Last week George Buchanan's house on Halfmoon Hill was struck for the second time by lightning. Scott Bartley's house at State College, had part of the slate roof torn off by a flash of lightning and the chimney and cook stove were somewhat damaged.

Some human fleas entered the stable of John Kreider, in Sinking Valley, Monday night, and stabled one of his best horses, the one usually driven by the women, to death. Suspicion points strongly to an ex-convict of the Huntington Reformatory. The beast was stabbed in three places with a long, keen-edged knife.

A party of Shamokin capitalists contemplates leasing the farm of the late John Emerick, three miles east of Centre Hall, with a view to coal mining. We understand it is the same party which has leased the Getzler farm in Penn township to prospect for gold. With gold and coal in Penn's Valley, our bread ought to be pretty well buttered before long.

On Wednesday morning a special train conveyed a number of invited guests from this place to Oak Hill to attend the wedding of Mary L. Hammill and Henry W. Armstrong, of Bayard, W. Va. The bride is a daughter of Rev. Hammill, retired minister of the Presbyterian church. Mr. Armstrong was formerly a resident of Lemont, but is now engaged in the lumbering business in West Virginia.

On Sunday afternoon Mr. Thomas Love died at his home at Hecla after a continued illness with dyspepsia. The deceased was 66 years old and leaves a wife and seven children, John, James, Annie and Mary, at home; David, at McKeesport; Jennie and Mrs. Selbert, living in Pittsburg. The interment occurred in the Union cemetery, Bellefonte, on Tuesday.

Attorney John Blanchard was making arrangements to sail from New York on June 20 for a trip to Italy and Greece. Mr. Blanchard had not been in good health and had been advised to take an extended trip.

Among those from Bellefonte who were attending a Shriners' convention in Washington, D. C. were George Bush and W. Harrison Walker, of Bellefonte; Dr. and Mrs. Fred A. Robinson and Dr. William Kelley, of State College.

KELVINATOR ELECTRIC STOVES

MELROY'S PLEASANT GAP, PA.

PHILCO RADIOS BENDIX HOME LAUNDRY

Fred Lutz, of Bellefonte, had 22,000 volts of electricity pass through his body and lived to tell the tale. He and Andrew Gordon were making connections to a transformer in Millheim, and the current in the line supposedly was turned off. Lutz was on top of a pole and when he grabbed a wire the full charge passed through him. Only the fact that he had his safety belt in place prevented him from being hurled to the ground. He was able to descend unaided after the power was turned off, but he suffered from deep burns of the hand and body.

Over the County News

An additional contribution to the Red Cross War Fund for the Spring Mills district of $12.50 was made by the Ladies' Aid of the Salem Reformed church, bringing the total for that district to $327.20. This church group is also doing Red Cross work as a part of their share in the war effort. Mrs. Russell Roseman is the president and Mrs. Jennie Stull is the treasurer of the organization.

Last Friday, about 2:30 a. m., the Millheim Fire Company answered an alarm from the farm of David Hosterman at Penn Hall. Ten minutes after the alarm was given in Millheim, three firemen were at the scene of the fire with the company's pumper. A chicken house and two hundred-year-old chimneys were destroyed, the flames having made too much headway before the blaze was discovered. An adjoining small building was also consumed, along with the implements it housed.

A Bellefonte man, Elwood Derr, of West High street, and an unidentified railroad are being credited with the saving of the lives of a boy and his sister in the waters of Spring Creek Tuesday evening of last week. The incident occurred while a group of kids were playing along the bank of the creek opposite the old lime kilns along the Milesburg pike. A little girl, believed to be named Emel of Brick Row, dropped her shoe into the creek. Her brother, slightly older than she, jumped into the swiftly moving stream to get the shoe and was carried off his feet by the current but was caught on the rifles from which he was rescued by an unidentified railroad employe. His sister in the meantime had fallen into the creek and was rolled over and over going under several times. Derr, who was fishing downstream, heard the girl's shrieks and seeing her in the water jumped in and brought her to shore, where she quickly calmed down and went home.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Eberhart departed for Akron, Ohio, where Mr. Eberhart had accepted a position as a plumber. For several years he had been employed at the Albert Schad plumbing shop in Bellefonte.

"Red," as he is widely known around the county, accepted a position with the Red Cross organization last summer and after preliminary training was sent to Alaska, where he has been ever since. "His appointment makes him the first director of recreation appointed by that organization."

On Tuesday morning at Mr. Bush of Howard, with his wife and child, were driving near Collins Furnace, the horse became frightened and ran away. The buggy was upset and badly broken. Mrs. Bush and her child were considerably bruised. The Bellefonte reservoir is being thoroughly cleaned this week. While the stained glass windows of the reservoir sprung a leak and water from the smaller reservoir began pouring in at a rapid rate. The County Commissioners have awarded the contract for furnishing the curbstones for the improving of the Court House yard, to Daniel Poorman of Boggs township. Some of the stained glass windows of the new Lutheran church arrived this week. The plasterers are about finishing their work on the interior.

FARM CALENDAR

Timely Reminders From The Pennsylvania State College School of Agriculture. Aids Farm Labor—The Agricultural Extension Service of the Pennsylvania State College has been assigned the responsibility for organizing and directing a farm labor program for Pennsylvania for recent Congressional action. Local recruitment and placement of farm labor will be included in the program. Manage Berry Patch—Proper management in raspberry planting is important, not only in maturing this year's crop but in laying the groundwork for a good crop in 1944 as well. Fruit specialists of the Pennsylvania State College recommend summer pruning for old plantings of black raspberries and blackberries. Keep Eggs Clean—If the nests are kept supplied with clean litter there is less work in cleaning eggs for packing for market, say poultry extension specialists of the Pennsylvania State College. It pays to save labor wherever possible on the farm these days when help is scarce and hard to get. Cut Some Pulpwood—Wood pulp is used not only for the making of paper and packaging material, but also for the manufacture of smokeless powder, rayon for parachutes, and medical dressings for our wounded men. Penn State extension foresters urge woodland owners to help meet the demand by cutting some pulpwood. Remove Fertilizer—After the corn planting season is past, be sure to remove fertilizer from the planter, say Penn State agricultural engineers.

BUSH HOLLOW

Sunday school at the Orvis Watson home was followed by the regular preaching service. Everybody welcome. School closed last Thursday. The children, their teacher and family, also quite a few of the mothers, enjoyed ice cream and cake at the noon hour. The children were all glad for vacation time to arrive as the weather was getting too warm to stay indoors. Norman Resides and two daughters, Mary and Helen, spent several days last week with the former's sister and brothers at this place. Mr. and Mrs. Scott Milton and family of Julian, moved into the upper Holt place several weeks ago. Mrs. James Metzger and grandson, Melvin Metzger, and Mrs. Ira Wellers and children spent last Thursday at the Andrew Irvin home, and also enjoyed the ice cream party the school children had at the Irvin home. Mr. and Mrs. George Bush and family visited at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bush on Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Davidson and daughter of Wingate, visited Sunday evening at the Harry Carver home. Benita and Floren Irvin spent Sunday at the Benner Hall home in Dix Run.

Remove Fertilizer

After the corn planting season is past, be sure to remove fertilizer from the planter, say Penn State agricultural engineers. The long history of mankind suggests that there is little occasion for any puny little fellow, no matter how great his zeal, to become hot and bothered with the foibles of men and women, unless they are his own.

Know Your Cows

Weigh each cow's milk each day as a basis for feeding and management and to know what each cow produces during the year, say Penn State dairy specialists.

Sunday School Lesson

GOD'S EXCEEDING GREAT PROMISES

International Sunday School Lesson for June 13, 1943.

GOLDEN TEXT: "He hath granted unto us his precious and exceeding great promises; that through these ye may become partakers of the divine nature.—II Peter 1: 4.

(Lesson Text, Peter 1: 1-11)

The second letter of Peter, which addressed to the same persons as the first—the Christians scattered throughout various provinces of what is known now as Asia Minor, was written some years later and its purpose was to exhort his readers to true Christian living.

Peter writes "To them that have obtained like precious faith with us in the righteousness of God and our Saviour Jesus Christ." The use of this tactful and courteous phrase signifies that this "like precious faith" is equally precious to all and that it gives the same spiritual privileges to the most obscure believers as well as to the most famous of apostles who were eye-witnesses of his majesty.

It is interesting to notice, in reading the epistles of Peter, how many times he uses the word "precious." Peter's list of precious things includes: God's promises, our faith, Christ, Christ's blood, and the tests to which our faith is subject. These are the things which Peter, and every real Christian, has found to be of most worth.

Of what was Peter thinking when he wrote of God's "precious promises"? It seems likely that he meant foremost of all, the gift of God's own Son and the gift of God's Spirit. Because God gave His own Son for us, we can become "partakers of the divine nature." Peter declared that by faith men may, and do, receive into their spirits a share in the nature of God.

Surely those who have, by faith in Jesus Christ, become "partakers of the divine nature" will want to do all in their power to grow in Christian virtues in order that their knowledge and faith shall not be "idle nor unfruitful." Beginning with the fifth verse, Peter outlines a program of Christian growth.

His list of Christian graces, which should be desired by every professing Christian, is progressive, each apparently growing out of the preceding one. However, the desire for them is not enough. We cannot attain them, but we must, as Peter suggests, seek to attain them with "all diligence," which suggests haste.

NEWS IN THE WORLD OF RELIGION

BY W.W. REID

The Board of Managers of the United Christian Missionary Society (Disciples of Christ), Rev. E. K. Higdon, secretary, has petitioned the Immigration Committee of Congress to repeal the Chinese Exclusion Act and to enact legislation enabling all Orientals to become American citizens, the application of such legislation to the Japanese to be contingent on the satisfactory conclusion of the war and on the re-establishment of mutually agreeable relations in the post-war period.

earnestness and fervor. Quite properly Peter begins his list of Christian virtues with faith. "Without faith it is impossible to please him (God). (Heb. 11: 6) It is not enough, however, to just believe and do nothing about our belief. Peter advises, "Add to your faith virtue." Bengel defines virtue as "moral energy, moral power, vigor of intellect or integrity of purpose." To virtue, one must add "knowledge," which here means spiritual insight and understanding, so that with Paul, we may say, "For I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day." (2 Tim. 1: 12)

Knowledge carried to the extreme, however, may lead one rather aside, and so Peter wisely advises, that we add to knowledge "temperance," by which he means self-control, or regulated conduct. We have seen some Christians who were intemperate in the matters of their religious life, to the point of fanaticism. We believe Peter had this in mind as well as temperance in moral questions.

All of us probably need the injunction to patience. Peter had found that this was a much-needed grace himself. Patient endurance is needed in the Christian in living the Christian life.

To patience must be added "God-likeness" or God-likeness. The readiness of which Peter is talking is that which has at its heart a great understanding and sympathy of others. The last two virtues listed will flow naturally if the first ones enumerated are in the Christian's character: brotherly kindness and love. The list began with faith and ends with love—the two master words in the Christian religion and as these abound, Christian character grows.

Which of the Christian virtues do you need to cultivate most in your life? Peter declares that a diligent practice of these virtues, will keep the Christian from being idle and unfruitful. "If ye do these things, ye shall never fall." He does not mean by this that the Christian will never sin, but that a sincere effort to cultivate these virtues in one's life will safeguard him against faults and failures.

Peter ends his second letter with a final injunction to Christians, which we will all do well to try to carry out. "Grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." The Christian should grow spiritually from the time of his acceptance of his Saviour until the time he is called to his Eternal Home. Are you growing?

Dr. Donald W. Richardson, of the Richmond, Va., Seminary of the same name, heads the southern branch of the family. Dr. Coffin is a native New Yorker and was pastor of the noted Madison Avenue Presbyterian church in that city when elected as head of the seminary. Dr. Richardson was born in South Carolina and was a missionary in China for many years. Moderator-elect Coffin says that a major goal of his year in office will be to help further union between these two branches of Presbyterianism.

HEAVY SUMMER SCHEDULE SEEN AT PENN STATE

With an estimated campus enrollment of more than 4,500 students, the Pennsylvania State College for the first time in its history, will be conducting three major summer programs simultaneously. The first will be the regular undergraduate instruction for 1525 civilian students who wish to take advantage of the College's accelerate program. The second is the training offered Army, Navy, and Air Corps selected in four special service plans. About 1850 men are taking these courses. The third is the summer sessions program intended primarily for teachers and educational administrators, which will open with approximately 600 registrants.
