transported laboring men by the millions into Germany, where they serve as slaves to the Nazi masters.

material things, made the population serve the needs of German

Contrast this with what happens when soldiers of the United Nations go into a conquered land. They feed the people, rearrange the internal economy and attempt to encourage the democratic processes of freedom. The population is not enslaved to permit the shipment of goods to the people of other lands and there is no deportation of laborers to work in foreign factories.

Obviously, a nation can make peace with an enemy which is willing to let live as well as to live. It cannot accept the domination of an enemy, however, which takes all and leaves nothing, either of material or spiritual things. It is plainly a case of life or death for the defeated, and their civilization. Peace becomes the equivalent of destruction. In fact, there can be no peace at all.

For these reasons the war against Germany and her allies must continue until the power of the Nazi regime is so weakened that its poisonous philosophy is rendered incapable of harming other people. The fangs of the serpent must be removed, or the serpent slain, before there can be safety along the pathways of peace.

A Bughouse Tale

A male nurse in a mental hospital noticed a patient with his ear close to the wall, listening intently. The patient held up a finger as a warning for him to be very quiet, then beckoned him over and said: "You isten here."

The nurse put his ear to the wall and listened for some time, then turned to the patient and said: "I can't hear anything."

"No," said the patient, "and it's been like that all day."
