Mrs. Ronald Peters is a surgical patient in the Phillipsburg State Hospital. His friends hope for her a speedy recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Robinson of Washington, D. C., spent the weekend at the home of Mrs. Robinson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Q. Williams.

Mrs. Harry Marshall, president of the Neighborhood Garden Club, would like to have the names of boys who have gone to the army and are eligible to have their names on the honor roll here, handed in to her and she will see that they are placed on the honor roll.

MARTHA

The mid-week services held each Wednesday evening at the Baptist church are meetings of prayer and Bible study. Plan to come next Wednesday night and enjoy this fellowship together.

A missionary meeting will be held Friday evening of next week, April 2, at the home of N. R. Stiver. We urge all members of the church to try to attend. The program will be built around the story of one of our Negro colleges, the Mather School of Beaufort, S. C. Unlike most schools and colleges which teach only reading, writing, arithmetic and advanced secular subjects, Mather teaches these and more. It teaches about God. This is in evidence as a visitor remarked, "a glimpse of the Great Master's work is seen at Mather School."

Naturally, this school has a fine choir of Negro voices which is often used at the nearby hospital for the pleasure of the patients. One selection noted by a visitor was a Negro spiritual entitled, "Having a Little Talk With Jesus Makes Things All Right." We expect to send many articles of practical use to this school in the near future.

We also will continue the mailing of the booklet, "The Secret Place" to the boys in camp from this community. All members of the church are urged to report to our reading director, Mrs. McGrew, on the number of Books of the Bible, books of missions and other religious books read since last April.

At the Grange meeting of March 18th, this being the first business meeting held since the death of our sister member, Miss Ida R. Williams, Resolutions of Respect were adopted by the Grange and the charter draped for thirty days in her memory. This ceremony was in charge of Worthy Ceres, Wills Harpster, and Mrs. Mattie Williams as chap-

Soldier's Panic

Some weeks ago, a Bell Telephone instructress was training a group of soldiers in the operation of switchboards for the Army.

One young private found it pretty complicated, but after much hard work managed to set up eight connections on a practice switchboard. Seeing that he was very nervous and tense, our instructress complimented him on his progress.

"Yeah," he stammered, "I got the cords up under all right, but how the — I mean how am I ever going to get 'em back down where they belong?"

Switchboards are busier than ever before these days. So, occasionally, it may take a few seconds longer before you hear the Operator's "Number, please?" Please be patient.

000 for work among refugees; and $50,000 for emergencies. This is the text of a prayer for peace, recently read in almost all Lutheran pulpits in Norway: "O God, we pray that thou wilt bring to a halt the shedding of blood so just and lasting peace may come to the world. Show mercy to those who are suffering and dying on the battlefield and to the homeless and the persecuted. Remember thy promise and have pity on the unfortunate people of Israel. We ask thy merciful help for all who are persecuted and are enduring suffering. We pray Thee to put an end to all hatred between peoples and races."

One of the great epics coming out of China is the fight of Lingnan University to live and to serve China. Founded in Canton by Presbyterian missionaries in 1885, chartered by the Regents of the University of the State of New York eight years later, approved by the Chinese Ministry of Education, and supported by many boards and government grants, Lingnan University carried on peaceably with more than 800 students until the Japanese first raided and then captured Canton. A month later the university reopened in Hongkong, only to have that city fall into the same hands in 1941. A few weeks later, President Y. L. Lee and other members of the faculty "slipped quietly out of the city" and went to Kulung, wartime capital of Kwantung Province. There in makeshift the university reorganized, holding examinations for new students, and organizing also a high school and a theological seminary. With private aid and with government aid temporary structures were built and there "in exile" the institution carries on today.

Secretary General Georges Thelin of the Save the Children International Union, in Geneva, Switzerland, calls the attention of Christian churches to the "Declaration of the Rights of the Child," formulated at Geneva twenty years ago. "The cause its application is now more than ever necessary. The declaration states that above all considerations of race, nationality, or creed, "the child must be given the means requisite for its normal development, both materially and spiritually. The child that is hungry must be fed; the delinquent child must be reclaimed; and the orphan and the waif must be sheltered and succored. The child must be the first to receive relief in time of distress. The child must be put in a position to earn a livelihood, and must be protected against every form of exploitation. The child must be brought up in the consciousness that its talents must be devoted to the service of its fellow-men."

The individual who attempts to reform the entire human race has an exaggerated opinion of his, or her, ability.

COMMANDER IN BISMARCK SEA VICTORY—Lieut. George C. Kenney, in command of American Air Forces in the Southwest Pacific, directed one of the most decisive operations of the war in the crushing defeat of a 22-ship Japanese convoy off the coast of New Guinea. Lieut. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, commanding general, Army Air Forces, in a statement said: "In attacking and eliminating the enemy where he was most vulnerable and before he had time to get set, Kenney utilized the striking power of his air force to the fullest advantage. The bomber crews and fighter pilots who disregarded bad weather and comparatively close enemy air bases carried out their missions in the highest traditions of the Air Force. Gen. Kenney is a native of Yarmouth, Nova Scotia. He attended Massachusetts Institute of Technology and at the outbreak of the World War enlisted as a flying cadet. He entered the front line service early in 1918. He was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against superior enemy forces near Janetz, France. He also was awarded the Silver Star for bravery. After the war he was commissioned in the regular Army and served through all the grades. He was given command of Allied Air Forces in the Southwest Pacific in September 1942.

FARMER HAS HIS TROUBLES PRODUCING WAR-TIME CROPS

We hear a lot about "conversion to war production" these days.

Factories that once made furniture and household wares and farm machinery are now making airplanes and guns and tanks. Everybody knows about the remarkable conversion of industry to a war basis but the less spectacular, although equally amazing, story of how America's farms have "converted" to the production of crops most needed in wartime is not so well known.

This account is intended for those who live in towns and villages and who may not be closely in touch with what our farmers are doing.

Farmers began to "convert" their fields to war production about a year before the general conversion of industry, according to outstanding agricultural authorities. The word "convert" may be somewhat misleading, because in farming the changes were not like those in industry. Farmers are using essentially the same machinery, tools, and basic methods to grow crops now as they did in 1940, or before. They still plow the land, prepare it, sow it, cultivate it, and harvest it very much as they have for years, with the exception that in 1943 they face tremendous obstacles which must be overcome to meet the year's food goals.

What farmers did to convert their acreage to war production was to plant, and till, and harvest the particular kinds of crops that are most necessary to sustain a fighting army and to supply the numerous other needs of the military forces. Civilian needs were not forgotten, by any means, but crop planning centered around the requirements of our armed effort.

Manpower Commission issued instructions to Selective Service Boards to defer essential dairy, poultry, and livestock workers. This policy was later extended to all essential agricultural workers. Still the number of farm workers is inadequate and several steps will have to be taken. They include:

a. recruiting of a "land army" of 3,500,000 older men, women, boys and girls, and emergency workers from the towns.

b. recruiting and training by short courses at agricultural colleges, men for year-round work on farms.

c. recruiting, training, and transporting seasonal and year-round labor.

d. helping farmers increase the productivity of their present farms, or getting re-located on better farms.

Secretary Wickard has said: "The need for skilled farm help may be so great that as a last resort it may be necessary to ask the armed forces to give temporary furloughs to skilled farm workers, particularly farm workers who can operate harvesting machinery."

Short on Machinery

Shortage of machinery is another serious problem of the farmer and an additional threat to the food goals of 1943. Steel and iron are critical materials and have to be saved in every way possible. And yet, the army and the civilian population cannot be fed if farmers cannot get machinery. Recently the War Production Board authorized an increase in production of farm machinery from about 22 percent of 1940 production to about 40 percent of 1940 production. It is expected that considerably more farm machinery will be manufactured in 1944 than this year. The quota for farm machinery repairs has been increased to about 100 percent of the 1940 level. In spite of all that can be done, however, farmers will probably not get as much machinery and equipment as they need—which will be a great handicap to overcome if we reach our food goals.

Outlook Steady

Secretary Wickard sums up the food situation in these words: "The over-all food picture, for the year ahead, looks about the same as it has for some time.

"On the basis of present indications, the fighting front requirements of military and lend-lease use for the various groups of foods in 1943 will take the following percentages of our total output: 20 to 25 percent of the beef (virtually all of which is for American armed forces), 30 to 35 percent of pork, 25 to 30 percent of eggs, 15 to 20 percent of butter, 40 to 45 percent of cheese, 40 to 45 percent of condensed and evaporated milk, 25 to 30 percent of lard, 20 to 25 percent of other edible fats and oils, 50 to 60 percent of canned fruits, 35 to 45 percent of dried fruits, 45 to 50 percent of canned vegetables, 10 to 15 percent of wheat, and 15 to 20 percent of rice.

"While sending these large supplies to the fronts, civilians will have for themselves an even larger supply than in 1942 of grains (except rice), poultry, and potatoes. The per capita civilian supply of meats, fluid milk, eggs, fresh fruits, dry beans and peas will be about the same or slightly lower than in 1942. The civilian per capita supply of fish, cheese, fats and oils, condensed and evaporated milk, rice, commercially grown fresh vegetables, sugar, coffee and cocoa will be lower than in 1942 and some of these supplies may even fall below the pre-war level. This is assuming that production goals for 1943 will be met."

is flammable shingled roofs. Sparks from chimneys, bonfires or incinerators lodging on wood shingles destroyed thousands of homes last year. Wood shingles, too, have been the cause of more than half of all conflagrations that have swept U. S. cities. The only solution here is a new roof of fire-resistant shingles or roll roofing.

Another spring-cleaning "must," according to the NFPA, is raking dead leaves and dry grass away from houses and out-buildings. Dead, dry leaves make fine tinder for a chance spark or a carelessly discarded cigarette.

Re-painting of time-worn spots, both inside and out, seems to be an ages-old spring custom, and a good one. Other spring-cleaning suggestions are: Check electric wiring. Do not overload electric circuits. Keep no combustible dry cleaners—or spare fuel for the car—in or near the house or garage. Be careful with matches; keep them out of reach of children. Don't hang kitchen curtains over ranges. Learn how to fight simple fires and how to turn in an alarm.

Do all these things, the NFPA says, and your spring-cleaning efforts will result in a happier, safer home the whole year 'round.

With the list of 1438 properties prepared for sale in Columbia county because of tax delinquencies to 500 by payments made at the office of the county treasurer, a still further cut is expected. So far, more than $60,000 in back taxes has been paid.
