JESUS MEETS LIFE'S PROBLEMS

International Sunday School Lesson
For October 8th, 1944

GOLDEN TEXT:—'Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.'—Matthew 4:4.

Lesson Text: Matthew 4:1-4; 6:31-34; Luke 5:16-21.

Most of us realize that the outstanding problems in the lives of most people is that of providing food and clothing for themselves and for those dependent upon them. So engrossed is the average person in this pursuit that very little time is left for a consideration of that which, after all, is infinitely more important, the satisfaction of spiritual hunger.

While no one would deny that it is necessary for everyone to have sufficient food and clothing that is not all there is to life. Man lives by certain spiritual things like beauty and truth and goodness and love: the true joy of living springs out of these things. Religion is simply these things in their highest forms, for after all, God is the Being in whom beauty and truth and joy and goodness dwell and from whom they flow out to bless the world.

It is an empty life, to be sure, that tries to live by physical bread alone. As a matter of fact, such a life cannot be lived. Every life is touched by fellowship, beauty is all around, truth is there for the having, the love of God is revealed in nature in science and in various other ways.

The first temptation which came to Jesus after his forty days in the wilderness, following his baptism, was the temptation to relieve his physical hunger by turning stones into bread. Jesus met this temptation by quoting Deut. 8:3: "Man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord doth man live." The hunger of the body, while terrible, is not the supreme hunger; the hunger of the soul for satisfaction is. Therefore, later Jesus declares, "Be not anxious about food or drink or clothing (which those who do not acknowledge the true God, the Gentiles, worry about), for you are children of a Heavenly Father who knows your needs better than you do yourself, and being even better than an earthly father, will provide these things for you," but "Seek ye first his kingdom and his righteousness; and all these things (food and drink and clothing) will be added unto you."

It's hard to believe but worry is sin to the Christian. It shows an utter lack of faith in God's goodness to take care of the individual. Dan MacLaren declares "Your anxiety does not empty tomorrow, brother, of its sorrow; but oh, it empties today of its strength." Someone has said that worry is commonly self-centered and selfish and the cure for worry is "a great care and a great trial." If our great care is to seek first God's kingdom and his righteousness and our great trust is in our Heavenly Father who careth for us, we shall not worry.

Jesus was often tired and hungry and thirsty, but we have no instance where he ever became worried or fretful. He trusted his Father; and, as a result, his heart was always serene and peaceful. It was He who said, "Let not your heart be troubled; for God is the Being in whom beauty and truth and joy and goodness dwell and from whom they flow out to bless the world."

This does not mean, however, that the Christian should sit down and do nothing and then expect God to provide everything for him. That just won't happen. However, it does mean that one should put first things first, give God his rightful place in our lives, his rightful part of our time, using the talents he has given us in his service. Then he promises these necessary things will naturally follow. There's never been an instance of a person putting first things first who not have had the luxuries of life but the necessities were always provided.

We can free ourselves of anxiety and worry by filling our lives with thoughts of and service to others. In such service, we will forget ourselves and think of the other fellow. In these days, we see and read about many people who, having lost loved ones on the battle front, become actively engaged in war work in order that, through service for others, they might forget their own sorrows.

WINGATE

There will be worship and Holy Communion services on Sunday evening the 8th and the Christian Endeavor will meet at 7 with Mrs. Z. T. Summers as leader. The Christian Endeavor met Sunday evening and the subject "Using our time" was interesting to all that were present. Mrs. Edna Fisher was elected president, Mrs. Beatrice Summers vice president, and Mrs. Geraldine Murray, secretary; the treasurer will be selected later. All are welcome to these services.

Mrs. Willis Neff and daughter of Curtin, were callers at the Murray home the latter part of the week. Mrs. Charles Reese spent the weekend with her brother and wife in Williamsport, Mr. and Mrs. Toner Watson. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Walker gave a dinner in honor of their nephew, Pfc. Donald Walker, who is on a 21 day furlough from over seas. Those participating were with the above, Mr. John Walker and daughter Cora and son Edward, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Moore and son Paul and daughter Doris from Karlsruhe, Mr. and Mrs. Blanchard Fye and children Joy, Robert, Lucy and Lloyd, and Mrs. Anna Norton from Moshannon, Mrs. Ida Witmer and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Walker sons, Edward, Richard, Arthur, Jimmie and Tommie. It was also Mrs. Walker's birthday and she received lovely and useful gifts and greetings from her many friends.

THE OFFICE CAT
"A Little Nonsense Now and Then, is Relished by the Wisest Men"
Smoke Rings
(With apologies to the unknown poet)
Bad men like women to be like cigarettes.
Waiting in a row, all slender-like and trim,
So many in a case, showing no regrets,
Ready to respond, when the bad man has a whim.
When they are selected, they'll be set aflame.
When their flame has died and beauty has been marred
Then the bad man drops them into the discard.
More fastidious men, prefer women like cigars.
They are more exclusive and last longer.
Corrosive or cabbage leaves, a limousine or car.
Men, who choose their women like they do cigars
Can buy 'em in containers if their income's above par.
The average man will burn, both cigars and cigarettes.
As receding in an easy chair, he reads
When he picks himself a woman, he will have no vain regrets
For he's sensibly inclined and knows his needs.
She may be big or little and only passing fair,
It matters not at all, she is the type.
That caters to his comfort and helps him vanquish care,
She's as restful as his good old briar pipe.

A Proud Father
The minister had just finished an excellent chicken dinner. As he looked out the window a rooster strutted across the yard.
"My," said the minister, "that is certainly a proud rooster."
"Yes, sir," said the host, "he has reason to be proud. One of his sons just entered the Ministry."

Big Ones on Top
Colonel (after reviewing troops)—"Hang it all! What's the idea of parading all the big men in front of the little men?"
Lieut.—"It's the sergeant's fault. He used to run a fruit store."

Fatal Illness
She—"Why did you leave your last job?"
He—"Illness."
She—"What sort of illness?"
He—"My boss said he got sick of me."

Time to Change
"That's a good looking hat you are wearing," remarked one guy to another.
"Yes, I bought it five years ago, still it cleaned three times, changed it twice in restaurants, and it's still as good as new."

Eye Openers
Dick—"Last week a grain of sand got into my wife's eye and she had to go to a doctor. It cost me three dollars."
Bill—"That's nothing. Last week a fur coat got in my wife's eye and it cost me three hundred."

Mighty Explosion
Have you heard about the proof reader on an Army newspaper near Cassino, Italy, who got fired when he slipped up on a little letter in this item:
"General Blank narrowly missed death when a bomb exploded near the old fort."

Job Refused
Sally Snoozlepig, who had been employed as a receptionist for a young doctor specializing in chest disorders, applied for a new position when her employer was called into the Army.
She was interviewed by an older doctor, a disciple of Dr. Salamander P. Hart, an authority on chest disorders who had written a textbook on the subject.
"You say, Miss Snoozlepig, inquired the old doctor, "that you worked for Doctor Tummak, the lung specialist?"
"That's right," nodded Sally.
"And have you read 'Hare on the Chest'?" he pursued.
Sally rose in haughty indignation. "Phooie," she pouted, "if I have to have that to get the job, the hell with it!"

Up-To-Date Wedding
"Y'asy ya love this jane?"
"Yep, your honor."
"An' this boro is yer bimbo, eh?"
"You muttered a snootful, Judge."
"Trass nuff. He's your'n. Your his'n. Slip me a fin and scam. Next, please!"

A Short Story
Once upon a time a man got up early on Sunday morning to let the iceman in, and being unable to find his bathrobe, he slipped on his wife's kimono. When he opened the door he was greeted by a nice, big kiss by the iceman. And the only way he can figure it out was that the iceman's wife had a kimono just like the one he had on.

Wrong Guy
A notice in a London paper that American cigarettes would be on sale at a certain store the following day brought so many customers that hours before the store was to open there was a line almost a mile long.
A little fellow, mooching his way to the head of the line, was immediately greeted with boos and jeers and pushed to the rear. A short time later he again appeared at the front. This time he was picked up bodily and passed from hand to hand to the end of the line.
A third time he made his way to the head of the line and again was about to be given the royal heave-ho, when he held up both arms and shouted:
"Listen ere, you bounders, henough is henough. Toss me around once hagin' and I won't hopen the shop!"

Holding Out on Her
Hubby—"Haven't I always given you my salary check on the first of every month?"
Wife—"Yes, but you never told me you get paid twice a month, you embezzler."

It Takes Skill
"Rastus," asked the judge, "do you know what an alibi is?"
"Yes, your honor, an alibi is provin' dat you was at a prayer meetin' whar you wasn't, in order ter prove dat you wasn't at a crap game whar you was."

Gaining Weight
One of the new selectees wrote his family shortly after arriving in camp: "Dear Folks: I've gained sixty pounds since I have been there—two pounds of flesh and 58 pounds of equipment."

at the Bloomsburg Fair were: Mr. and Mrs. Hayes Ralston, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Coldron, V. A. Auman, Helen Decker, I. A. Emery, Mrs. Lois Herr, Howard Emery, Newton Crawford, Leslie Jacobs, Wilbur Bland, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Runkle, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Luse, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Homan, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Homan, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Delaney, John Delaney, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Delaney, Bill McClellan, Mr. and Mrs. William Lansberry and son Bobby, Jacob Luse, John Treaster and Mr. and Mrs. Bloomer Weaver.

The soccer teams of the Centre Hall-Potter High School and the State College High School played a fast, clean game on the home field on Friday afternoon. Taylor Potter, goal tender and Bernard Vogt did much towards winning the game with their defensive work. Score Centre Hall 1 State College 0.

The presidential campaign is wearing up hot, after the election, everybody will be an American, determined to win the war and the peace.

Labor Came Into Its Own Under Roosevelt
Thanks to the wise planning and legislation of the present administration, industries can be converted from war to peacetime production without prolonged difficulty.
Workers temporarily released during reconversion will be protected by unemployment compensation. They will have the protection of minimum wage laws and the assistance of the U. S. Employment Service while seeking new work.
The aged can retire with old age insurance benefits. Dependent young people are provided for. The Fair Labor Standards Act will give maximum distribution of work as hours are shortened to peacetime standards. Large public and private housing projects and new highway systems are now being planned, assuring extensive employment in useful and needed work.
Progress made in the past 16 years under the Roosevelt administration proves that a people as resourceful as Americans can and should have full employment. This is a goal that can be reached. This is no part of the Democratic philosophy. This administration believes in it and will not cease its efforts to achieve employment for all.

"Roosevelt has long experience in dealing with other nations. His opponent has none. Roosevelt is known and respected around the world as a great and successful leader and statesman. His opponent is not. Roosevelt knows Churchill and Stalin and understands them. His opponent does not. Roosevelt has proved he can work with them. His opponent has not.
What it all adds up to is this: Dewey will not do."
The choice of a President in this election, said Pinchot, will determine whether the peace that is yet to be made will blow up in the faces of our children as the last peace has blown up in your face and mine.
Peace means more than an end to fighting. Upon the kind of peace that is established, he said, will depend the prosperity and safety of the people of the United States and of the world.
"The problem," Pinchot continued, "is to organize the world for prosperity and permanent peace. For that tremendous task Dewey will not do."

There are 185,000 telephone operators in the Bell System—the largest number in history. As telephone calls have increased, more people have been added to handle them. Service generally is good but some Long Distance lines to war-busy centers get crowded. Then the operator may say—"Please limit your call to 3 minutes."
We appreciate the way you're going along with that suggestion.
