New Finishes For Fabrics Are Listed

New textile finishes give different textures or surface treatments to cottons, synthetics, and mixtures of fibers, reports Miss Helen S. Butler, home economics extension representative of Centre county. Cotton can be made to hem like wool silk, or linen to the eye or to the touch.

Over 400 of these finishes have already been achieved and their possibilities are almost endless. No longer is it necessary to weave patterns into cloth.

Crease-resistant finishes are increasing and are now being used for rayon and linen as well as for cotton. Some of these finishes provide crush resistance while others are durable crease resistant. Usually a label is attached that describes what may be expected of the finish.

Shrinkage control has been developed for cottons, rayons and wools. The finish may be 100 per cent or it may guarantee the shrinkage to within one or two per cent.

A water repellent finish may be durable, semi-durable, or renewable after each dry cleaning or laundering. These finishes have been developed for rayons, cottons, wools, and synthetics.

A starchless finish for cottons, flame retardants, and moth-proofing have been improved.

One of the newest finishes, called Milium, gives an insulating quality to garment linings. This resinated metal-spray finish gives warmth without weight or bulk. It is light, crisp, porous, and wears well.

FARM QUESTION

By Ed. W. Mitchell, Farm Advisor General Electric Station WGY

Q I would like your advice on the proper distance apart to plant dwarf fruit trees. I have read from six to sixteen feet, in the catalogs.

A I would plant dwarf fruit trees at least fifteen feet apart and twenty will be better. Pears will stand fifteen better than apples.

Q My carrots and parsnips are bothered with worms. Can you suggest a control?

A Dust a five per cent DDT mixture on the soil around the plants once a week, and I think you will get good control.

Q Is there any spray or other treatment to destroy poison ivy?

A Yes—buy a 2-4-D weed killer at the farm supply store and spray the foliage. Directions are on each package.

Q The paint on my frame house is forming blisters and peeling off; the siding feels wet to the touch. What is the trouble, and how can I stop it?

A The warm, moist air condenses when it hits the cold siding and the moisture works through the wood and pushes off the paint. The remedy is to put a "moisture-seal" on the inside wall over or under the wall paper and, if possible, use insulating in the walls.

Q How should I prune and spray my young fruit trees?

A Prune only enough to shape a good, main frame and spray every week or two with lead and sulphur, to protect from insects and scab.

Q How can I take stains off a bath tub?

A Try oxalic acid solution, or a mixture of vinegar, ammonia, and cleaning powder.
