BETTERS to the Editor

Editor, Centre Democrat:

There is much talk and some written suggestions about a suitable memorial for the men who will have taken part in World War II. Unfortunately, most of this discussion hinges on a memorial supposedly of an aesthetic or beautiful character with little or no suggestions for the useful type. There is no reason why a suitable memorial cannot serve both purposes admirably. I wish to register my remarks in favor of such a dual purpose memorial.

A memorial is aimed at keeping our memories freshened as to the valor, courage, heroism and sacrifices of those who took part in this greatest of all wars. That is a high purpose, from which no right thinking person will want to detract. It is right and proper that we should perpetuate the memory of the great deeds performed by these in the armed forces of our country.

But a memorial that is nothing more than a monument often becomes in a few years a thing which does little to commemorate those for whom it is erected. Only those monuments which are very outstanding carry their message into an indefinite future.

A fitting memorial can be a thing of beauty and yet be a living, useful and vital force in the community in which it is erected. Such things as libraries, museums, public auditoriums, parks and boulevards are examples. They are not less a memorial because they are also utilitarian. I think they are better memorials because they are living structures rather than of sepulchral nature. Because they are much used, they better serve to frequently bring to mind those we want to remember.

The Centre County Library is doing a wonderful work in our entire county although hindered by lack of facilities to serve as well as could be desired. Although only a few years in existence, it has already nearly outgrown the limitations of the building which is its present home. I suggest no finer thing could be undertaken than to erect on ground west of the present library a new Memorial Library with a small public auditorium which could serve the many needs of the community. It should be large enough to house a modern library for many years to come and be suitable for future growth and expansion.

Having heard that $30,000.00 was spent to erect that beautiful but most inharmoniously situated memorial in front of our Court House, I am moved to protest vehemently against a repetition of such an in-judicious expenditure now that funds are being solicited for a World War II Memorial. We should see to it that we get the utmost value for such as contributed. To do so we should insist on a living memorial such as a new library—one that not only commemorates but also will serve to educate and help the community for many years to come.

Harry Lynn Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Johnson, also of State College, were married in the State College Methodist church at 7 p. m. last Thursday, Rev. W. Edward Watkins, pastor of the church, officiated. Miss Bonnie Powell of Pleasant Gap, and Paul F. Ghaner of Stormstown, were the attendants. The bride wore a powder blue street length gown and a corsage of carnations and red roses. Mrs. Johnson was graduated from the State College High School in 1944. FARM CALENDAR
Timely Reminders From The Pennsylvania State College School of Agriculture
SOIL IMPROVEMENT PAYS—Development of quality pasture and building up fertility are phases of soil improvement that should be stressed on every farm, declare extension agronomists of the Pennsylvania State College. Facing uncertainties of post-war years, farmers should take advantage of present favorable conditions for making lasting soil improvements.

REVISE FARM LEASES—Looking ahead to April 1 when most farm leases become effective, farm management specialists of the Pennsylvania State College suggest revising the farm leases. Both landlord and tenant benefit by having leases which provide equitable agreements.

MORE PULPWOOD NEEDED—revision of war contracts has made new and stronger demands for more pulpwood, report extension foresters of the Pennsylvania State College. They urge farmers and woodlot owners with peled wood to make immediate arrangements for marketing the wood.

COLTS NEED CARE—Because a colt's first winter often determines its future development, extension livestock specialists at the Pennsylvania State College suggest giving colts extra care. Liberal feeding and constant treatment against lice should be stressed.

RUST-RESISTANT OATS—Three new varieties of oats—Vieland, Tama, and Boone—have been found to be rust-resistant, report extension plant pathologists at the Pennsylvania State College. The easiest method to control rust in oats is to plant rust-resistant varieties, they point out.

ELECTRIC FENCE POPULAR—Increasing popularity of the one-wire electric fence for both temporary and permanent control of livestock has been attributed by agriculture engineers at the Pennsylvania State College to ease and economy of erection, and time, labor and materials saved in maintenance. All safety precautions should be followed, and only approved controllers used, the engineers emphasized.

but vitally important duties quietly, efficiently and without any recompense whatever. There are a number of individuals in more or less private life who in 1944 displayed outstanding self-sacrifice in aiding on the home front. Every community in the county probably could pick out a man who has given outstanding service and who has displayed a willingness to do his utmost to aid during these trouble-some times. Without naming any of them we point out that you, and you, and you, know who some of them are and that all of us are grateful there are such persons in our midst.
