

D-E "Reynolds" Completed In 25 Days by Bethlehem-Hingham Yard

A new world's record in ship construction was achieved November 3 by the Bethlehem-Hingham shipyard when it delivered the 1,300-ton destroyer-escort "Reynolds" within 25 days of the time the keel was laid.

The ship, which will carry a complement of 185 officers and men and cost approximately $3,500,000, was delivered to the United States Navy which in turn will place it in the service of the British Royal Navy for anti-U-boat and convoy duty in the Atlantic.

This record surpasses by more than 20 days the mark set by Bethlehem in the first World War when it delivered the destroyer "Reid" to the American Navy 45 1/2 days after the laying of the keel, a new record up to that time.

The first group of the "Reynolds" type of ship built for this war by the Bethlehem-Hingham yard required 302 days to complete. The next group in her class required 206 days. The yard is busy constructing additional destroyer-escorts which will join the "Reynolds" in the British Navy.

The "Reynolds" will be turned over to Admiral H. T. Smith, Supervisor of Shipbuilding, U.S.N. Quincy, Mass., by General Manager W. H. Collins of the Bethlehem Hingham yard.

Admiral Smith will then deliver the vessel to the British commanding officer and she will immediately become formally designated "H. M. S. Reynolds."

The "Reynolds," like her sister ships, is built for speed and quick-handling fire power. She has three revolving cannons, a 40-mm. Bofors gun, each barrel capable of 120 rounds of 2-pound projectiles per minute, effective at 2,500 yards against air or surface targets.

It also possesses numerous 20-mm. Oerlikon machine guns with a potential fire power of nearly 500 shells a minute. A potent feature of her armament are various K-guns for throwing down 300-pound "ash cans."

The "Reynolds" type of destroyer-escort is 308 feet long and 36 feet in breadth and is known in Naval circles as the "Terrier of the Sea." Her superstructure has been described as a "cross between an overgrown submarine conning tower and a gigantic tank turret."

The wheel-house, bridge and chartroom are completely encased in protective steel armor. The two stepped-down gun platforms just forward are among the features which contribute to an altogether modern appearance.

Aft of the bridge are the short mast and the squat stack, flanked and followed by odd-shaped bulges, platforms and cranes which provide additional gun-mounts.

The vessel has been described by Naval men as being something between a corvette and a destroyer in size and Naval men proudly declare that she can outrun the fastest corvette or submarine.

The design of the destroyer-escort was conceived three years ago by Admiral E. L. Cochrane, Chief of the Bureau of Ships, Washington, D. C. He created it after making a four-months study in England of all angles of the Atlantic convoy problem. He concluded that a larger, faster and more heavily armed ship than the corvette was needed successfully to combat the growing U-boat menace along the Anglo-American ocean lanes. Navy ship designers and engineers then laid the plans for the construction of the destroyer-escort.

It includes the last word in marine innovations for both warfare and navigation and it has been one of the important contributing factors in the successful Allied war against the Nazi undersea craft.

When the Navy first assigned the construction of escort-destroyers to the Bethlehem-Hingham yard, its officers planned that it would require four months to build, from keel-laying to launching.

The Bethlehem-Hingham yard quickly put into operation the latest assembly line methods for quantity production, and progressively whittled the construction time down, as pointed out above, until this new world record was achieved.

FOREST PRODUCTS MARKETING SERVICE

Now is the time to cut and market the mature timber on the farm woodlot. There is a Forest Products Marketing Service in Centre and Clearfield counties administered by the Pennsylvania Department of Forests and Waters.

J. C. Middour, formerly farm forester for Clearfield and Centre counties, has been transferred to Harrisburg, and Frank W. Smale is now farm forester for this area. Headquarters is in the office of the District Forester, Keystone Building, Clearfield.

The farm forester will give assistance to the small woodlot owner in estimating and marketing timber to be cut, and in negotiating sales with timber operators.

Lumber and other forest products are urgently needed for the prosecution of the war. Woodland owners with forest products they desire to market, while still maintaining the productivity of their woodlots, should get in touch with the Farm Forester, Keystone Building, Clearfield, Pa.

If you expect everybody to agree with you it is a sign that you are adolescent.
