

Echoes From the Past

Fifty Years Ago

An item is going the rounds to the effect that Governor Pattison has signed the bill that prevents the killing of deer in Pennsylvania for a period of three years. In that space of time deer will be plentiful if the law is rigidly enforced. Such a bill will not suit many of our old hunters, but then it may be wise move as deer are becoming scarcer every year.

A movement is on foot to have Walker township divided into two voting precincts. This township is one long strip that takes in the lower part of Nitany Valley. On account of its peculiar shape voters have a long distance to travel to the polls on election day and if the weather is unfavorable, many do not go at all. It is also claimed that there are too many voters for one polling place. A petition has been prepared and has received a large number of signatures, praying the court to grant such a division of the township as would make two equal precincts.

On Saturday morning Logan Branch and Spring Creek were lined from early daybreak until late in the evening with busy fishermen. As the day was cold and heavy rains fell in the morning the catch was not as large as in former years on the first day. No fly fishing was done as the weather was stormy and the water was high and muddy. Several fine strings were brought in. Clayton Brown caught the most, some forty of medium size, Charley Heister and Jim Vallance had some very fine ones. Pifer caught a fine 15-inch trout, the largest yet reeled there. George Gross, Charley Warble, William Walker and others made fine catches. On Monday more of the speckled beauties were caught than on Saturday. Clayton Brown is offering a split bamboo, nickle plated rod to the person catching the largest trout during the season. The trout must be brought to his store to be measured.

Limestone screenings had been distributed along the highway between Bellefonte and Lock Haven, preparatory to oiling the road at once.

Some of the material for constructing the inter-county bridge spanning Beech Creek had been received by the contractor, Harry T. Bilger, of Pleasant Gap.

Ambrose S. Ray, of Bellefonte, although handicapped by failing eyesight, had invented a new mop which he planned to produce in commercial quantities. Chief advantage of the mop was that as one part of the mop-head became worn a new section could be moved into place by the turn of a wheel.

"I'll Look It Up!"

Over the wire to a busy "Information" operator came a request for the telephone number of a certain person. But the operator could find no name in her records like the one requested, so she asked the subscriber to spell it.

"Just a minute," came the answer, "while I look it up in the telephone book!"

Almost half of all the calls made to "Information" are for numbers which are listed in the directory. These unnecessary calls waste the time of 6,000 Bell System operators all over the country, and they tie up telephone facilities which are urgently needed to handle essential war-time calls.

Please use your directory first—before you call "Information." Telephone service should not be wasted in war-time. The Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania.

Samuel Vonada, of Bellefonte, received a summons to appear in Philadelphia on a charge of driving an automobile past a street car in that city while the car was discharging passengers. The summons was a surprise to Mr. Vonada, who had ample proof that on the day of the alleged violation he was engaged in moving J. O. Heverly's household goods from Bishop street to an apartment over the supply store on Allegheny street. Vonada suggested to Philadelphia authorities that possibly the officer who jotted down the license number of the offending car made an error.

Workmen engaged in tearing down the old landmark at the corner of Allegheny and High streets, Bellefonte, formerly occupied by the late Governor Andrew Gregg Curtin, made a gruesome discovery when they broke down a door leading to an unused room and found a human skeleton. A suspicion of dark deeds was quickly dispelled when it was recalled that the house originally was occupied by Dr. Constans Curtin, prominent physician, who, like many of the physicians of his day, had the skeleton in part of his office equipment. The skeleton was believed to be well over 100 years old, since Dr. Curtin built the house in 1812, and began practicing there about that time.

Mr. and Mrs. Graham Hunter, of Geneva, N. Y., enroute to Bellefonte for a visit with Mr. Hunter's parents, were met by Mr. Hunter's brother, Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Hunter, escaped serious injury when the lights of their car failed near Glintondale and the machine plunged through a fence and into an abandoned six-foot cellar excavation.

An unusually heavy blast at the Centre Hall stone quarry caused a shower of stones to spray about the quarry. Walter Bayleets, an employee, was slightly injured when several stones struck him on the legs. A shower of considerable size struck the creamery building, crashed through the roof and landed in the milk testing department.

When fire was discovered in High Valley, southeast of Coburn, about twenty men from Coburn and Millheim responded to a call for firefighters and succeeded in getting the fire out after about one-half square mile of land had been burned over.

Sunday School Lesson

THE RISEN LORD (Easter Lesson)

International Sunday School Lesson for April 25, 1943.

GOLDEN TEXT: "He is Risen!"—Mark 16: 6.

Lesson Text: John 20: 1-17.

Following the crucifixion of Jesus on Calvary on Friday, two of his secret followers, Nicodemus and Joseph of Arimathea received permission from Pilate to remove his body from the cross for burial in the newly hewn tomb of Joseph of Arimathea where it remained until early Sunday morning. As it was at the time of the spring full moon, it was thought essential, in fixing the day to be observed, in memory of the resurrection, that it should always fall at the time of the full moon. Accordingly, Easter is always on the Sunday after the full moon next after March 21, the spring solstice.

Because the body of Jesus had been hastily prepared for burial on Friday, as it was against Jewish custom for Jews to handle a dead body on the Sabbath day, the women who loved Jesus were very anxious to do what had been neglected, in placing the usual burial spices around the body of their Lord.

Therefore, as early as possible on the first day of the week, Mary Magdalene went to the tomb of Jesus and was surprised to find the stone rolled from the door and the body of Jesus missing from the tomb. Naturally concluding that the body had been stolen, she went immediately to Simon Peter and "to the other disciple whom Jesus loved," and told them of her discovery.

The three of them ran to the tomb. John being a young man outran the elder Peter and arrived at the tomb first. He discovered that Mary had spoken the truth, the tomb was open and empty. Peter, impulsive and impetuous, as usual, went immediately into the tomb and found evidence to prove that Jesus' body had not been stolen, but that his departure from the tomb had been leisurely and orderly—his grave clothes were rolled up and the napkin, which had been about his face was not lying with the others but was folded up by itself.

Not yet understanding their Master's words, uttered before his crucifixion, that he would rise again from the dead, the disciples did not know what to think. They left the tomb and "went away again unto their own home." But Mary was not satisfied, she remained at the tomb weeping. Peering again into the tomb she saw two angels, who asked her why she wept. She replied, "Because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him."

As she turned around, Jesus was standing near her. He asked her, "Woman, why weepest thou?" whom she sought? "Thou art full of grief, but the man whom she, because of her weeping, she failed to recognize but mistook for the gardener. "Sir, if thou hast borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, and I will take him away." Then, Jesus said, "Mary." Mary recognized his beloved voice and answered, "Rabboni," or "Master." Jesus gave her a task to perform, that of spreading the news of his resurrection to the other disciples. In the glad tidings.

The effect of the news of the resurrection of Jesus of the eleven disciples was remarkable. W. L. Watkinson describes it thus: "We cannot but wonder at the amazing change which took place in the disciples at this period. More than once it has occurred in history that the inspiration of a great event has transformed ordinary men into heroes, but it is not possible to find a parallel to the profound change of character and force we witness in the disciples, when we compare what they were before and after the decease of their Master."

"In the former period they appear singularly deficient in intellectual and spiritual comprehension, whilst later they deal like masters with the highest questions. In moral character they are immensely embodied. And from a state of doubt, cowardice and despair they give the world the finest example of conviction, valor, and optimism it has ever looked upon."

"There must have been a cause, for this surprising conversion, magnification, transfiguration. It was found in the fact of their Lord's resurrection from the dead and ascension into heaven. In the light and power of this extraordinary and glorious fact, they became heroes and martyrs."

"May each day be our Easter; On each new day may we Rise from the tomb of our dead selves To what we ought to be."

Two hundred theological students from Protestant and Jewish seminaries at a recent meeting in New York City, urged that the United States, England and others of the United Nations withdraw their immigration barrier for the duration of the war and open their doors to refugees from Europe. They urged also that the United Nations relax the blockade so as to provide food for the starving peoples of Europe. The Jewish Institute of Religion joined in the declaration of eleven theological seminaries including Union, Biblical, General Moravian, Drew, Princeton, Jewish, New Brunswick, Yeshiva, and Yale.
