—Paperhanging and painting these days oftentimes is a lonely business. Time was when every paperhanger had an assistant to paste the paper and hand the pasted pieces up to be hung. But with the shortage of manpower it has become a one-man job. Ask George Derr, of the McGinley Brothers staff, who is employed at the Leona Hotel, where he worked alone the entire time. Maybe the ancient expression "As busy as a paperhanger with the hives" originated back in some other troublesome time when only one worker could be spared to any one paper hanging job. It's our considered opinion that it takes a fast and footloose two-handed man to hang paper with any degree of success, and most of the time two helpers are absolutely necessary.
