arms," the report said. They were kept in this position in the blazing sun for two full days. Periodically the Japanese beat them with a two-by-four, and any Filipino unlucky enough to pass that way was compelled to beat them, too. If he failed to beat them hard enough, the Japanese beat him. After two days of this, one of the officers was beheaded and the other two were shot. "The Japanese made every effort to humiliate their prisoners of war. They would force them to stand and call them vile names. When one older American colonel turned away from a Japanese reviling him, he was knocked unconscious with a blackjack. American flags were habitually used as rags in the Janaese kitchens,"

The death rate at Cabanatuan in June and July, 1942, was 30 Americans a day, the three officers reported; the rate in August more than 20 a day, and in September 15 a day-"because by that time most of the weaker men were already dead." During October it ranged upward from 16 to 19 a day and was increasing when Dyess, Mellnik and McCoy left Cabanatuan.
