WILL YOU HELP

End The War More Quickly?

* Do you know how long this war will last? Of course not! And we don't know either! But we do know that unless we conserve fuel, transportation, materials and manpower, it will last much longer than it should.

On September 15th the War Production Board asked the people of America to conserve electricity as a means of saving these vital resources. West Penn is cooperating in this Voluntary Conservation Program as are thousands of our customers, but a still greater participation is necessary and urgent.

You will help bring a speedier end to this war by your vigorous support of this nation-wide conservation effort.

Conservation in Commercial and Industrial Establishments is Vital

The War Production Board plan suggests a number of things which commercial establishments can do to reduce their use of electricity without serious harm. It is recommended, for example, that the use of electricity for advertising signs and lighted show windows be greatly reduced. In industrial plants, all possible economies should be effected in the use of motors and other electric equipment, and illuminated signs can probably be dispensed with.

It is definitely suggested that essential lighting must not be curtailed for schools, hospitals and war plants, or for aviation, military, police or transportation purposes, or when affecting war production and safety.

West Penn has sent its commercial and industrial customers its interpretation of the Program and urged their participation.

Conservation in the Home Is Also Necessary

Homemakers are asked to save by not burning lights unnecessarily, and by not wasting electricity for their radios and appliances. No hardship is expected of anyoneeither in sacrificing the amount of lighting needed for good seeing, or in giving up the benefits of appliances used in normal living. It is the wasteful use of electricity that should be eliminated to speed the war's end.

Electricity is plentiful enough for all needs. There is no shortage of power. It is the saving of fuel, transportation, materials and manpower toward which this Voluntary Conservation Program is directed.

When you use electricity unnecessarily you waste fuel, transportation, materials and manpower
