Has 560 Pitchers, Collecting More

(Continued from page one) other friends, Miss Bilger now has a pitcher from every state in the union, but Washington, is someone in that western state wants to complete the Union roundup of pitchers, all he has to do is to mail one to Miss Bilger. Miss Bilger can tell you where each one of the pitchers came from. She began to index them one time, but after the job was nearly completed she found the index book. Since then she depended solely on memory. The smallest pitcher is one no larger than a one-fourth inch piece of a wooden match. It might hold a small drop of water—no more. It was sent to her by a Bellefonte friend who spent a vacation in the Poconos. The largest pitcher is one which would hold nearly a gallon. In between are every imaginable size and shape of pitcher. Some are shaped like animals or birds, such as cows, pigs, ducks, kittens, dogs, parrots—and a moose head. Others carry out the vegetable or nut motif—such as a tomato, and peanut. There are novelty pitchers, such as one shaped like a duck, which was filled with wine from France. The original owner of the duck thoughtfully drank the wine before turning over the pitcher to the collection. Another novelty pitcher is made of clay taken from the Will Rogers estate. There is a souvenir pitcher from Mark Twain's home. Another pitcher in this category has a porcelain cat clinging to the brim of the pitcher in a position to get a drink of whatever might be inside. Throughout the collection are the bright-hued pitchers made by American Indians, and by the native pottery artists of Mexico. A novelty set which is somewhat rare is a group of four pitchers representing the four war presidents. One pitcher carries a likeness of President Wilson, another of President F. D. Roosevelt, a third, Abraham Lincoln, and the fourth, George Washington. The only trouble with the set is that several of the images bear practically no resemblance whatever to the men they are supposed to represent. In the better class of pitchers are some which would be an asset to anyone's pottery collection. There is a large pitcher, a prized possession of the late Dr. M. A. Kirk, which became Miss Bilger's property when Dr. Kirk died some time ago. The pitcher, an English piece of considerable age, shows Bacchus, the Roman god of wine, and his pais, cavorting about in a vernal setting. Around the bowl part of the pitcher, in lettering which seems to be made of small metal rods slanted and set into the pottery, is the legend: "Good is Not Good Enough. The Best is Not Too Good." This piece is marked "Doulton, Lambeth, England." There is a pitcher of "thousand eye pattern." The surface of the pitcher is covered with glass knobs and when you hold the vessel up to the light each knob seems to catch reflections from the other knobs and a "thousand" pinpoints of light are to be seen on each knob. There is a grand little Wedgwood pitcher. This piece, named for the English pottery maker, Josiah Wedgwood, is of rich blue porcelain, decorated with a white cameo relief. The depth and richness of color, and the painstaking detail of the cameo make this pitcher one of the finest in the collection. There are copper luster and bronze luster pitchers. There are topaz thumbprint and cranberry thumbprint pitchers. There are the always popular hobnail pitchers. There is a Dresden china pitcher, the kind famed for its fine workmanship and delicate design. There is a brass and leather pitcher from China, and there are pitchers decorated with colored seashells formed to represent flowers. There are pitchers made of glass threads, which are pitchers in form only, for their open basket-like weave wouldn't hold molasses in January. Then there is an elaborate pitcher designed by a friend to plague pitcher fanciers. It is a nice looking piece of pottery, but on the bowl is printed the legend "Drink—if You Can." Examination of the pitcher reveals that around its throat are a number of designs, which are punched clear through the porcelain. In case you seek to fool the pitcher and hold the holes closed with one hand while you drink from the spout, you're doomed for disappointment. For the spout looks like the real thing, but it is completely closed off from the body of the pitcher. The pitcher was added to the collection by a well known Philadelphia wag. Every pitcher in the collection has a history, and because most of them were given by friends and acquaintances, each one holds a special significance to Miss Bilger. "Where does this collection business end?" a friend asked her the other day after viewing the collection. "End?" Miss Bilger said. "It never ends. I'm going to get more room for them."

WINGATE

Mahlon Smith and most of his poultry crew: Clark Custer, Donald MacMillan, Henry Summers, Frank Summers, Sam Estright and his father, John Smith, gave a party at one of their hunting camps in Henry of their neighbor and friend, Henry Malone, who will soon be inducted into the army. Mrs. Ida Witmer was given a surprise when her two great-nephews, Lt. Ralph Poorman of New Jersey, and Cpl. Guy Poorman of Atlanta, Ga., made a pleasant call with her on Monday evening and found her getting food from her Victory garden which she prides very much. It was fine their furloughs came at the same time. Later in the evening she came to Millsburg and found her great-grandson, Darrel Emshizer of Port Bliss, Texas, home on furlough just in time for his graduation, with his brother Cyril Kay and sister, Beze, all from Bellefonte High School. Mrs. Witmer is much pleased with the success of her three great-grandchildren. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fisher and daughter Gail, motored to Yarnell to visit Mrs. Fisher's brother, Clair Shawley, who has been confined to his bed for several weeks, but who we are glad to hear, is convalescing and gaining in weight. His many friends wish for him a speedy recovery. Mrs. Maud Robb is entertaining her friend, who to her is Mother Gardner of Howard, the last couple of weeks. Her son, William and wife and brother John Brickley, spent Sunday at their home near Howard, returning in the evening.

There will be a WCTU local institute held at the United Brethren church at Runville, Tuesday, in the afternoon and evening. Rev. R. H. Courtney, the host minister, will conduct the devotions at 1:30, and Mrs. Berthalee Broyles, state director for peace, and Mrs. Isabelle White, the county president, will be the speakers in the afternoon. Mrs. Maud Robb will bring the evening devotions. A gold medal contest will take place at 7:45, and Rev. H. H. Jacobs will be the principal speaker for the evening. A box luncheon will be served and the ladies of the church will serve coffee. Other items also will comprise the program and a good time is anticipated. Everybody is cordially invited to attend both sessions, and also enjoy the social hour.

AXE MANN

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Rote and son Billie of Pleasant Gap, bicycled to Axemann on Sunday afternoon and enjoyed a lawn supper with Mr. and Mrs. Simon E. Rote. Lloyd Woomer spent Sunday with his sisters at State College, and was a dinner guest of Misses Carrie and Ruth Woomer, and lunch with Mrs. Robert Edmiston. Loren Ray, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Ray, has gone to Washington, Pa., to spend the summer with the Morrison brothers on the farm. The trouble with people, as we see it, is that they talk too much about too little. The U-boats, it seems, are not meeting with the success that Herr Hitler planned.

FALSE TEETH That Loosen Need Not Embarrass Many wearers of false teeth have suffered real embarrassment because their plate dropped, slipped or wobbled at just the wrong time. Do not live in fear of this happening to you. Just spray a little PASTETH, the alkaline (non-acid) powder, on your plates. Holds false teeth more firmly, so they feel more comfortable. Does not sour cheeks (plate odor) (denture breath). Get PASTETH at any drug store.
