Make Large Hay Crop Having High Quality

Clover and Alfalfa stands in Centre County are generally good. The rains which have retarded farm operations should make a heavy hay crop, says Co. Agent R. C. Blaney.

With local and nation-wide shortages of grain and protein foods facing farmers, the largest usable supply and highest possible quality in forage are doubly important. Forage high in protein, digestibility and palatability cuts down the need for grain and reduces maintenance cost of livestock.

Early-cut hay is high in protein, palatability and digestibility. Stock will eat more of it, digest it more completely and thus get along with less grain and lower protein grain mixtures. Late-cut hay is rapidly approaching the seed and straw stage. To get all the crop harvested before it becomes too old, especially with limited labor, one may need to start haying before the generally recommended stage. Very early cutting may sacrifice some total weight but enrageally gives a net gain in protein and total digestible nutrients.

Clover should be cut in full bloom. A good second crop for seed depends on early cutting of the first crop. Vigorous stands of alfalfa in the southern counties should be cut in early bloom, according to extension agronomists of the Pennsylvania State College. Where only two crops of alfalfa are to be harvested, or where the stand is not too vigorous, waiting for 50 per cent bloom may be advisable.

Timothy, to make acceptable cow hay, should be cut at or before the bloom stage. Triple-purpose mixtures of Ladino clover and orchard grass should be cut before their haying starts. Orchard grass quickly becomes overripe and nearly worthless. If the weather is unsatisfactory for haying, such material makes excellent silage.

Next in importance to timely cutting is proper curing. Hay must be dry enough to keep properly. Tough hay is a fire hazard. "Tobacco-cured" hay may seem palatable, but it may have lost as much as 30 per cent of its dry matter. Overdrying in the swath results in serious shattering losses of leaves, which are the best part of the hay. Partly dry hay bleached by rain in the swath may lose 25 per cent of its dry matter and become very low in palatability. Even dew on dry hay reduces its feeding value. After it is about half dry, hay should finish curing in small windrows. Rake before night all material cut before noon. Field baling or chopping into the mow may reduce labor and save space, but hay so handled must be as dry as for mow stage.

"approved" cards to the county election board in the Commissioners' offices. From that stage on, the military ballot will be in the hands of the county election board. The first requirement that board must meet is to mail military ballots out not less than 65 days before the election.

In the event any homes in the county are missed in the forthcoming house-to-house canvass, such householders are urged to get in touch with their area captain so that the survey will be complete and accurate.

Churches Fix Hour For D-Day Prayers

The Bellefonte Ministerial Association, in a statement released this week, called upon the residents of this area to observe "D" day in the sober and serious manner the mammoth undertaking deserves, and announced that all churches in Bellefonte will be open at 10 a. m. the morning following the announcement to remain open for prayer according to announcements to be made later, the statement continued.

The text of the Ministerial Association's release follows:

"The invasion of Western Europe, better known as 'D' Day, will be a serious undertaking, the success of which will determine the future destiny of a free world. It will be a costly venture—the land will run red with the blood of human sacrifice—lives will be lost or shattered—homes of Christian people from many nations will suffer overwhelming grief.

"The very nature of this unprecedented venture impels the Bellefonte Ministerial Association to urge that the announcement of 'D' Day be attended not with noisome celebration, fanfare, parades, or indulgence but with the seriousness it deserves. The much-heralded invasion of Western Europe will be the pivot on which free people will receive to greater freedom and security or to slavery and tyranny.

"When thousands of our own flesh and blood will be giving up their lives, we feel that the imperative need is a call to prayer and penitence. We, therefore, urge that our people consider 'D' Day as a period in which to begin a concerted and unanimous spiritual awakening. We, therefore, wish to announce that all churches of Bellefonte (Protestant) will be open for prayer at 10 a. m. on the morning following the announcement that the invasion had begun, and will continue to be open for prayer according to announcement made in the churches. Now is the time for prayer and penitence."

FARM CALENDAR

Timely Reminders From The Pennsylvania State College School of Agriculture

CUT HAY EARLY—Extension agronomists of the Pennsylvania State College says that early-cut hay is high in protein, palatability, and digestibility. Stock will eat more of it, digest it more completely, and thus get along with less grain and lower protein grain mixtures than if they are forced to eat late-cut wood hay.

HOGS EAT SOYBEANS—Winter pasture for brood sows can be provided in a field of soybeans. The vines will furnish roughage and the beans will take the place of part of the grain feed needed, say livestock specialists of the Pennsylvania State College. Generally, one acre will provide enough for three sows to harvest over winter.

PROTECT CATTLE—A common cattle malady is known as "hardware disease." It is caused by the swallowing of nails, staples, pieces of baling wire or fence wire, and other sharp pieces of metal. Livestock specialists of the Pennsylvania State College urge care in gathering up such materials after repairs are made.

TEACH CHICKS TO ROOST—An easy way to teach chicks to roost is to stretch a piece of poultry netting across the front of the roosting platform shortly after dusk and after chicks have been driven to the platform, say Penn State Poultry extension specialists.

CLIP PASTURES NOW—Pastures should be clipped now and also later in the season to get rid of the older, tougher growth that the cows refuse to eat, say Penn State extension agronomists. Surprisingly,
