He has seen the West Penn Power Company grow from a few power electric plants into a large interconnected system and is proud of the part which he has played in bringing electricity into the homes and industries which are now served by the West Penn Power Company. CUT FUELWOOD NOW—Pile the woodpile high is the suggestion made to farm woodlot owners by extension foresters of the Pennsylvania State College. Careful thinning of woodlots will provide adequate fuel wood and at the same time improve growth in the forest. PRODUCE QUALITY MILK—Dairy extension specialists of the Pennsylvania State College declare that essentials for producing quality milk are: proper preparation of the cow, efficient milking methods, thorough cleaning of utensils, and sanitary storage methods. Clothes may not make the man but they make them look better and, very often, feel better.

Prof. Kniss An Able Candidate (Continued from page one) and go on the road for various home and school duties. He pursued this work until the limited gas supply put him off the highway. He was married to a New Berlin girl and is the father of two children, Dr. Roscoe Kniss of Madera, and Mrs. Malone of Washington, D. C. In December of 1937 his wife died very suddenly and in October of 1941 he was married to Mrs. C. P. Long of Spring Mills. As a new-comer to the county he had to get used to the office. But when he was called for the office of General Assembly, he gave permission to use his name in order that the ballot would not have an empty space under that heading. Mr. Kniss states: "Under a two party system of government it is necessary that each party have a candidate for every office. When the voter is confronted with only one set of candidates, he no longer has a two party system." Mr. Kniss was not only a school man, but he has always been a community man. Whatever talent he has was employed to better the conditions of the people where he was employed. Public speaking has always been a hobby of his. During the twenties he was on the roster of the Swarthmore lyceum bureau of Philadelphia and of the Coe-Nelson Lyceum bureau of Pittsburgh, and was booked by them until the depression put the bureaus out of business. He was reared in a deeply Christian atmosphere and he has tried to ring true to that teaching. Mr. Kniss says: "Until we come to a pension for everybody, I am for a more adequate old age assistance based on need without having to sign anything over to the State. It is the law now stands. It is pure and simple class legislation. For ten years I have fought for a universal pension. I hope England won't lead a march on us by adopting the Beveridge plan before we come around to a pension for all. During the past ten years I have made several hundred speeches in behalf of the Townsend plan, around fifty in this county. I shall continue this fight as long as I can or until this nation comes around to recognizing that you and I and all of us are our brothers keepers. I want to see our soldiers get what is coming to them. I would like to see the best of our money go to see the best schools we can pay to maintain. They are the bulwark of our freedom. I believe the retirement annuity for the class room teacher should be increased and a ceiling should be placed on the annuity. I want to see the increase granted teachers in 1943 made permanent. I favor the teachers the opportunity of retiring after thirty years of service. The railroad retirement law allows them to retire after thirty years service and it places a ceiling on the retirement annuity. Why should not the same arrangement be good for teachers? I would like to see the triangle, that has made us the greatest industrial nation of all time and will keep us thus, welded more closely at its apex. I refer to labor-business-farming. As I see it, each is equally important and each is helpless without the other two. It should be the care of every one of us to do all we can to make it possible that each member of the triangle should receive a proper share of the national income. It can be done if we will it hard enough. But it cannot be brought to pass by bickering. Finally, I have always supported all legislation designed to bring the greatest good to the greatest number, and I will continue so to do. I have constantly opposed legislation which would not act to the welfare of the greatest number, and I will do so until the end. If elected by the help of God, whom I honor and revere, I will keep the record straight." FARM CALENDAR TIMELY REMINDERS FROM THE PENNSYLVANIA STATE COLLEGE SCHOOL OF AGRICULTURE HARVEST ALFALFA SEED—Because of the shortage of alfalfa seed, as well as high prices, extension agronomists of the Pennsylvania State College are urging harvest of every possible bushel of alfalfa seed. Many fields of late growth alfalfa will be harvested for seed for home use, especially locally adapted strains. FALL PIGS NEED CARE—Fall farrowed pigs should be given special care and fed to get them in good condition before cold weather arrives, suggest livestock extension specialists of the Pennsylvania State College. They should be taught to eat as soon as possible and kept on full feed. Minerals and leguminous hay aid the rations. RING-ROT IN POTATOES—Special attention should be given all potato crops where ring-rot was found, extension plant disease specialists at the Pennsylvania State College warn. Because this disease spreads rapidly, none of the affected crops should be saved for seed purposes. Only certified seed should be planted, they recommend. DAIRYMEN SAVE TIME—Careful planning of chores can save miles of walking for dairymen this winter, dairy extension specialists at the Pennsylvania State College point out. Use of feed trucks, chutes, and bins can save time and effort in caring for the animals.
