Calf Growing is Part of the Dairyman's Job

A strong demand for milk and dairy products will tax to the limit the capacity of all dairy herds.

The old slogan, "A calf well started is a calf half grown," is a guide to growing good dairy heifers.

Many such troubles can be eliminated by not feeding too much at the start.

To save milk for the war emergency, many dairymen have adopted the dry calf starter method of feeding.

A good quality hay with green color or should be kept in a rack at all times and water should be available constantly after the calf is three weeks of age.

Large cows on the average produce more milk than small cows. If the dairyman is to obtain the maximum milk he must grow the heifer calves as well.

Take Good Care of Fur Coats For Longer Wear

Not every woman's wardrobe includes a fur coat, but where it does the homemaker will be wise to give it special attention.

First of all, don't drop your fur coat on chairs, or drape it on radiators, or throw it around.

If a fur coat gets wet, never dry it on a radiator. Instead, comb it lightly with the flow of the fur, then brush it in the same direction.

Try not to wear out one part of your coat quicker than the rest of it by carrying packages, books, or handbags under the arm.

When sitting down, always unfasten a fur coat and shrug it loose at the shoulders.

Strong sunlight is not good for furs; it may fade them, and also it may dry out the oils.

Inspect your furs regularly for tears and rips and repair them at once. Small rips may soon work into jagged tears that will require an entirely new skin to replace the damage.

Fresh Mash is Aid to Egg Production

Fresh mash should be supplied once daily in hoppers from which hens find it easy to feed.

Mash that is provided daily seems to be more palatable to the fowls than mash that has been allowed to accumulate in the hoppers and become stale.

Barn Ventilation Aids Clean Milk Production

Too many Centre county dairy barns are damp, stuffy, and smelly in winter.

County Agent R. C. Blaney explains that the heat generated by the cow is a by-product in the digestion of feed.

In addition, the damp air picks up barn odors which are carried to the milk.

Leftover Bird Basis For Tasty Dishes

When preparing the bird for dinner, many homemakers look forward to having leftovers to serve in some tasty dish.

To make the most of the chicken, turkey, or goose, save all the leftovers.

Leftover fat may be clarified and used for making cookies, gingerbread, or in any recipe that requires shortening.

Answers to Modern Etiquette

1. No. It is far better to leave a little soup in the plate.

2. It is all right to do so, but a single sheet is preferable.

3. It indicates one of two things, ill-breeding or nervousness.

4. Never. She always enters the room first, and her escort takes the aisle seat.

5. She may wear a corsage of orchids, gardenias, or any flower that suits her fancy.

6. Never. Perhaps the guest is not feeling well. It is better to say nothing unless the guest offers an explanation.

7. He should give a tip, and then in the future eat in places where tipping is not customary.

8. Yes.

9. There is no reason why she should not accept, unless the young man is becoming too serious in his attentions, which she does not want, and she thinks it might be inferred that she too was serious.

10. No. He usually says, "I am John Black," or, "My name is Black," unless his title is used in addressing, as, "Dr. Black."

Modern Etiquette

- 1. Is it proper for one to tip his soup plate at the dinner table in an effort to scoop out the last drop?
2. Is it proper for a man to use a double sheet for his note paper?
3. What does it indicate when a person laughs loud, and almost shouts when talking?
4. Does a woman ever take the aisle when she is attending a theater with a man?
5. What kind of flowers should a bride wear if she is married in traveling costume and prefers not to carry an arm bouquet?
6. When a hostess notices that a certain guest is eating but very little, should she call attention to it?
7. When a man does not believe in tipping and is eating in a place where tipping is customary, what should he do?
8. Is it necessary that all men in a wedding party wear the same kind of clothes?
9. If a girl has not been going with a young man very long, and his folks invite her to have dinner, should she accept or refuse?
10. If a man finds it necessary to introduce himself, does he put the "Mr." before his name?
11. Isn't it poor form for a guest to applaud vociferously for an encore at a private entertainment?
12. Is a luncheon guest expected to remain all afternoon?

Answers to Modern Etiquette

- 1. No. It is far better to leave a little soup in the plate. A bowl of dish of any kind should not be tilted.
2. It is all right to do so, but a single sheet is preferable.
3. It indicates one of two things, ill-breeding or nervousness. A person who is well-bred and perfectly poised will not laugh so loudly that it can be heard fifty feet away, and in conversation will always speak in a low, modulated voice.
4. Never. She always enters the room first, and her escort takes the aisle seat.
5. She may wear a corsage of orchids, gardenias, or any flower that suits her fancy.
6. Never. Perhaps the guest is not feeling well. It is better to say nothing unless the guest offers an explanation.

"AN ARMY WIFE"
This Cape Cod woman is proud to be "An Army Wife" and told it to her husband in rhyme.

Private Otis Macomber, of Barnstable, received the following "Season's Greeting" from his wife Helen:

I'm not in a WAAC and I'm not a WAVE.
And I'm not in the ferry command;
I belong to a crew which grew and grew.
The length and breadth of this land,
I'm an army wife.

I do kitchen police and special details.
Without the support of a band,
I shove the snow and I thaw out the pipes.
With my own two lily-white hands,
I'm an army wife.

I have learned—and how! to prepare my "chow,"
In spite of the rationing ban;
For with "vitamin plus" and a wee extra fuss,
I can bake each week for my man.
I'm an army wife.

I'm proud of my soldier man,
So I'm just trying to do my share, too.
As a niece of Uncle Sam,
I'm an army wife.

NEW YEAR
Here we are in another New Year
We'll never have the old year see;
It has gone forever, no more to return,
On, on to eternity.

It seems but days since '42 rolled in
So dreary and cold and crisp;
While the fluttering snow flakes chased each other
All day, like the will o' the wisp.

The old year has gone with its joys and cares,
Its trials, regrets, untold;
But we must repent and a new leaf turn
And improve the new o'er the old.

The new year is here with privileges many
To heal all those steeped in sin,
So help raise the fallen, no matter how deep,
A clean and new life begin.

Let's nineteen forty-three a banner year make,
And each day some kind act do,
That when the year shall draw to a close,
Our regrets will then be few.

So, here's greetings to all who these lines may read,
And love to friends we hold dear;
For we wish you joy and peace and health,
And a bright and Happy New Year
—Mrs. W. J. Hackenberg.
