What is home without a mother? somebody has asked just for the sake of showing that he is smart enough to know what a motherless home is. But there is another sort of home that is not a home at all. It's a hybrid thing-a domicile, a residence, a house or dwelling, but not a home.

It may be a cousin to a palace or it may be one small room at the top of a tenement house, and it is talked of by its owner or the evening a concert, in their new church for lessee as a home. As an instance of how small suggestions trivial enough in themselves, sometimes influ-ence the author whose keen judgment accepts them as indications of a change of public taste or thought, Mr. William Gillette, the dramatist, tells of an incident which first turned his ist, tells of an incident which first turned his mind in the direction of an American drama, resulting in the production of the remarkably successful play, "Held by the Enemy." The author, some years ago, chanced to be visiting in Frederick, Maryland, on Decoration Day. The veterans of both the Federal and Confederate armies had made arrangements to strew flowers on the graves of their fallen comrades on the same day, the cemetery in which the Northern men's graves were decorated being in Maryland, and those of the Southerners just beyond the border line, in Virginia. With muffled drums and furled flags the ex-soldiers of the two armies each marched from their own rendezvous to their special destinations, Gillette went to attend the ceremonies at the Union cemetery. As the salute emonies at the Union cemetery. As the salute was fired over the grave there came the sound of firing from the Confederate cemetery. The orator of the occasion noted this fact and in his percration suggested that it would be a noble, humane and gracious act for the body of Union soldiers to march to the Confederate Cemetery and decorate the resting places of the dead of the "lost cause," many of whom, though they had been arrayed against them under a different flag, had been dear neigh-bors and companions before the national strife began. The crowd needed no persuasion, and at once the march began. Word was sent to the Confederate veterans of this purpose, and when the Union men arrived and were received through an open column of Southern soldiers the scene was one of the most tender and touching that the young author had ever witnessed. That noble act swept away all sectional feeling that had prevailed and cemented all hearts in a common beatherhood under the day and Starmand. brotherhood under the dear old Stars and Stripes. This incident, Gillette says, convinced him that the time had come when the people of both the North and the South would be willing and glad to receive a play founded the Civil War, providing its plot should not be drawn by a hand influenced by sectional pre-judice, and a few years later he produced "Held by the Enemy," which has been as enthusiastically welcomed in the South as in the

This Week's Attractions.

THOSE play patrons who have for so long a time been regretting that America has too few works of a distinctively native character, will find an opportunity to welcome one of the worthiest of our dramas to-morrow night, when William Gillette's celebrated war play, "Held by the Enemy," will be presented. It is familiar to the amusement seekers of this city, but its theme and its stirring incidents will meet with no diminution of interest on that account, for the story is one that can be followed with keen enjoyment many times. Mr. Gillette has handled his subject with a careful hand, and never once can there be detected the ele-ment of offensive prejudice, even though the treatment is bold and spirited. Its recent production in New York on the occasion of the ent of A. M. Palmer, was a high compliment to the work, for in a season limited to Coquelin and Hading, Mary Anderson and other attractions under Mr. Abbey's control, it was awarded the place of honor in the list, leading all the others. The author has not only provided a strong drama in "Held by the Enemy," but he is said to feel some pardonable pride in making a military play that is consistent with all the technical tactics employed by his soldier actors. The War Department is said to have furnished him with authority for said to have furnished him with authority for all the military matters he has em-ployed, and before it was first pre-sented to the public was subjected to a very careful revision by General William T. Sherman and other officers of experience. It will be given here with all the New York scenery and by a company of admirable artists, the most of whom have been identified with parts in which they appear from the time the parts in which they appear from the time of the first performance of the play in New York. The principals are Mr. James E. Wilson as Colonel Prescott, Mr. C. W. Stokes as Major Stamburg, Mr. William Haworth as Lieutenant Hayne, Mr. H. A. Morey as Surgeon Fielding, Mr. Will Preston as Thomas Henry Bean, Miss Kate Denin Wilson as Miss Euphemia McCreary, Miss Esther Lyon as Rachel McCreary, and Miss Minnie Dupree as Susan McCreary. ANNUAL SCHOOL APPROPRIATION. An Increase Rendered Necessary by the Growth of the Schools. The Finance Committee met yesterday at the Central Board rooms, and made the general estimate for the expenses of the schools fall to manifest their appreciation when opof Pittsburg during the ensuing year. They are as follows: Ordinary expenses Central Board, $8,119; High School, $5,870; Normal, $1,340; general expenses, $372,475, made up of $361,000 for teachers' salaries, $2,750 for music, $5,000 for evening schools, janitor's dwelling $3,000, less estimated balance on hand February 1, 1889, of $3,500, which makes the total appro-priation asked for $384,304.

This is an increase of $17,604 over last year's appropriation, made necessary on account of additional teachers and a janitor's new building at the High School. The items for the Central Board expenses include those for officers, printing, etc. The additional expense of St. Ow for the janitor's dwelling is considered quartermaster Sergeant Major, G. W. #### A FIRM'S PROGRESS. Resenbaum's Big Trade Compels the Fire to Make Improvements.

Now that the holiday season is past an the rush and bustle has settled down into the rush and bustle has settled down into the expected January duliness, it might be well to take a glance over the field of trade. It is not necessary to include every firm in the city in the observations, as Rosen-baum is a model merchant. The holiday trade of this firm seems almost phenomenal, yet when one considers the low cash prices of their goods and the strict attention paid to the wants of customers, it becomes nothing more than the result of such sound busi ness habits.

The firm is now making preparations for extensive improvements in the storerooms on Market street and on Fifth avenue. Their increasing trade compels them to adopt these measures.

The firm acknowledge that competition is keen and that their rivals are men of judgment and ability, but these talents are overcome by their purchasing goods in large quantities in the East and paying cash for them. The retail sales are then made at the lowest possible rates.

A large clearance sale is now in progres

at Rosenbaum's. These goods must be sold at Rosenbaum's. These goods must be sold in order to give them room to make the pro-posed improvements and at the same time lay in a stock of spring goods. A large quantity of trimmings, white goods, gloves, etc., must be sold and the prices are so low there can be no question but the sale will indeed bring about a clearance.

General Orders No. 12.]

I. Regimental commanders not already supplied, will immediately make requisition for an amount of ball cartridges equal to ten (10) rounds for each man in their respective commands and keep the same constantly on hand as a reserve in some sate and convenient place secure from fire or thest. This ammunition must not be issued to the companies—or used in rise practice in any event—and only in case of pressing emergency of actual service. You will require your company commanders that have not already done so, to retain in possession—carefully stored and ready for issue to the men—a further reserve supply of at least ten rounds per man. This reserve must be made up out of ammunition now on hand or from that which may be first received.

II. Commandants of artillery and cavalry will make requisition for a reasonable supply of ammunition to be kept, as issued, only in the manner required of regimental commanders.

III. The Brigade Board will meet at the Monongaheis House in Pittsburg, Pa., on Priday, the isth day of January, 1899, at 80 clock P. M. Commanding officers will direct that all persons elected, promoted or appointed to commissions in their respective commands that have not already been examined to appear before the board for examination at the day, place and hour named. Those who are now or may be elected before the board convenes must be notified to appear, and a list of the names forwarded to Captain James H. Murdock, Pittsburg, Pa., who is hereby detailed as Recorder to the board, vice Major Joseph T. Speer, Eighteenth Infantry, resigned.
