Query & Answer Column

T. T. L.—How many men has Soviet Russia lost in the war?

Ans.—A summary by the Soviet Information Bureau in London announced in June, 1944, that the Russians have lost 5,300,000 men killed, captured, or missing in the first three years of the Russo-German war.

N. J.—Why is the term theater used in connection with operations in this war?

Ans.—In a military sense the expression "theater of war" is applied to the whole of the area (land or sea) which is or may become involved directly in the operations of war. It is divided into the theater of operations and the zone of the interior.

E. V. P.—What noted general was the ancestor of Gen. George S. Patton?

Ans.—General Patton is the great-grandson of Gen. Hugh Mercer, Continental Army.

E. B. E.—Who was the clergyman who signed the Declaration of Independence?

Ans.—Dr. John Witherspoon was the only clergyman to sign the historic document.

M. D. E.—Is there a battleship named USS Maine, in honor of the one sunk in Havana Harbor?

Ans.—The USS Maine (Battleship No. 10) was named for the state of Maine and the old battleship Maine, authorized in 1896, she was sold January 26, 1922, and was rendered incapable of further warlike service December 17, 1923. The USS Maine (Battleship No. 69) was ordered September 9, 1940. She is one of the Montana class super-battleships.

L. C. E.—What is the derivation of the word amateur?

Ans.—Amateur comes from the Latin amateur which means lover. Menke says that the term in reference to sport probably was revived and given its present day spelling about 1788 in connection with the English heavyweight boxer, Gentleman Jack Jackson, who refused to share in any of the collected money or side bets.

L. V. L.—When did the United States recognize Soviet Russia?

Ans.—The United States accorded recognition to Soviet Russia in November, 1933.

Sunday School Lesson

RELIGION IN EDUCATION
International Sunday School Lesson for October 22, 1944

GOLDEN TEXT: "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 32.

Lesson Text: Matthew 7: 1-12; Luke 11: 29-32.

This is the first lesson we have had some years on the subject of religion in education and it is certainly a timely discussion. We here in America, have so carefully divorced religion from education in our desire to forever separate church from state, that we are in danger of assuming that education is one thing and religion quite another, which, of course, is untrue.

First, let's ask ourselves, "What is the best education?" We will answer this question in the words of John E. Bradley, in Work and Play. He says, "The best education is the highest development of the individual in all its powers. The true student aims at good preparation—to become his best self. The royal road to success is through character, manliness, by character we mean integrity, moral uprightness, spiritual strength, the reaching out of the soul towards God. We also mean that quality in a man which begets confidence and respect."

"The highest manifestation of moral growth is the Christ-like spirit. Education falls short of its true end if the learner does not sit at the feet of the great Teacher. Religion does not consist in emotion; it is an upward movement of the whole nature. The first and great commandment is to love with all the heart and soul and mind. A full manhood unites worship with work."

In the latest of a series of articles, appearing in the October issue of The Ladies Home Journal, on "The Mental and Moral Training of the American Child," Dorothy Thompson has something to say which should startle every school official, teacher and parent in the whole country, because the truth of what she says is so apparent. She declares, in part:

"We have paganized our schools. Freedom of religion has come to mean for vast numbers of American children freedom from religion—and in American life, is the province of the home and church, and must not be touched by the school.

"Now it is obvious and, to me, desirable that sectarian religious teachings should be kept out of American public schools. Children come from Catholic, Protestant or Jewish homes, if they come from religiously inclined homes at all. Parents do not wish their children to be indoctrinated with doctrines foreign to their own churches. But it is perfectly possible to discover a bedrock ethical basis common to all the faiths institutionalized in America.

"And just why the peerless monument of the English language should be banned, or all but banned, from English studies, from primary grades through high school, is beyond my comprehension. I refer to John Reish, several days last week. Dr. George Weber of Waldorf, Md., and mother, Mrs. Stuart Weber of Washington, D. C., spent several days last week at the home of Mrs. Mary M. Abbott, R. W. Meyer and Dr. and Mrs. William Kelley.

Old Furnace Mules Used At Lamar

and specimens of the old coarse, slouch-eared, mammoth jacks found in numbers on the island of Majorca and Minorca, were being brought in by the breeders are mostly mixtures with the Maltese race predominating. I may be wrong as I have not been around mules much since the charcoal iron furnaces went out about 90 years ago. Whenever I saw a really beautiful mule, I was generally told it was bred from an old lop-eared Spanish Malto or Spanish Malto.

"Mules from Scott county, Kentucky, were highly regarded, but later Columbia, Tennessee, became the great mule center. I hoped to take in the annual 'Mule Day' held in the vast public square, but when I was invited to Columbia, Illinois, it was prevented. I saw four mules from Georgetown, in Scott county, all sired by Maltese jacks, which ranked with any in perfection, jet black, standing 17 hands, three inches, out of thoroughbred mares, weighing close to a ton apiece, docile and willing, but so active and fast it was planned to hitch them to an open carriage when Hector Clymer came to Hamilton, now called Mackeyville, Clinton county, in 1866, to give a great political speech; then someone said the C. O. P. would laugh if the opposition candidate drove behind four democratic donkeys, so they got four big black horses from Tibben's livery."

"The best of the great composer, and great-grandson of General Daniel Robertson, the inspired Jew, and it broke his great heart, and like his eye-to-eye friend, Franklin B. Gowen, also a broken-hearted hero, ended it all." Col. Clymer and Gowen were friends of the down-trodden, many years ahead of their time, but Gov. Brumbaugh inscribed their vials on our statute books 35 years after they were dead.

"In the rugged stands of yellow pines, where much so-called 'Stockholm' tar, another lost industry of Pennsylvania, was produced. The trees were first dried, and the next year, after they had started to die, were cut down, and saved into short logs, in a perpendicular groove were cut deep into the trunk and the wound bled resin. The pitch oozed down to a clay pot, like a flower pot, and hardened and when the cups were filled the sticky harvest was gathered. When the gashes healed, new ones were made and so it went on year after year until the old pines were a mass of scars. The trees did not seem to suffer from this bleeding process, and the resin thus procured was used to make turpentine.

"If a young pine was cut too often the gashes weakened it and whole groves would blow over and break off in a heavy wind. The tar and turpentine workers' faces were streaked and smeared black with pitch-oil to keep off mosquitoes, woodflies and punkies. This dark-colored fluid was carried in a cask-burn with a wooden stopper, worn at the belt. As most of the pines were cut in summer, such protection was an absolute necessity. The women and girls, when they took their men folk's dinner buckets to the woods, wore heavy veils. Now if one goes out in Colby's gap, it is as hard to find the remains of the old charcoal pits, and the tar and turpentine working as it is to locate the site of the Colby cabin at the mouth of Cherry run, where in 1867, the Crime of the Century was committed."

To be really educated, one's heart must be educated as well as one's mind. Having one's heart right with God is even more important and there is only one way whereby one may have a righteous heart—let Christ cleanse it from evil. No matter how well educated one's mind is, unless he knows Christ as his personal Saviour, he is only partly educated.

SEES COLLEGE AS PART OF PUBLIC SCHOOLS

A postwar educational system in which two years of college will be part of the public school program is forecast by Dr. C. O. Williams, associate professor of education in charge of teacher placement at the Pennsylvania State College.

Dr. Williams, who believes World War II will give the same impetus to the junior college movement that the first World War gave to universal high school training, said service men will demand college-level training in their home communities.

Not only servicemen but thousands of civilians have become "education conscious" as a result of the wartime stress on technical training, he added, in urging community training classes for those persons who wish to live at home and earn work while furthering their education.

He advocated this training at public expense to promote "a steady rise in the educational level of the American people."

St. John's Lutheran, Bellefonte. Rev. Clarence E. Arnold, pastor. Tuesday, Sunday after Trinity, Oct. 22, 9:30 a. m., Sunday school, 10:45 a. m., the service and sermon, "There Were Two Sons," 7:30 p. m., Vespers and sermon, "The Christ of Strength and Courage."

This is the time to make Christmas resolutions to service men overseas. Get this done today.

CLOTHING FOR MEN & BOYS

THE FLEET'S IN

Did you hear about the Jap admiral who jumped out of his hotel room window. He looked under the bed and saw an American vessel.

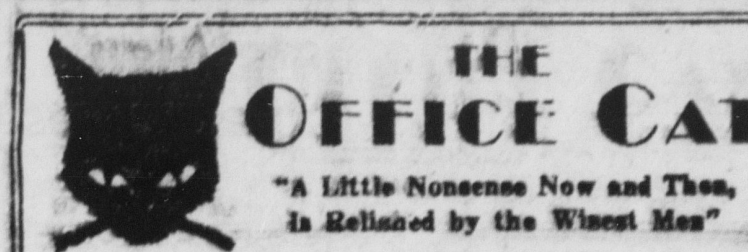

Can You Figure It Out?

A soldier ate his lunch in a civilian canteen. His check was forty cents. While he was standing in line to pay it he glanced over the shoulder of the lady seated at the table and his eyes popped. Her check read 100000. But when she handed it to the cashier, she nodded and the lady walked out without paying anything. The perplexed soldier said his check, then asked: "Why didn't you charge the lady ahead of me?" "That's simple," replied the cashier. "Her check reads, 'I owe nothing, for I ate nothing!'"

The Real Danger

Running after women never hurt any man—it's catching them that does the damage.

That's all, folks. When it comes to scandal, the men furnish most of the material—the women merely do the broadcasting, with technicolor and sound effects.

THE OFFICE CAT

"A Little Nonsense Now and Then, is Relieved by the Wince Men"

And a Lack
Oh, love is a lot of malarkey.
A potent poison, me boy.
A lie, a cheat and a phony.
A blaster of wealth and joy.
Oh, love is a sne-spider's web.
A pitfall, lure and a curse.
But life without any love at all.
Alas! is a damnable worse!

See What She Means?
If memory fails us not, we have seen letters similar to this one, but this specimen seems to have new and good points:

"Mr. Army Headquarters
U. S. Army
My husband was indicted into the surface long months ago and I ain't received no pay from him since he was gone. Please send me my allotment as I have a four month old baby and he is my only support and I need him every day to buy food and keep his clothes."

"I am a poor woman and all I have is at the front. Both sides of my parents are very old and I can't suspect anything from them. As my mother has been in bed 13 years with one doctor and won't take another. My husband is in charge of a spittoon. Do I get more than I'm going to get."

"Please send me a letter and tell me if my husband made an application for a wife and child and please send me a wife form to fill out. I have already wrote Mr. Roosevelt and got no answer and if I don't hear from you I will write Uncle Sam about you and him."

It Would Be a Lucky Strike
Well toward the top of the list parade would be Admiral Nimitz, crooning to the Japanese fleet, "Some Day I'll Find You."

Complete Silence
He—"What did your wife say when you came home last night?"
Him—"The darling never said a word. And I was going to have those two front teeth pulled anyway."

Catching Up
Game Warden—"Hey, young man, what's the idea of hunting with a last year's license?"
Miles—"Oh, I'm only shooting at the birds I missed last year."

He Forgot to Duck
Judge—"Will you waive your right to appeal?"
Husband—"Don't let her wave any more rights. Judge. That's how I got this black eye."

Why Banks Have Receivers
Lady—"Please cash this check for me."
Teller—"Sorry, it isn't endorsed."
Lady—"But it's made out to me and signed by my husband."
Teller—"Yes, I know, but since it's payable to your order, you must endorse it on the back so we can show your husband you received the money."

The Lady retired to the nearby writing counter and ultimately returned triumphantly with this unique endorsement: "Thank you, Harry."

The Bar of Justice
Sarcastic Detective—"Come with me, friend."
Prisoner—"Where to?"
S. D.—"Hotel de Sing Sing."
Prisoner—"Is that so? Can one get a drink there after curfew?"
S. D.—"Sure! The place is literally saturated by bars."

Peace at a Price
Two women in a railway car argued about the window and at last called the porter as referee.
"If this window is open," one declared, "I shall catch cold and will probably die."
"If the window is shut," the other announced, "I shall certainly suffocate."

The two glared at each other. The porter was at a loss, but he welcomed the words of a man with a red nose who sat next. Said he: "First open the window. That will kill one. Next, shut it. That will kill the other. Then we can have peace."

Swell Overtime
Mae—"Just had a card from Rose, the riveter."
Fay—"What'd she say?"
Mae—"Having a wonderful time and a half."

A Swell Feed
Mama Mosquito—"If you children are good I'll take you to a nudist camp tonight."

Mistaken Identity
A Negro was hauled into court on a charge of stealing chickens. He arrived with his attorney, and both look their seats. The judge pointed down at the colored gentleman angrily.
"Are you the defendant?" he thundered.
"Oo, no, your honor," said the Negro, jerking his thumb in the direction of the lawyer, "he's the defendant. I've de gentlemen what stole the chickens."

Expectant Wife
When Private Squeedunk applied for a weekend pass from camp, explaining, "My wife is expecting," his sympathetic captain crawled out a pass.
The next week he gave the same reason and got another leave. The third week he again offered the same reason, the officer asked: "Just what is she expecting?"
"Oo," said Private Squeedunk, "she's expecting me home again."
He stayed in camp that weekend.

Consolation
"When you gwine to git married?" a colored mammy asked her mistress.
"I don't know, mammy," came the answer. "I don't think I'll ever get married."
"Weg!" said mammy, in an attempt to comfort the girl. "They do say old maids is the happiest kind after they quit strugglin'."

Save Everything
Gertie—"Eddie says in his letter: 'Tell your father to save his waste papers; tell your mother to save your waste fat; and don't forget to save your waste—that's me—till I come home.'"

Too Many Women
Mary had a lovely calf—
She showed it very well;
There were women on the jury—
Now our Mary's in a cell.

Fried in Fat
Travels of a French fried potato: In your mouth a few moments, in your stomach a few hours, on your hip the rest of your life.

The Fleet's In
Did you hear about the Jap admiral who jumped out of his hotel room window. He looked under the bed and saw an American vessel.
