war are the four main communicable diseases of childhood.

But scarlet fever, whooping cough and diphtheria continue to record minimum death rates.

Together with measles, they account for less than 3 deaths for 100,000, while during the first World War they caused 18 times this number of deaths.

Accidents alone show an upward trend. In view of the fact that automobile fatalities are down 15 per cent and home accidents are up but a little, the increase has occurred largely in industrial accidents and in accidents in public places.

Inexperience and relaxation in safety precautions due to pressure of production are blamed for increase of accidents.

All in all, a highly favorable health record has been chalked up during our first year of the present war.
