He Got Even

"We helped ourselves to some of your apples, old man," said one of a motor party who stopped near his farm. "Just thought we'd tell you," "Oh, that's all right," the farmer replied. "While you were in the orchard I helped myself to your spare tire."

> . . . Just Made It

Two men in a car went past the traffic lights when they were red, and were stopped by a peliceman.

"I'm sorry, officer," said the driver, thinking quickly. "I happen to be a doctor and I'm taking a patient to the asylum in a hurry." The policeman was suspicious-but the passenger was just as quick. Looking up at the cop with a seraphic smile, he whispered: "Kiss me, darling." They got away with it.

. . . Maybe You Won't Believe This

A man applied for a job as a keeper at the zoo. The vacancy had been filled, but there was an acute shortage of apes and, equipped with a skin, the man was engaged to impersonate one. This he did with great success, entering thoroughly into his part and becoming an adept on the trapeze. Unfortunately he overdid his gymnastics one day and hurtled through the air to land in the lion's en-

"Help!" he yelled as a ferocious looking lion approached him, growling ominously "Shut up!" said the lion. "Do you want to get us both fired?"

. . . Believe It or Not

An elderly colored preacher was stationed in a section of the deep South where his parishioners didn't have much money for his salary, They did help his budget, though, by inviting him out to dinner.

As his presence would make these meals something of an occasion, there would always be chicken on the table-fried chicken, roast chicken, chicken and dumplings, all kinds of chicken.

It so happened after years of these chicken dinners, the old pastor went fishing one day. He lost his balance and dropped his false teeth in the creek. The water quickly covered them and they were lost to his sight. Studying the situation a moment, the preacher reached into his lunch box, took out a chicken bone and tied it to his fishing line.

As the bone dropped below the water level, the false teeth jumped from the creek bettom and clamped firmly on it. The preacher then hauled them out with ease.

But Times Have Changed

Twenty-five years ago a girl never thought about a pair of garters fading in the sunlight.

. . . Who Dat?

Negroes in the South have a habit of saying "Who dat" when anyone knocks at the door late at night. A merchant wanted to collect an old account and knocked at a negro's door, and the negro said: "Who dat?" The merchant replied, "Who dat?" The negro said: "Who dat say who Peary in 1900? dat when I say who dat?" . . .

In The Service

A negro evangelist calling for converts saw a strange negro on the back seat and said: "Brother, don't you want to jine the army of de Lord?" The stranger replied, "I've don Jined." "Where?" asked the evan-gelist. "Down at de Baptist church." The evangelist, a Methodist, shouted: "You didn't jine de army, you jined de navy."

Another Negro went into a Baptist revival while calling for converts and he saw a strange darkey on the back seat and x34 called to him: "Brother, don't you want to have your soul cleaned white as snow?" "I'se had my soul cleaned white as snow," was the reply. 'Where?" asked the preacher, and he said at the Methodist church, "No. you hasn't," said the preacher, "You has just had it dry-cleaned."

Rastus Skinner went home late and his wife, Sal, was not at home so he saw a light in a tent at a revival meeting and rushed in just as the preacher was calling for converts to get salvation. Seeing Rastus coming up, he asked him if he was looking for salvation, Rastus replied; "No, sir, . . .

Wise Papa

A little boy with his father was on the train and had never seen a colored person before. A negro woman got on the train and the little boy said: "Papa, why does that woman have her face and hands blacked?"

The father replied: "Son, her skin is black all over her body." The son said: "Papa, you know everything, don't you?"
