WILLKIE'S AIDE TELLS WHY HE CAN'T VOTE FOR DEWEY

Russell W. Davenport, personal representative and chief of research for Wendell Willkie when the latter ran for the Presidency, tells the American people "Why I Cannot Vote for Dewey" in an article in the October issue of the American Mercury.

Davenport concentrates most of his fire on Dewey's lack of knowledge on foreign policy. He writes: "Possibly some of Mr. Dewey's closest advisers know what he thinks about foreign policy, though it is hard to get any two of them to agree. In any case, the public has no idea of it."

"Mr. Dewey's trail in this wilderness has been a winding one, and has wandered, or has been deliberately biased, on both sides of every important issue. He has been isolationist and internationalist. He has been for alliances and against them."

"He was against lend-lease and then for it. He has been anti-Russian and pro-Russian. He has never once provided leadership on a major issue in foreign policy. And on no major issue in foreign policy has he taken a consistent position."

"That kind of leadership is precisely the opposite of what—in the liberal Republican view—the party needs. A political wit once described Mr. Dewey as 'a disaster looking for a place to happen.' If Mr. Dewey 'happens' in November, the Republican party will provide the balance of this formula."

Davenport then goes on to say that Dewey has "doomed and doctored the cloak of internationalism at his own convenience and for his own purposes."

"This willingness to play politics with the fundamental interests of the country," Davenport asserts, "disqualifies him as a statesman." Davenport accuses the Republican party's Old Guard of "congenial unawareness of the world situation." He continues: "The kind of peace that the old guard has in mind, when it talks about peace is a Calvin Coolidge peace; a state of rest, so to speak."

He added: "We don't want a brilliant prosecutor who—for all we know to the contrary—would proceed to prosecute out of existence everything that we have fought to achieve. For us—perhaps for the nation as a whole—that would not be peace."

"The Republicans voted against the arms embargo repeal in 1939. They voted against the alien ship bill in 1941. And in the same year they voted against the amendment to the neutrality act permitting the indispensable arming of American merchant ships."

"When lend-lease was first proposed, Mr. Dewey, with the approval of the Old Guard, characterized it as a 'so-called defense bill.' A grave blow, not only to national unity, but to all free governments everywhere."

"It seems fair to say that a man capable of making such a basic mistake ought not to aspire to the Presidency."

GOP SENATOR TO CAMPAIGN FOR ROOSEVELT

Sen. Joseph H. Ball (R., Minn.), in a statement to the St. Paul Pioneer Press said that he will not campaign for Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, Republican Presidential candidate, "at this time."

He said in his statement, given in response to a query by the Pioneer Press: "It is my deep conviction that the foreign policy of the United States, particularly our firm intention to join with our present allies in establishing a strong and effective international organization having real authority and power to maintain peace, is by far the greatest issue facing the American people in the November 7 election."

"The lives of future generations and security of our liberties are at stake. That issue is far more important than the political success or failure of any party or person."

"I have read or listened to all of Gov. Dewey's speeches and statements to date. He has not yet convinced me that his own convictions on this issue are so strong that he would fight vigorously for a foreign policy which will offer real hope of preventing World War III, against the inevitable opposition to such a policy."

"That being the case, I would violate my own deepest conviction if I were at this time to try to campaign for Gov. Dewey."

Senator Ball announced on Monday that after hearing President Roosevelt's Saturday night speech, outlining the Administration's foreign policy, he will campaign for his re-election.

GOP WOMAN LEAVES PARTY FOR F. D. R.

Mrs. Norton Downs, of Bryn Mawr, well known for her communal and philanthropic activities, and a life-long Republican, announced recently that she would cast her vote for President Roosevelt's re-election on November 7.

"I am going to vote for Mr. Roosevelt," said Mrs. Downs, "because I feel that the war will more speedily come to an end under his experienced guidance than it would under the direction of an untried man, no matter how able and honest he may be."

ADDENDA
(From the Inner Sanctum)
Now that our desk comrade has so far recovered from his hospital premier as to be able to describe his experience, we think it time to tell it all.
For months our versatile friend has been toying with the word "appendectomy," rolling it about his tongue like a rounded lolly-pop. An operation, for appendicitis would invariably be converted to "appendectomy." Nice word, we agree, but we who worked with him worried over the thought of the old maxim, "Use a word three times and it's yours." And sure enough, that little word got him and the doctor had to remove it.
And by jove, when he gets back to his desk we're going to make sure there'll be no more "appendectomy" ringing in our ears. We've removed the word from his dictionary. Hey, Paul, are you listening?

Query & Answer Column

M. C. F.—When did hotels adopt the American and European plans of service?
Ans.—The American plan of hotel operation goes back to early Colonial days when the guests at the inn ate whatever the landlord and his family happened to have. The European plan originated in France and was introduced into America about 1835 or a little before.
J. L. B.—Why is there a guard at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier?
Ans.—The guard is maintained as a mark of respect rather than for protection of the tomb and is chosen by detail from the Ceremonial Detachment at Ft. Myer, Va.
D. G.—What became of the Liberty ship, the Robert E. Peary, which was built in record time?
Ans.—She is still in service. This 10,800-ton merchant ship was built and delivered in world's record time of one week flat. The keel was laid in No. 2 yard of Permanente Metals Corporation, Richmond, Calif., on November 8, 1942, and the vessel launched four days later.
W. R. G.—How high are the cliffs of Dover?
Ans.—The chalk cliffs rise to a height of 375 feet above the sea at the point where Dover Castle stands.
M. A. L.—Are mines being used by the Government to store surplus foods?
Ans.—The War Food Administration says that a coal mine at Atchison, Kan., is being converted into a cooler storage unit for Government-owned foodstuffs and is the largest known cold storage unit in the world. The natural temperature of 50-55 degrees Fahrenheit has been lowered by cooling equipment to 30-32 degrees Fahrenheit.
H. T. P.—What are the qualifications of a member of the United States Senate?
Ans.—A member of the Senate must be at least 30 years of age, must have been a citizen of the United States for nine years, and must be a resident of the state from which he is sent to Congress.
B. L. M.—In what South American countries does traffic move to the left instead of to the right as in the United States?
Ans.—Argentina and Uruguay have left-handed traffic.
C. M.—What is one tested method of keeping sheep from jumping fences?
Ans.—Tying the ram's ears back. He points his ears forward when leaping. If he can't point, he won't leap.
Curious—Where did the Gypsies get their name?
Ans.—In Greece, where they appeared about 1400. The Greeks thought they were from Egypt, hence the name Gypsy. It is believed likely that they were from northern India, and gathered admixtures in wandering.
W. O. M.—How long is a li, the Chinese measure?
Ans.—705 yards.
S. T.—What bird besides the ostrich has been known to bury its head in fear?
Ans.—The moorhen.
L. G.—What is chronophobia?
Ans.—Fear of time. War prisoners are sometimes afflicted with it.
D. I. F.—Why is wood used for railroad crossties? How much does each one cost?
Ans.—The use of wood for railroad ties has proved satisfactory. Steel and iron ties expand and contract with the heat and cold. The average treated crosstie cost the railroads $1.29 in 1940, the average untreated crosstie cost 79 cents.
M. E. G.—Do a person's fingerprints ever change?
Ans.—Gaston demonstrated that the patterns made by the ridges are changeless and indestructible. They do not alter by reason of occupation, diet, health or other circumstances. In examining Egyptian mummies the scientist found that finger tips were clearly visible 5000 years after death.

Sunday School Lesson

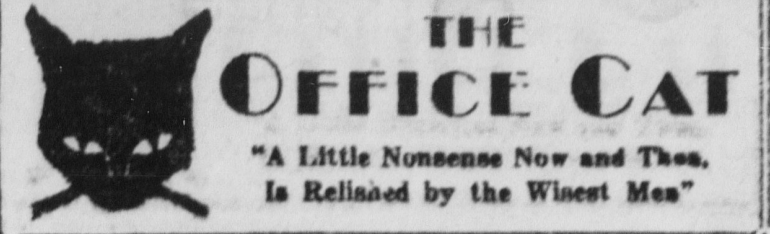

THE CHRISTIAN MOTIVE FOR LIVING
International Sunday School Lesson for October 29, 1944.
GOLDEN TEXT: "Seek the things that are above."—Colossians 3: 1.
Lesson Text: Psalm 4: 5-8; Luke 4: 4; John 8: 25; Romans 12: 1-2; 13: 12-14.
In connection with our consideration of this quarter's series of lessons, with the central theme, "Light from Christ on Life Today," it might well be divided, as follows: light on personal problems (lessons 1-3); social problems (lessons 4-6); political and industrial problems (lessons 7-10); moral and spiritual problems (lessons 11-14). Having considered Christ in the solution of our personal problems, we then considered one of the greatest of modern social problems, religion in education.
This week we are to consider another paramount social problem—temperance living, or the Christian attack on the alcohol evil. As one of the most serious social problems of our day, we turn to this lesson for help in its solution.
Back of every social or moral issue is the basic question of motive, purpose and intent. To get to a solution of any problem, we must first answer the question "Why?" Just how did the problem arise in the first place, what were the first causes? Therefore, let us ask, "Why do people drink intoxicating liquor?" The answer is that all people want a sense of significance, a feeling of well-being and security, a satisfying way of life, a code of conduct that makes them feel that they "belong." Many people think that the drinking of liquor somehow brings these desired results. God's word and Christian experience clearly show that they are wrong and that, in most instances, the direct opposite is the result.
The Psalmist declares, from his own experience, that a righteous life was the only kind that could bring peace and gladness. While David himself was far from perfect, he had so learned to control and master his desire, sometimes he found peace and happiness such as one can never know unless he exercises self-control. A writer once said, "There are two freedoms, a false, where a man is free to do as he likes, and the true, where he is free to do as he ought." Are you really free?
While certain desires are perfectly natural, and we need not be ashamed of them, we must be certain that we are masters of our desires and not vice versa. Jesus, after his wilderness experience, was very hungry, but he did not let his appetite lead him to disobey God. He mastered his desire because he knew that the satisfaction of appetite is not the highest purpose of life.
We spend our lives searching for satisfaction without, sometimes stopping to ask just what are the things that truly satisfy. Many reply, with their lives if not with their lips, "Money, material possessions, pleasure, wine, women and song!" Jesus, in John 6:35, gives us a promise of eternal satisfaction. It is well for us to realize that God is able to satisfy every need of the human soul.
Our final passage is taken from Paul's letter to the Romans. In the first eleven chapters of the book, Paul discusses some doctrinal matters, with emphasis on the fact that it is only because of God's grace and mercy that we can have eternal life. Beginning with chapter 12, Paul suggests and recommends some practical ways in which Christians should show their love and appreciation to God.
The foregoing gives particular emphasis to Paul's "therefore," with which he begins the chapter. To Paul it was only reasonable and natural that one who had been redeemed from eternal death would dedicate his life to purity, self-denial and service. He reminded his readers that one cannot successfully live this kind of life if he tries to fashion his conduct according to worldly standards or if he tries to fulfill the desires of his fleshly nature. He appeals to all Christians to live decently, not in a way that will bring shame upon Christ.
Lynan Abbott once declared, "God has so connected body and the spirit, house and tenant, that if the spirit corrupts the body, the body in turn corrupts the spirit; the tenant in destroying the house destroys himself."

SCOTIA

(By H. M. Williams)
Pfc. Steve Yachik of Bainbridge, Md., is spending a nine-day furlough with his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Steve Yachik of near Scotia.
Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Hoover and daughter of Altoona, spent last Sunday with Mrs. Hoover's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Guyer Stine.
We were informed that Roy Henninger has purchased the John Stine property at Matternville and has already moved into it, and that Mr. and Mrs. George Gray have moved from the Edina Mattern house into the house formerly occupied by the Henningers, and that John Stine has moved his family to State College where he has been employed for a number of years by the West Penn Power Co. as a linesman.
Mary Jane Young of Coleville, near Bellefonte, is spending a few days at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Williams.
Mrs. Johanna Williams expects to return home on Monday after spending a few days with her daughter, Mrs. C. K. Sitzer of Pleasant Gap.
The employees of the Arthur G. McKee Company departed last week for other parts of the country after completing their part of the job at the Scotia mines. There is no one left anymore except Jack Lewis, the superintendent, and we don't expect to see him around very long. Well, we enjoyed you very much, Jack, while you were here.
We were informed that a 9-pound girl baby arrived at the County Back home on Sunday evening, Oct. 15.
Plans are being made to refurbish the Sunday school room at Grays church. The auditorium of the church was repainted and floors sanded and refinished some time ago, and after this is done it should make a real job and a well finished church inside.
If any of you old Scotians happen to wander in around Scotia nowadays and get lost, we won't blame you for things are so changed there to what they used to be when we lived there, that you won't hardly know where you are. The writer at times has to stop and look and wonder just where he is at times. This new plant that is being built there has changed the location of things or at least it seems that way, so a person has to stop and wonder just where the location was that he first saw daylight. And as you know that many of us middle-aged folks were born there, it seems funny to get lost at your old birthplace, but don't worry, that can easily happen today with the location of the new works changing things all around. But we are still waiting for that ride over the new railroad branch as it is now about completed.
Last week we mentioned to some of the folks about the murder of Paul who committed here just thirty-four years ago on the 15th of this month, and they ask us to write that up in our own story as we saw it when it happened, and we told them that the story would come later on in the history.

ORVISTON

There were 101 present at Sunday school.
Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Harker of Joximburg, visited the David Confer and Paul Lomison homes on Thursday.
Pvt. Lawrence Confer of Aberdeen, Md., spent the weekend with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clair Confer.
Jean Gardner of Flemington, spent the weekend with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Gardner.
Mr. and Mrs. John Daley of Baltimore, spent the weekend at their homes here.
Mrs. Charles Aver entertained her Sunday school class at her home on Monday night.
Mrs. Beulah Condo of Bellefonte, visited friends here on Sunday.
The community was shocked last week to hear of the sudden death of Forrest Emehizer, a former resident of this place. We wish to express our sympathy to the bereaved family.
Mrs. R. B. Poorman of State College, and Vera Shank of Tyrone, spent the weekend with their father, A. M. Shank.
Mrs. Sam Poorman of Howard, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Clair Butler.
Mrs. Blanche Daley and Mrs. Paul Lomison visited Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Poorman and Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Wensel at Milesburg, Sunday evening.
Mrs. William Gillespie and daughter Daria, and Mrs. Ruth Confer and son Terry, spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Confer and family at Milesburg.

THE OFFICE CAT

"A Little Nonsense Now and Then, Is Relieved by the Wisest Men"

Story of the Jungles
It was a hot summer's day in the jungle. And the sun burnt the sand on the ground. The milligan stew it was boiling. And it bubbled a most pleasant sound.
We had postponed our breakfast and dinner in our efforts to get over the noon. And each to looked hungry and weary. As he crouched on his stool like a toad.
Our friend, "Checkers" Gilbert, was talking. As he pushed a few sticks on the fire. Of the days when the road was hard traveling: Great Scott! but that guy was a liar!

To begin with, he was a machinist. A plumber, a barber, a cook. An agitator, poet and tinner. And he said he had once wrote a book.
He told of the bergs he'd discovered. From Maine to the Oregon woods. He had bummed every guy up in Portland. And they all came across with the goods.
He had bummed the Coast down to Frisco. And he started where the bathers all roam. For he saved about a dozen from drowning. But he left all the medals at home.

Well, he cut up the apids and the onions. And he shoveled them into the stew. He stirred them around with a paddle. Then he added a carrot or two.
And then he began on a story Of the days when the railroads were few. And he told how he shipped single-handed. Three bulls and a manifest crew.
We sat there like humans half starving. On the stew pot we centered our stares. And wished that the cook-up was ready. For we were as hungry as bears.

A Job for George

The bomber after a tough run over enemy territory, was approaching its base. The pilot had just given instructions to the crew to prepare for landing when the engine rushed up and excitedly exclaimed "Sir, we're almost out of gas, and I just discovered that our landing gear has been shot off."
The pilot hesitated a moment, then turned to the bombardier. "Hey George," he shouted, "we're out of gas and we've lost our landing gear. You'd better stick your feet out of the bomb-bay and run like hell!"

Sounded Reasonable

The island was instructing the men who were to make a landing on the island of Saipan.
"Remember," he said, "the water about the island has coral formations with razor sharp edges. The water is also infested with sharks and the vicious barracuda that will attack without warning. On the land are many poisonous snakes, bottomless swamps filled with tropical sword grass that will cut through the clothing like a razor, fever-producing mosquitoes, no wholesome water, and a hot and humid climate."

A Safer Method

A customer sent the following note to his grocer:
"Please send six dozen eggs; if good, I will send check."
The grocer, however, was not doing business on such risky terms, so he replied:
"Send check; if good, I will send six dozen eggs."

Heckling the Heckler

During the campaign, a candidate was answering a question at some length, when a heckler arose and demanded a plain answer, "yes" or "no."
"But I can't answer yes or no to this question," replied the candidate. "There are some questions to which it is impossible to answer yes or no, and this is one."
"That isn't so," shouted the heckler, "you can answer yes or no to any question."

Double Talk

He—"Why didn't you answer my letter?"
She—"I didn't get it, and besides I didn't like some of the things you said in it."

Good For a Trade-in

A rip-roarin', hell-raising couple hired an immigrant Scotch laity for housework.
The first day about all Scotie heard was Mrs. Brute saying, "Throw it out, we don't want it," etc.
The second day she was hanging out the wash when this female dreadnaught gave her man a wallop and he fell backwards out the second-story window, landing head first in an ash can.
This was the end of a little look one look and bolder up to Mrs. Brute. "You're too damn extravagant, what fellow was good for 3 or 4 years yet."

Temperature Up

A salesman reading of a young couple buried in a snow drift for nine hours asked the waitress, "What would you and I do in a case like that?"
Without any hesitation she replied: "I think in about 15 or 20 minutes we'd be ready to swim out."

A Doughboy's Toast to Hitler

The sun may kiss the morning dew. The moon may kiss the bridge. The morning dew may kiss the grass. But you, dear Adolf—farewell.

Took No Chances

One of the delegates at a lodge convention attended a burlesque with some of the boys and the next day was obliged to go to an oculist for treatment.
"When I left the show last night," he said, "my eyes were red, sore and swollen."
Upon examining him the oculist said: "After this try blinking once or twice during the show. You won't miss much."

Easy Payments

According to unofficial sources, the new simplified income tax now being devised in Washington contains only three items:
1. What was your income for the year?
2. What were your expenses?
3. How much have you left? Send it in.

Canny Corporal

Extract from an N. C. O.'s letter to his wife:
"I have now been made a corporal, which is my first step up the Army's ladder of success. However, for the time being, please speak to the neighbors as usual and don't under any circumstances move to a larger house or buy a piano."
