State Law Forbids Sale of Horsemeat

Change of Law Necessary To Allow Meat To Be Sold Here

Under present circumstances there seems little likelihood that Pennsylvania will get a chance to eat horse meat.

Taking cognizance of reports from Boston that horse meat is being sought there by housewives, Secretary of Agriculture John H. Light said that state law expressly forbids the sale of horse meat for human consumption.

Under a 1915 act, amended in 1930, the meat of horses (and mules) is termed "unfit for food." The law was enacted, it was stated, to prevent "non-descript butchers from selling the meat." Fines and imprisonment face violators.

A Department of Agriculture spokesman asserted that the horse meat which might be sold would be from "old broken-down horses, fit only for dog food, because the younger and better horses are more valuable to the farmer."

Food connoisseurs in the Department of Agriculture seemed agreed, however, that there was little difference between a thick juicy horse steak garnished with onions and a like-dimensioned beef steak attired with the same ingredient.

But unless the law is changed, which seems highly unlikely, there'll be no horse meat legally sold in Pennsylvania for dinner tables.

Anyways, says the Department of Agriculture, there's a shortage of horses in Pennsylvania!

Altoona Woman Takes Own Life

Leaves Note to Husband, Expressing Sorrow For Rash Act

Suffering from ill health for some time, Mrs. Margaret Beatrice Krugh, 30, of East Logan avenue, Altoona, took her own life Saturday afternoon on the back porch of her home with a shot gun.

A note to her husband was left by Mrs. Krugh, who according to Coroner Rothrock, had been melancholy for some time.

"I'm sorry, I hope you will forgive" the note read.

A bright Christmas was in store for the Krugh family, according to the coroner, who said that three-year-old Paul Krugh II and his father had bought their mother and wife, a new fur coat.

"The husband was a good provider," said the coroner, "and the only reason that could be found for the suicide was the extreme melancholy of the woman because of a physical condition."

Members of the family include her husband, Paul Krugh, and one son, Paul Krugh II. Two sisters also survive. Mrs. Krugh was reared in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Bowman since she was 14 years of age.

County Growers Can Boost Income

to streamline wartime distribution, the general trend toward group action in marketing is one of the most important agricultural developments in the state," according to Earl R. French, marketing director of A. & P.'s produce-buying affiliate, the Atlantic Commission Company.

"Our experience shows growers can boost their income 10 to 15 per cent by working together to provide adequate volume and standard grade and pack, and by working with distributors to cut out unnecessary handling operations and costs. This 10 to 15 per cent would bring approximately $23,000 to $50,000 extra annually on fruits, nuts and vegetables alone to Centre county growers, who in one recent year received $330,194 from their sales of these products. Growers could similarly increase their cash income from other crops by group action," French explained.

As an indication of the effectiveness of cooperation between growers and distributors, French said economics worked out through group marketing programs were one important factor helping Pennsylvania growers to realize $1,983,459 last year for fresh fruits and vegetables sold through the Atlantic Commission Company.

With wartime food supply conditions emphasizing the need for shortening commercial distances between growers and consumers, group marketing programs can not only aid the "Food-for-Freedom" program but also provide a vitally important key to post-war farm prosperity, French declared.

He pointed out that the groundwork for building these programs is already well prepared in Pennsylvania, which "group-markets" milk cream, butter and other dairy products, livestock, wool, poultry, eggs, mushrooms, grapes, apples, peaches, tomatoes, sweet corn and lima beans.

Mill Hall Woman Hurt in Accident

Suffers Injuries in Motor Crash at Flemington Highway Bridge

Mrs. Nelson S. Weaver of Mill Hall, was treated at the Lock Haven Private Hospital Friday for head injuries and chin lacerations following an accident about 2:15 o'clock Friday morning at the eastern end of the Flemington highway bridge.

Mrs. Weaver was a passenger in the car owned and operated by her husband. The Weaver car was proceeding east when struck by another car, driven by Charles Vogt of Emporium, moving west. State police said Vogt would be arrested on a reckless driving charge. Vogt claimed that his car skidded on the slippery pavement.

Estimates of the damages were $150 to the Vogt car and $100 to the other.

IMMANUEL—JESUS

Immanuel shall He be called,
For in Him God with man
Doth come to tread the earth
below—
As when the race began.

Yet now, He comes as man to be Among the sons of men;
The child of woman, born in time,
The babe of Bethlehem.

And Jesus, too, shall be His name,
For, by Him God doth save
From sin and death, from wrath
and hell
Whoever will believe.

O bless the love that sent Him down,
O bless the grace that came!
And let my soul fore-ere rejoice
In Christ, the Savior's name.

MARKED WITH V, BABY CELEBRATES 1st BIRTHDAY

Altoona's V baby, Peggy Joan Nagle, 1-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas D. Nagle, celebrated her first birthday last Monday.

Exactly one week after Pearl Harbor, a girl was born to the Nagles. Dr. Logan Hull, attending physician, noticed a perfect letter V above the bridge of the nose, right between the eyes.

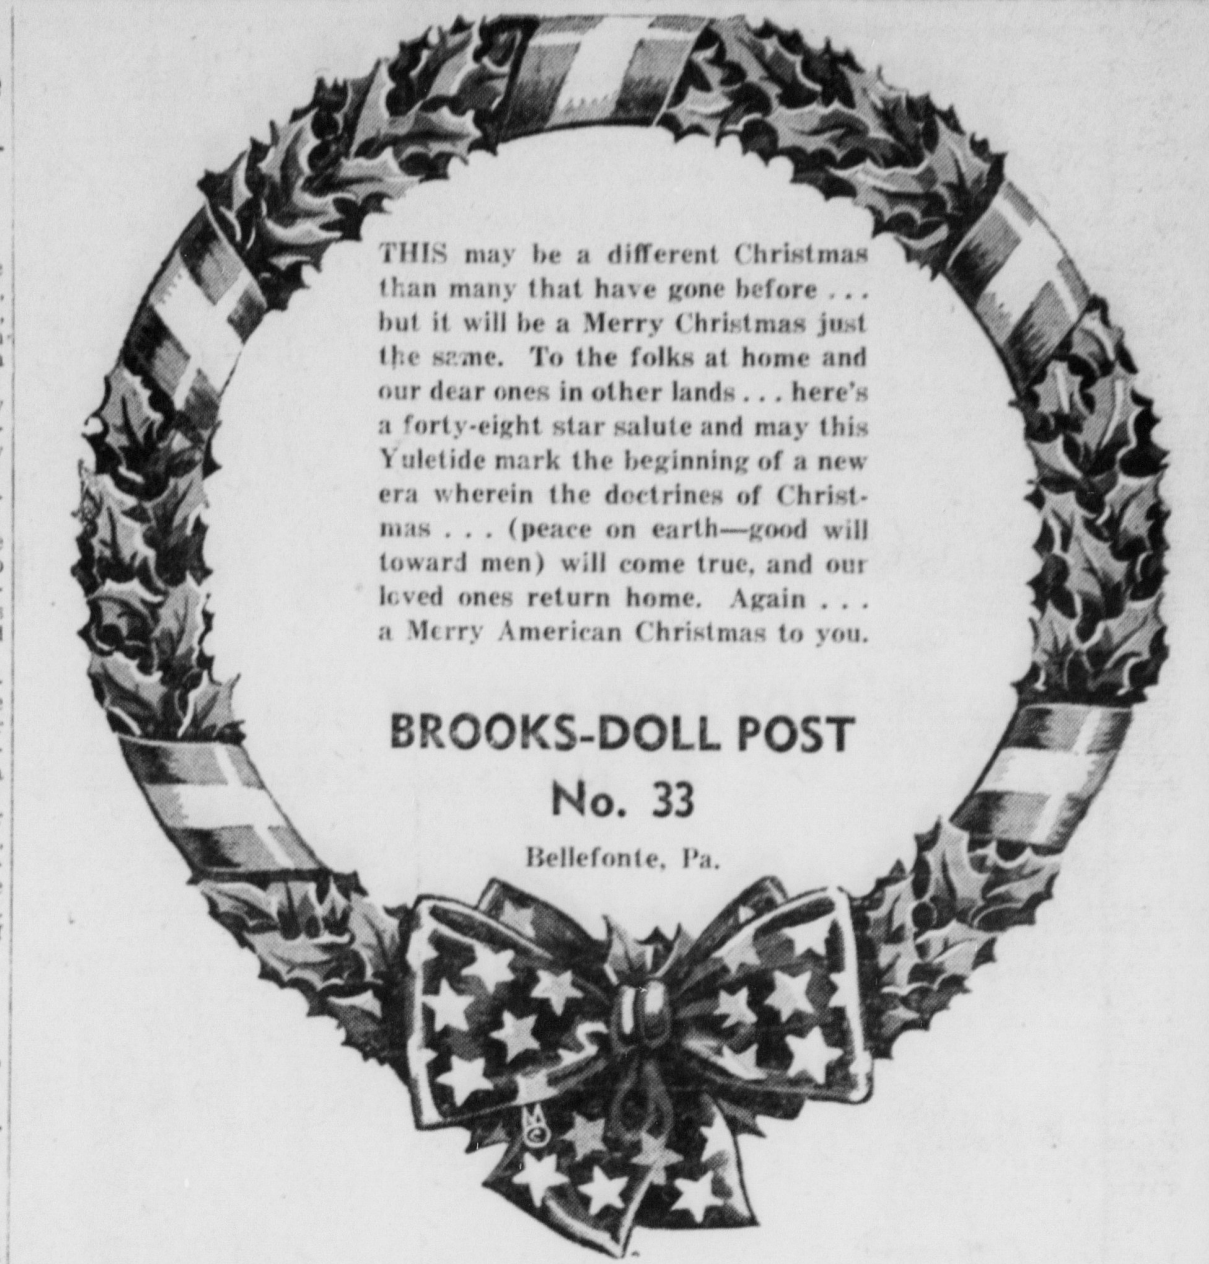

Monday when the child celebrated her birthday the mark was examined and found to be even more prominent. Doctors claim it is not a regular birth mark.

Company officials declared that loss of the warehouse and machine shop, flanking the garage unit, would have been a severe blow to the production of the plant, and that replacement of machinery and supplies in those units would have been a difficult task.

Reports yesterday were to the effect that the damaged section would be restored as quickly as possible, with some possible changes in roof design to prevent a recurrence of fire.

Other farmers in the group have cut production an average of eight per cent, Steele added. He said he believes the recent 1 1/2-cent per quart increase granted dairymen by the Pennsylvania milk control board will halt the downward trend of milk production.
