—We are happy to predict that the coming winter will be an easy one, insofar as snow is concerned. The date of the fall of the first snow of the winter is supposed to indicate the number of snows there will be during the winter. Bellefonte's first snow fell about 9:30 a. m. Wednesday morning, November 10, so there will be only 10 snows during the winter. Just to be on the safe side, however, we advise having a snow shovel sturdy enough to last through a few more than that. Yesterday's snow was light and melted as it struck the ground.

—Something new in light, convenient shopping baskets, only 89c, at Claster's Hardware.

URGENT PARENTS TO VISIT SCHOOL CLASSES

This is American Education Week. Too few of the parents of Bellefonte have visited the school classrooms during regular school hours, officials report. This is their opportunity to meet or become better acquainted with Johnnie's or Mary's teacher, to observe the general conduct of the class, to see the necessary links in the teamwork between teacher and students to attain the object of each day's work, to learn the real objects of the school program, to realize more fully the duties or duties of parents as a background to their children's education, to accept the privilege of working with the teachers through a better understanding of their common cause—the best and most from the education program for their children.

Many parents will find it impossible, for one reason or another, to come to school this week. The invitation to visit the classroom stands for every hour of every school day of the year. Bellefonte school officials said. It is hoped any parent, in the best interests of our children, that every parent make a real effort to visit his child's classroom this week or some time during the remainder of the school year.
