WORSHIP AND PRACTICE OF VIRTUE

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE DISPATCH.

CAMP, I. SERAGO, ME., August 30, 1888.

Once knew a Gipsy named Carpenter nearly 100 years old—exactly 96 in the summer of 1877, when I was favored with his wise companionship among the beautiful hills and valleys of Western Pennsylvania.

NOT WORTHY A GOD.

"That's jess hit! That's jess hit!" several replied instantly, and with exasperating complacency. "Hus allus knowed that 'Tain't like for hus sech things be."

NO FUTURE STATE.

As I have shown in a preceding article, there is no such thing as Gipsy belief in a future state. As life with them is considered no better than a state, well and good, it will not persist in presenting such ideas and propositions to them.

THE WORSHIP OF VIRTUE.

There are few who can believe any good possible among so faithless and hopeless a people. But there are some who believe in a kind of the Christian world might better develop with very great consistency and profit.

IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN WORSE.

Well-Known Pittsburghers Shaken Up on the Nyrpano. Passenger train No. 1, on the Nyrpano road, at 5 o'clock A. M. yesterday, was derailed at Pymatuning station.

A Freight Conductor Requeathed $10,000 for Saving a Man's Life. SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.

SENTINEL OF THE SKY.

But the most singular feature of the matter is that this notion of supreme being and an antichrist, the temptation, the fall, the expulsion from a state of privilege, the endless punishment for rebellion and sin, and the final sentencing of the Baurie Rom's dwelling by a great chief, like our later poetic station for St. Peter, crystallized in the minds of pilgrims from the New England and Tapscire rivers from 4,000 to 6,000 years ago, remain intact in the brain and thought of every one of their Gipsy descendants that live; that is, the bare story, the myth of a substance, the width of some wonderful fables. But that is all. The Great Head is nothing to the Gipsy heart. From wherever sprang in the night of the ages this orb of lore, while it is clinging to us like a noose, it has no influence on the life.
