More eloquent than a hundred volumes, than a thousand orations, is the message Rudy Wettstein brings into his candidacy for Sheriff of Centre County.

Rudy, who years ago lost both hands and most of both arms through accident, but who through almost unbelievable resourcefulness has resumed a normal life in spite of his handicap, asks only that voters forget that he is handicapped.

Would a man who has learned to use a saw and hammer, shovel coal, write, drive a truck, change tires hunt, fish, wheel a wheelbarrow. shave, and perform scores of other tisks, without hands, find any task in the Sherifi's office too difficult to ac omplish?

Rudy and Rudy's friends believe not.
