Health and Beauty

"HE GIVETH HIS BELOVED SLEEP"

"I dread going to bed! I know that I shall not sleep," said a nervous, worried-looking woman. "I have taken so much sleeping medicine that it has no effect on me any more, so I may as well content myself to lie awake."

It is a pity that people learned the use of such drugs, or that they are often obtained without the prescription of a physician. While most of the hypnotics are not habit-forming in the sense that the narcotics are, still they can do irreparable injury to neurotics and those who are particularly susceptible to their influence.

There are various causes for sleeplessness. Any emotional upset, fear, anger, grief, or disappointment, tends to drive away sleep. Also the habit of taking problems to bed to be thought over, or business to be straightened out, causes wakefulness. Shakespeare makes many allusions to the subject. He pictures Macbeth as kept awake by a guilty conscience: "Me thought I heard a voice cry: 'Sleep no more! Macbeth does murder sleep, the innocent sleep.'"

He who would learn to sleep like a child must ponder the reasons why. The child does not worry; neither does he carry his griefs to bed with him. He plays hard in the open air and is healthily tired when night comes. If he has wise caretakers, he is given an early supper which is simple and nourishing. He sleeps in a cool, well ventilated room. His bed clothes are light and adapted to the season.

He is happy for he is surrounded by love. If he is troubled he can take his little worries and problems to wise and sympathetic parents who will assist him in smoothing them all out. He does not fear insecurity for he knows that he will be provided for.

Here is a lesson that grownups may well take to heart. Just as the child trusts his parents and finds security and happiness, so must those who have reached maturity trust their Heavenly Father. If they too would experience the sense of security and peace that is characteristic of childhood.

Though the little ones come to father and mother in simple faith to make their requests known, they do not always get what they ask for, but they are content because father and mother know best. So love and trust in our Heavenly Father enables us to confront the tragedies, sorrows, and disappointments of life without bitterness.

Only those who are at peace conquer our disturbing emotions and triumph over them.

Only those who are at peace with themselves and with the world enjoy sound, undisturbed sleep.

The anxiety and fear which lead to wakefulness are often due to physical causes. Sometimes it is induced by nervousness caused from indigestion. The physician should be consulted. Sometimes an uncomfortable bed, a poorly ventilated room, or discomfort hinders sound and restful sleep.

Learn to relax. It is said that "two hours of sound sleep and six or eight hours of relaxation" enables poor sleepers to carry on their usual work.

"Of all the thoughts of God that are born upward unto souls afar Among the Psalmist's music deep Now tell me if that any is. For gift or grace, surpassing this He giveth His Beloved Sleep."

Success comes to the individual who is willing to put everything behind an undertaking, regardless of risk.

BLANCHARD

The Baptist church is sponsoring a community night service in that church every Wednesday evening until Easter. These services are primarily pre-Easter services with several speakers from other communities. All are welcome.

Miss June Miller, one of our high school girls of exceptional talent, was called to Lewistown last Thursday for an audition before judges searching for talent for the radio with the "All Girl Orchestra." Records were made of the girls' voices but June's record was broken when she arrived at Cleveland, Ohio, so she was forced to make another recording on Sunday at WRAC, Williamsport. Possibly the only hindering circumstance here is the fact of age. Our contestant has not reached the required age.

GRANGE LEADER DIES SUDDENLY

Calvin Ash Stillman, 66, prominent Grange leader and state deputy master for five years, died suddenly of a heart attack at his home in Williamsport. Born in Armstrong county and reared in Ringold township, Jefferson county, Mr. Stillman moved to Williamsport 28 years ago. The deceased was ordained a member of the Lutheran church but never served a regular pastorate. He was a representative for the American Book Co., until his retirement in 1941.

TWO NEW EVANGELISM CLASSES OPEN IN COUNTY

Two new classes in Child Evangelism have been started in Blanchard and Monument in the past few weeks. These classes and the training class that started in the Milesburg Presbyterian church last Friday night, show a steady growth in the work in the county.

The training is proving helpful to those who are preparing themselves for more efficient work among boys and girls. This Friday night will be the last opportunity for anyone to enroll in the course which will continue every Friday night for six weeks.

Central City Bible Club, which was opened on January 3, is steadily growing with an enrollment of sixty and an average attendance of forty-five. This week's attendance was the highest so far, numbering fifty.

TWO TYRONE MEN HURT IN FREIGHT CRASH

Three trainmen, two from Tyrone, were injured Tuesday when the rear end of an Altoona-bound P. R. R. freight train was struck by two engines on a siding 10 miles north of Altoona. The injured are listed as G. L. Igo, 56, Tyrone, conductor of the freight train; G. L. Smith, 37, Elmira, pilot conductor, and A. G. Updike, 47, Tyrone, bagman. The freight train and the two engines were ordered on the siding to permit a northbound train to pass shortly before the collision occurred. The three men were in the caboose which was wrecked. Four other cars were derailed.
