

Story Heroic Crash Landing

Three Pennsylvania airmen, one of whom resides at South Philadelphia, Centre county, were on the Eighth AAF B-17 flying Fortress "Shy-Anne" when it flew from Northern Germany across the North Sea on only one engine, and made a crash landing in England that cost the lives of two of the crew.

On the big bomber that day it was a pre-invasion assault on Nazi shipping at Kiel were 2nd Lieut. Patrick D. O'Brien, 26, of Punksawney, pilot; Staff Sgt. Robert Williamson, 20, of South Philadelphia, ball turret gunner; and Staff Sgt. Wilbur L. Smith, 20, of Erie, waist gunner.

The B-17 ran into heavy anti-aircraft fire over the target, and flak knocked out two of its engines. Crossing the sea, a third motor, also flak-riddled, went out, and the bomber lost altitude rapidly, just barely making the English coast and an emergency airfield a few miles inland. It crash-landed at the airfield, skidded across a railroad track, and came to rest in the back yard orchard of an English farmer.

The No. 1 and No. 4 engines were disabled by flak's flak, and while Pilot O'Brien was able to feather the propeller on No. 1, the one on No. 4 windmilled all the way back. The plane vibrated badly, and was out of formation by the time the enemy was recrossed on the way back home.

"The Fort looked like a sieve," Sgt. Smith recalled. "All the engines were full of flak. Even the radio batteries had been hit and we had trouble keeping up communications. When we got over water, we ripped out the guns and threw them overboard, and threw out flak suits, some of the radio equipment, cartridge cases, everything to lighten us. But we were still losing altitude."

The No. 3 engine, also hit over the target, was "acting up" during the flight across the sea, and about 70 miles from England, it too went out. O'Brien, who had to feather No. 3 had to feather No. 2, and the Fortress coasted back, losing altitude all the way to England, and on the one remaining motor.

"We just made the emergency landing field," Sgt. Smith said. "We skidded off the field and tore up a railroad track and wound up in the back yard of some English house. Trees in the orchard stopped us. When we hit, the left wheel came off and tore through the side of the plane and into the radio room. It didn't touch any of us in there. I don't see how it didn't."

Afraid that the bomber would burst into flames, the crewmen left it as rapidly as they could. Sgt. Smith who was wounded himself (he has since recovered and is back on duty), dragged out the top turret gunner and took him to the grass nearby, where he died a few minutes later. The other gunners got the co-pilot out. He was already dead. The pilot was pinned in by his controls and the men had to pull them loose to get him out uninjured. The other crewmen suffered only minor bruises and cuts.

OUR BOYS IN THE SERVICE

EDITOR'S NOTE:

All of the limited production of Wrigley's Spearmint Chewing Gum is being shipped overseas to our Armed Forces. Wartime difficulties make it impossible to produce sufficient quantity of quality gum to supply everybody. We are all missing Wrigley's Spearmint—but until the Wrigley people can bring it back, they hope that you will get some satisfaction and pleasure reading about your Service friends and relatives in this news column sponsored by Wrigley's.

After shipping from Norfolk, Va. late in May, Donald E. Williams, M.O.M.M. 2 of LST 989, was received safely in port in North Africa, according to a letter received by his mother, Mrs. Isabelle Laughner, of Pleasant Gap. In his letter he requested his mother to extend his regards to his former co-workers at the Titan, where he was employed prior to his induction in July, 1943.

When the boys are fighting, they aren't able to take along everything they want. But fortunately, Wrigley's Spearmint is a little thing in size. For the men overseas who want it badly though, Wrigley's Spearmint is a big thing when it comes to fighting under severe nervous strain.

William Allison Reese, S 2 c, of Edendale, returned to camp after a 10-day furlough with home folks. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Reese of Edendale. He took his boot training at Great Lakes, Ill., and then was sent to Camp Endicot, R. I. He entered the Navy on March 31st this year and likes it a lot.

Of course, not all of the fighting men overseas chew Wrigley's Spearmint, but those men who know the help it gives them when they are under tension, have found it essential. So, they are sending Wrigley's Spearmint Gum overseas only, to the men that want it.

Word was received from Pvt. Orvis Tierney last week that he had recently arrived in England. Before going overseas he had been stationed at Camp Polk, La. Before induction into the armed forces, March 20, 1943, he was employed at Williamsport. He is a son of Mrs. Rose Tierney.

On Ireland's Soil

Staff Sgt. Kenneth L. Spicer

Sgt. Spicer, husband of the former Mary C. Scitili of Spring Mills, and son of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm L. Spicer of Bellefonte, R. D. 1, was inducted into service September 18, 1941. After the customary preliminaries at New Cumberland induction center he was sent to Camp Craft, S. C., where he received his basic training.

During the first week of January, 1942, he was transferred to Fort Jackson, S. C., and it was from this post that Sgt. Spicer enjoyed a ten-day furlough upon returning to his base. Sgt. Spicer went on guard duty in North Carolina. In May he went back to the same post.

He was then selected from a group of boys to take a four-months' course in supplies. Upon completion of this training Sgt. Spicer received his staff sergeant rating.

In September, 1942, his outfit left to take part in Tennessee maneuvers, which lasted until the middle of November, after which he enjoyed a seven-day leave. Upon returning to Camp Forrest, his outfit was transferred to Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., for advanced training.

His outfit remained in Missouri until March, 1943, when the Division was selected to take desert training. This training lasted until the last of July.

Again the outfit was sent back to Camp Forrest, Tenn. Sgt. Spicer spent his last furlough in September. After returning to his post he remained there until November when he was shipped to a P. O. E. on the east coast.

Since the middle of December 1943, he has been serving overseas, being stationed in Northern Ireland. He has made two trips to Belfast.

Sgt. Spicer was a graduate of Bellefonte High School in the class of 1940. He helped his father on the farm until he was called to service.

Eligible For Promotion

Bruce D. Gentzel, 18, son of Cora A. Gentzel of Boalsburg, received recognition as eligible to qualify for the petty officer rate of electrician's mate third class during recent graduation exercises at the Naval training school on the campus of the Iowa State College. The bluejacket, now a fireman 2c, completed a course that included practical use of electrical tools, soldering, wiring diagrams and repairing of telephone units. Further duty orders to sea or to some shore station now await the graduated man.

In California

Pvt. Earl Craig

Entering the service November 20, 1942, Pvt. Craig, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Craig, of Julian, is now located at San Francisco, Calif. Before his selection for military service, Pvt. Craig was employed at the McFeely Brick Co. plant.

Centre Hall Man Has Important Post

Technical Sergeant Dean W. Fetterolf, son of Mr. and Mrs. George I. Fetterolf, of Centre Hall, is Chief of the Signal message center at an important Air Force station in England. He has recently been given the assignment of indoctrinating groups of WACs newly arrived overseas, to operate his section. This accomplished, Fetterolf and the men he has worked with in England since October 1942, will be relieved for advanced echelon duty.

Sgt. Fetterolf's section handles scores of teletype messages and sends them to American headquarters throughout the United Kingdom. The message center operates around the clock, rotating in three eight-hour shifts.

Many of the messages which come into Sgt. Fetterolf's hands are of a secret and confidential nature and must be coded and decoded by him. He attended a RAP Code and Cipher school in England. The Sergeant also attended a RAF Anti-Gas Instructor's school which prepared him for his duties as a Chemical Warfare Instructor in his organization.

Sgt. Fetterolf enlisted in March 1941, and before entering the Army, worked as a farmer near his home town. He was graduated in 1936 from the Centre Hall High School.

Local Woman Lieut. Colonel

Chief of England General Hospital at Atlantic City, N. J., Lt. Col. Sara J. Stevenson of Waddle, near State College, who is completing her 26th year as a member of the Army Nurse Corps.

In the excitement at the hospital, located at Atlantic City, N. J., at the news of the invasion, June 6, Lt. Col. Stevenson forgot all about having been promoted the day before from major to her new rank. She is one of the few members of the Army Nurse Corps to attain that commission. There is only one higher ranking officer—Col. Florence A. Blanchfield, superintendent of the ANC.

Lt. Col. Stevenson, one of seven children, enlisted in the ANC in 1918 during World War I, joining at the Army Hospital at Altona. At that time nurses wore no bars on their shoulders but three years later she received her commission as a second lieutenant. In 1939, serving in Washington, came promotion to first lieutenant, in 1942 at New York she was advanced to captain, and early in 1943 to major.

The county lieutenant-colonel has served through interesting times, including the widespread flu epidemic of 1918, and a six weeks period serving for the American relief mission in Japan after the tragic earthquake in 1923. She served two years each in the Philippines and Honolulu, Hawaii. She has worked in most of the well-known Army hospitals such as Walter Reed, the Letterman in San Francisco, Denver, and Fort Sam Houston.

Daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Stevenson of Waddle, Lt. Col. Stevenson was graduated from the Altona City Hospital in 1918 before going into service. She is a sister of Erma Stevenson of Waddle; Frank Stevenson and Mrs. Ella Keller, both of State College; Mrs. Collins Shoemaker of Bellefonte; John Stevenson, of Howard, and Betty Stevenson, of Atlantic City.
