These classifications of prices on different articles had frequently caused hard feeling in some of the glasshouses between the employers and the workers. All except one article was settled by yesterday's conference, and no trouble will occur. The statement that the question of advanc-ing the men's wages would likely cause a disa-greement, and possibly a strike, was utterly refuted yesterday. The committee of the work-ers did say that they contemplated a request of having wages raised in the future; but the question was not discussed, because the manu-facturers maintain that they never made any promise of an increase in the pay.

facturers maintain that they never made any promise of an increase in the pay. Yesterday rule IV., which says, that gather-ing boys shall work for six months as appren-tices for 10 per cent less than list prices, came up for discussion, because several of the manu-facturers seemed to put different meanings to the words. That was also settled, the rule to remain as it stands. The meeting adjourned at 6 o'clock, to con-yene again in the latter part of next week.
