MANY HERSHEY ZOO ANIMALS ARE SOLD
The Hershey Zoo, closed since last December 20, following a public statement, "To be opened after the war, bigger and better than ever," has according to its director Ward R. Walker, gone through a complete transformation.

Twenty-eight of the 30 keepers have either entered the armed services or have taken jobs on the production line. Domestic chickens and ducks are now being raised in empty zoo buildings and enclosures. All animals have been sold except hay and grain eaters. The flesh of these animals such as deer, antelope and bison would help out considerably in case of an extreme meat shortage. The animals and birds that have been sold, loaned or donated to other zoological gardens in the United States have gone principally to those more thickly populated areas where greater recreational needs are being extended for war workers.

PENN STATE STUDENT HELD ON LARCENY CHARGE

George W. Foreman, 328 S. Allen street, State College, a Penn State student, was committed to the county jail at Bellefonte until the next term of court in default of $1,000 bail after he pleaded guilty to charges of larceny of $4 in cash and a watch valued at $42.50 from lockers at the Glenn Pool March 13, at a hearing before Justice of the Peace J. D. Hart at 3 p. m. last Tuesday.

Chief John R. Juba of the State College police force, who investigated the case and made the arrest, said that the youth also admitted several other larcenies. There have been numerous complaints of theft from lockers at the pool, he added, and investigations of these cases are being continued.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

AFTER TEETH LOSE THEIR NERVES—No. 4

When all these amazing facts about dead teeth had been proved scientifically, the dentists, doctors and patients were in a dilemma. It was quite heart-breaking to be compelled to sacrifice so many beautiful bridges that were anchored to dead roots, to say nothing of the money and time that had been spent in achieving such brilliant results. The new gold crowns were so satisfactory. Chewing had now become a pleasure instead of a pain. The teeth never ached. How could they be a menace to health?

Besides, the pains in the legs and elsewhere were too far away from the mouth to be caused by teeth. How could teeth cause pus in the kidneys? Impossible. Thus argued the possessors of dead teeth who were seeking relief from various maladies.

About this time, like other reformers, dentists and doctors went to great extremes. They had been so shocked by the revelations of the research workers, that they sometimes ordered teeth removed without sufficient proof of their being diseased. Thus many perfectly healthy teeth were sacrificed during this transition period.

It was found out that patients who had paid frequent visits to their dentists had fewer dead or infected teeth, than those who neglected their teeth or only went when they ached.

Dentists went through trying years. They had to evolve new methods of treating teeth and of making crowns and bridges.

Be it said to their credit that they rose to the occasion, and that their achievements have been worthy of one of the most highly scientific and skilled professions in the world.

FARM CALENDAR

Take Care of Wool—Livestock extension specialists at the Pennsylvania State College urge farmers to take good care of the three million pounds of wool that will be clipped this spring. That means clean, dry fleeces tied properly with paper twine, carefully packed and graded, and sold if possible through a cooperative association.

Control Brown Rot—Rotted peach mummies hanging on the trees should be removed before the blooming season as the first step in control of peach brown rot. Then the peach orchard should be cultivated before the buds show pink, say plant pathologists of the Pennsylvania State College.

Plant Trees and Shrubs—Deciduous shrubs, evergreens, and shade trees should be planted as soon as possible, reminding ornamental horticulturists at the Pennsylvania State College. Every community should plan to plant commemorative trees for the boys and girls from the community who are in service.

Maintain the Lawn—Because of restrictions on nitrogen this year, lawns will have to be maintained with lime and superphosphate, according to Penn State agronomists. When the time comes, set the mower to cut at 1 1/2 to 2 inches high.

Select Proper Tools—Careful selection of tools for cutting and peeling will save much time and trouble, say Penn State extension foresters. The tools are saw, axe, wedges, peeling spuds, and a cast hook. Care of the tools is important. Give Chicks Space—As the chicks grow in size they will need more room for eating and drinking. Penn State poultry specialists remind. Three sizes of feeding equipment will be needed.
