Local Clubs Hear Talk On Russia

the other from Ecuador.

Mrs. Jermain, the principal speaker, was introduced by James H. Craig, vice president of the Titan Metal Company, who explained that the guest speaker, now a U. S. citizen, came here from Russia in 1934 and is recognized as an authority on Russian affairs.

Everyone who is able works in Russia, Mrs. Jermain said. Women work side by side with men and have entire equality with them. Marriage is not considered as a career in that land, and living conditions are so bad that two persons in a family almost have to work to keep the family going.

To understand Russia, the speaker explained, it is necessary to remember that there the state comes first, then the individual. In the United States, the individual comes first, then the state. In practical application this means that in Russia everyone works to better the country, in the belief that as the country as a whole improves the lot of the individual will do likewise.

When a Russian works, he is paid for his ability. A skilled worker receives a higher wage than an unskilled one. If a man produces more than his day's quota of work he receives extra payment. The incentive to work, therefore, is retained.

Russia has free schools for all up to and including college for those with a capability for higher learning. Russia has free medical service, free hospitalization, free dental service, unemployment insurance, old age benefits for all. No one in Russia need fear that he or his family will suffer if he becomes ill, or too old to work. The state guarantees him security against all such eventualities. In this respect, the speaker said, Russia is far ahead of the United States.

No Russian has a chance to build up a fortune, or large estate. All sources of production are government-owned. No one may profit personally from the work of others. Russians are realists. They have no time for sentimentality in their business dealings.

Mrs. Jermain declared that all these factors add up to the significant fact that after the war Russia has a chance of becoming the ideal for other poor, downtrodden nations, instead of the United States. Russia, since the revolution in 1917, has become a highly industrial nation; it has changed from a nation in which 93 per cent of the people were illiterate to one in which 97 per cent are literate at least to the extent that they can read. The nation has changed from one in which the ruling family and lords owned virtually all wealth, parceling out crumbs to the people who were little better than slaves, to one in which all persons have employment and all are assured of security in the future.

If Russia could do this for itself, Mrs. Jermain said, other nations will feel that they can do the same.

Unless the United States plans its resources, co-ordinates its industry so that the government knows how much what is produced and where it is going, the U. S. will have 20 years of prosperity after this war, and then a depression, the speaker predicted.

Russia has planned its economy. It knows what it wants, and it knows how to get it.

The people of the United States don't like regimentation, Mrs. Jermain declared, but it's coming. No president, no congress, no group of men can decide on such questions. The change is in the times, and no matter who is head of the government the changes will come, she said.

886 Anglers at Paradise Opening

1273 trout, of which 558 were killed. The trout were divided as follows: 82 brookies, 218 brown, and 158 rainbow.

That's the first day story, although you could go on and tell about the considerable number of "miller" men getting in a little prime fishing while on furloughs. The white and the black was the lure that seemed to spell doom for most of the trout hooked on the first day.

Or you could tell about Lynn Henninger, aged 13, of State College, who two minutes after the fishing began at 9 a. m., caught an 18-inch rainbow, and 15 seconds later caught a 14-inch brown trout. He couldn't fish any more that day, but wouldn't go home because he said if he did he'd "have to go to school."

Mrs. George Bolton, of Portage, had her two trout by 9:20 in the women's special area. One was a 14-inch brown and the other a 22-inch rainbow. Henry Austin, of Mantz, Co., got a 22-inch brown and a 20-inch brown trout weighing 60 and 40 ounces respectively.

The water was high and cloudy, and a series of severe rainstorms, Saturday evening, turned the stream into a cocoa-like shade. The waters remained that way early this week and the streams are not expected to clear until late this week—barring more rain. Memorial Day found about 900 at the Paradise registered as fishermen. The total enrollment of anglers up to the night of Memorial Day was 2872, or an average of 718 persons each of the first four days.

James May and James Biddle, who are in charge of registrations at the gate, said there have been more women than usual, lots of youngsters, a goodly number of soldiers and sailors, and a surprising number of out-of-state anglers.

WEST POINT AND ANNAPOLIS EXAMINATIONS TO BE HELD

All prospective candidates are urged to notify Congressman Brumbaugh before June 15, 1944.

FARM CALENDAR

Timely Reminders From The Pennsylvania State College School of Agriculture

Grow Emergency Pasture—Sudan grass is the most productive and palatable emergency pasture crop, according to extension agronomists of the Pennsylvania State College. Sown now on a fertile, well-prepared soil, it will carry about three cows an acre from mid-July until the grass is killed by frost.

Maggot Attacks Crops—The seed corn maggot attacks peas and beans as well as corn, say extension entomologists of the Pennsylvania State College. Plant the seeds somewhat thicker and not so deep as usual to get a quick germination of the seeds before the maggots have an opportunity to destroy them.

Market Wool Clip—Practically all the medium wool produced in Pennsylvania will be handled through the 31 wool growers' cooperative association, report livestock extension specialists of the Pennsylvania State College. Last year these groups marketed 652,000 pounds of wool for 4900 members.

Stop Broody Turkeys—If turkey hens are penned the first day they become broody, they can be returned to the breeding pens in about three days and often will start laying 2 to 5 days later, according to Penn State poultry specialists.

Destroy Bagworms—Unless the bag-like structures hanging from branches of evergreens are destroyed soon, the hundreds of bagworm eggs in them will hatch and small shade trees and shrubbery will suffer attacks in late summer, say Penn State entomologists.

Grow Hog Feed—Fields of several varieties of soybeans, planted in May to produce early feed for hogs, say Penn State livestock specialists. The sweet corn will help relieve the feed shortage.

LOSS $2,500 IN ODD ACCIDENT ON MOUNTAIN

A truck that rolled over and landed on its wheels was damaged to the amount of $2,500 in an unusual accident on the Snow Shoe Mountain near the Beech Creek bridge at 8 a. m. last Tuesday.

The driver of the truck, Henry L. Dewald, Williamsport, received brush burns and lacerations of the left arm and hand.

Dewald said he lost control of his truck while it was going down the mountain when his windshield was struck by a large section of concrete pipe from a passing truck operated by Darwin L. Merrill of Montoursville, R. D. The piece of sewer pipe and seven other pieces fell off Merrill's tractor and semi-trailer when one of the trailer's tires blew out.

The one piece of pipe was thrown through the windshield and was driven close to the driver. The truck then ploughed into the remaining sections that were thrown to the road. The Dewald truck, loaded with seven tons of coal, swerved to the left and rolled over at the side of the road.

Loss aside from the truck driven by Dewald was to the eight pieces of pipe which were valued at $50. Dewald received treatment at the office of a Snow Shoe physician.

PLAN TO HARVEST ELDERBERRY CROP

Plans are being completed for the harvesting again this year of Centre county's elderberry, blackberry and huckleberry crops—crops which have attained a new importance in the national economy through wartime scarcity of other small fruits.

Those in a position to know report that in coming years farmers in the locality will give some thought to cultivating the elderberry bush so that the quality of the berry can be improved.

Announcement of preparations to harvest the crop again this year will be welcome news to many women and children who aided in the program last year.

Among the many uses to which the elderberry is being put are the following: synthetic quinine, pectin, jelly, jam, concentrated pie filling, coloring, and in the wine industry. Money is being spent continually in experimentation upon new uses.

4-H CLUB CAMPS PLANNED FOR YOUTHS TO RELAX

Although boys and girls of the numerous 4-H Clubs throughout the state are planning the busiest summer season in history, they also want 4-H Club camps for a few days of relaxation and recreation.

Leaders at the state 4-H Club offices at the Pennsylvania State College have already planned to conduct six sectional camps, two county camp periods, and 17 of the popular one-day camps this summer. Requests for these came from the recent series of leader training meetings.

The youths are also preparing to assume a leading role in producing and preserving food this summer, the leaders reveal.
