Manager Hanlon and His Team Return From Their Trip.

GOSSIP ABOUT THE CLUB.

Brooklyn Wins Two Games and Clinches its Lead on St. Louis.

Mark Baldwin Touched Up by the Cincinnati Reds.

GENERAL BASEBALL NEWS OF THE DAY

The local ball club returned home from the East after a disastrous trip. Manager COLUMBUS. R B P A E CIN'TL R B P A Hanlon talks interestingly about the club's affairs. Brooklyn won two games from Louisville and the St. Louis club was beaten by the Athletics. Boston and New York are making a great fight.

The local ball club returned from its last Eastern trip of the season yesterday, with one victory to its record for the entire journev. The players all looked in good condition, and were as merry as if they had won every game on the trip. Defeat certainly had left no sad impressions on their countenances. Manager Hanlon, however, was somewhat disconsolate about the disastrous trin and talked frankly about it.

"The players," he said, "were weary to start on the journey Eastward. They had played so many hard games at home day after day that many of us were sick when we started for the East. I felt very sick, indeed, and Dunlap was far from well. Our pitchers were all out of condition. I am in hopes that we will brace up from now on until the end of the season. The end is not far off now, and I think we will win a good majority of the games we have to play. Excepting three games, we play all the balance

THE TWO NEW PITCHERS. Referring to the two new pitchers that are expected to join the club, the manager said: "I don't think that Hess will come, but if he does we will give him a trial. He was highly recommended to Mr. Nimick, and that's all I know about him. I have not seen him pitch. However, we would like to try him. I don't know anything as to whether or not Jones, of Homestead, will join us. That is in Mr. Nimick's ing pitcher."

"Will Morris be retained?" was asked. "Now I cannot say anything about that. The matter is not in my charge, but is left entirely with Mr. Nimick and the directors. I cannot say anything on the subject."

The team will tackle the Clevelands to-day for the last series of the season. There is very little enthusiasm about the games, entirely be cause of the poor showing of the club during its last trip. The Clevelands, however, have lately been something of a mascot for the home club, and it may be that their presence here may change the path of defeats to one of victory. The Babies, however, are playing a strong game, and it will not be surprising if they win two out of the three games that they are exdoubtedly once more in difficulties with its pitchers; and as there will be many extra games to play here, the probability is that the finish of the season will be just as disastrous as the former part has been.

PUTCHER CONWAY DOUBTFUL It is not expected that Conway will go into the box any more this year. Some of his friends think he will, and if he does not Maul will be Morris' case is still undecided, but the direct tors may determine this week, by letter, what will be done with him. If he is released it is not probable that he will play any more this year. He is inclined to stay at his home and manage his business. Galvin will pitch for the home club to-day, and either O'Brien or Gruber will be in the box for the visitors. It may be that Jones will be given a try against the Clevelands either to porrow or Wednesday. If he is to be tried at all the best opportunity seems to be this week. He has many admirers in and about Pittsburg. and they are wistful that he be given a trial as

After the present series with Cieveland is nished the home club will go to Indianapolis finished the home club will go to Indianapolis for three games, and return to the home grounds to-day week. The Washingtons will then be here, and will be followed by the other three Eastern clubs. Boston will close the season, and it is probable that the close will be exciting, because of the close struggle between the Bean Eaters and the Ginats. This fact may make the closing games of the season the most exciting of the year.

ASSOCIATION GAMES.

Brooklyn Wins Two More Games From the Lonisvilles and Aims at the Pennant-The Athletics Give the St. Louis a Very Bad Benting.

NEW YORK, September 15.-The Brooklyns and Louisvilles played two games at Ridgewood Park to-day, the Bridegrooms winning both contests. The first game was rather poorly played up the seventh inning and from there to the fourteenth inning it was a battle royal. Brooklyn won in the fourteenth on a base on balls and Foutr's two-bagger. Shannon became abusive in the first inning and was fined $20 by Goldsmith and ordered from the field. Attendance, 1,668. The second game was rather easily won by the home team. In spite of a shower 5,4% spectators were present. There were no brilliant features outside of Terry's pitching.

The Old Pennsylvania Canal is to be Permanently Abandoned. PEPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATOR. HUNTINGDON, September 15 .- The old Pennsylvania canal, which for years was the channel of commerce and travel from one end of this State to the other, is about to be permanently abandoned. For several years past the operation of the canal has been attended with regular losses, and now, inasmuch as it is owned by the Pennsylvania Railroad, which carries all the tonnage tormerly transported on the canal, the determinacanal property to go to ruin, and nothing, it seems, can be done to save it. From 1830, the year in which the canal was first put in operation, until 1850, when the Pennsylvania Railroad completed its line from Philadelphia to Pittsburg, the canal was the only means of transportation for passengers and freight across the country.

From 1850 until now the caual was still maintained throughout a portion of its maintained inroughout a portion of its route for the transportation of coal, stone and lumber. From this town westward to Petersburg the canal was totally destroyed by the floods of last June, and the channel is now a ruinous mass of debris and rocks. CLEVELAND, O., September 15.-The local sebali cranks, of all grades and stations of life, and without regard to previous condition of servitude, have been thoroughly agitated this week over the report of a consolidation of forces between Al Johnson, of this city, and John M. Ward. The stories that have been in circulation in this Johnson's home, would put to flight those ancient yarn spinners who con-cocted the stories of the "Arabian Nights," Totals 1 6 15 11 3 Totals 4 5 15 9 0 and make them bide their faces in downright dismay at their inability to equal the liars of the nineteenth century. One rumor had it that Johnson had bought the Cleveland club outright; another that he had offered a big price for the Pittsburg club and was going to run the organizations in both cities; and still a third said that he had decided to invest $200,000 in the baseball business, which is probably several thousand more shekels than he can command. To tell the plain truth about Johnson he is no more fit to be in control of a baseball organization than was the wrecker Lucas. Johnson would do very well to run a street car company, and he would run a baseball club with pany, and the would run a baseban club with about the same tactics. He would be the driver and the club the horse. But ball players are generally too intelligent to desire to be driven, and it wouldn't be long before they would begin to balk under Johnson's regime and sigh for a return to their former man-

The new association also proposes to buy out the Pimlico and Arlington horse car railway, and to double the track and improve the same. The members of the old jockey club show a friendly feeling toward this new and vigorous association, and several have already joined it.

It is thought that most of the others will shortly follow. Some of the most energetic and shrewdest business men of the State belong to the association, and it promises to be a great and successful enterprise.

THE BOAT RACE DECISION. Some Plain Reasons Why the Race Should be Rowed Over-Hamm's Illegal Action on the Course-Remarks About Carpers.

Probably one of the most unsatisfactory sporting events that has taken place in this locality for a very long time is the Tesmer-Gaudaur boat race. The event was one of the leading affairs of the week, and directly concerns myself, inasmuch as I was called upon to perform a duty that was as distasteful as it was thankless. It was one of the most un-fortunate events that I have been interested in, and doubtless it will have a very dampening effect on professional boat rowing in this locality. It will have this effect because many people will not for one moment stop to argue conscientionsly all the features and outs and inns of the question. Of course I am well aware that numerous people are of opinion that on Friday Teemer was beaten by a better man than himself. Granting this, how ever, does not at all affect the reasons for the decision that the race be rowed over. Like other events of the kinds the race was under a very rigid and clear code of rules. The Teemer party claimed that these rules had been violated, and urged that Gaudaur's arrival first at the winning end was the result of a violation of the rules under which the race was being rowed. This claim or objection narrowed the matter down, not to a question of merit, but to a question of whether or not Teemer had been interfered with or that Gaudaur had received a question of whother of hot reemer has been interfered with or that Gaudaur hast received an undue advantage in any way. Teemer Saturday afternoon claimed that Hamm. Gaudaur's trainer, had interfered with him: in fact, had broken his boat; and he further claimed that Hamm was on the course for the purpose of coaching Gaudaur. In a word, the first objection was overruled at once, because, as referee, I absolutely failed to see at any time where Hamm's boat interfered with Teemer's. The second objection, however, was stronger, and had sufficient force to warrant the decision made. After the race I asked Hamm pointedly at McKeesport what he was doing on the course. Here's what he said: "I was there to protect Gaudaur and keep him from striking any snags." This admission, which was heard by everybody in the room, meant that he was absolutely violating a rule and one of the most prominent. Here is the rale. It is rule 16 of the code under which the race was rowed: "No boat shall be allowed to accompany a competitor for the purpose of directing his course or affording him other accompany a competitor for the purpose of directing his course or affording him other assistance. The boat receiving such direction or assistance shall be disqualified at the discre-

Hamm's Admission. Now I fail to see how any man who can read r understand English can fail to perceive how Hamm's admission and the rule can be reconciled. If guiding a man clear of snags is not assisting him or piloting him, I fail entirely to understand the English language. St. John, who is undoubtedly one of the most honorable and clear-headed gentlemen that I have known in boat-rowing affairs, argued that though Hamm was on the river for that purpose, he did not carry out his intention. This, in my way of thinking, is not a sufficient answer. Hamm or thinking, is not a sunicient answer. Hamm says he was there for that purpose, and he was uncomfortably near the rowers, and when he went out to perform the mission, which he admits, he could do it in a hundred ways not discernible to the uninitiated. I was one of the latter. At any rate, I fail to see why Hamm had any reason, outside of carrying out his acknowledged intentions, to be rowing from side to side ahead of the rowers and within a very short distance of them. Briefly, that is one reason for the decision. Another is that every steamer accompanying the race, except the referee's boat, was ahead of Teemer long before the race was finished. I submit that was an interference. The diagraceful conduct of the McDowell and the Dauntless not only interfered with the sternmost man, but shut out the referee from the race for a considerable distance. Both men have a right to protection as far as the application of the rules were applied irrespective of the merits of the men. Rules are rules with me on all occasions, and Hamm has only himself to blame for the very unfortunate termination of the race. On many occasions Mr. St. John has urged that nobody should be on the course but the rowers, and if Hamm was not on the water and in close company with the fovers, in the interests of his charge, Gaudaur, I fail to see why he was there at all. says he was there for that purpose, and he was

The Little Kickers. It is amusing to find in events of this kind the various kind of kickers. After the decision vas made I met a gentleman who was awfully wild and making considerable noise awfully wild and making considerable noise about the honesty of sports. He very emphatically stated that the affair would ruin rowing here and intinated that the decision was worse than "rotten." I discovered that our friend had been betting on the race and had backed Gaudaur. But the same gentleman a few days previously had stated that the whole "business was fixed," and accordingly he was betting because of "information received." As a rule I have found that these tremendous kickers, who claim to have the dignity and honesty of any particular sport at heart, are people who never hesitate to participate in all the "fixed" affairs that they connect themselves with. I have done with the race and I only regret that Mr. St. John did not resolve to row the race again on a course where he could rely on all the fairness and protection necessary. I am quite aware that the decision will be assailed by many who have not the remotest idea of boat racing rules, and who know as much about a boat race as an elephant knows about hornpipe dancing. Others will assail it because of feelings of envy, combined with the hope of throwing discredit on myself and the work in which I am engaged. Certainly, I anticipate much personal abuse from carpers who have no knowledge of the facts of the case. The intelligent public, however, will distinguish between abuse and argument. I firmly believe that my decision was right, and that it protected the public, and I am happy to say that such prominent and trustworthy authorities as H. M. Long, Attorney Frank Guffy, John Newell, James Taylor—in short, all the leading local authorities indorse my view of the matter. In all earnestness I say that I would make the same deabout the honesty of sports. He very emphat ties indorse my view of the matter. In all earnestness I say that I would make the same de cision to morrow under the same circum-stances. Above all, none of us should forget that in matters of this kind the public is to be protected. I would like to ask those carpers if I had ignored the rules and the case had gone to court, would they have paid my costs in a losing case?

This morning saw an unusually large number of visitors at the track, while the members mustered in full force to see the campaigners take their morning exercise. Budd Doble's stable is a large one, and it kept the celebrated Chicago whip and his assistant, George Starr, both busy to keep their charges in motion. Doble appeared first behind the hay gelding Oliver K, who has a record of 2:16% made at Hartford in 1886, when he won the $10,000 stake. Cook and Craig, of Texas, who were present, stated that the flyer will go to Boston and trot in the special race at Beacon Park Tuesday against Harry Wilkes and Susie S.

Chaukley Le Coney, living near Camden N. J., is charged with murdering his niece in order to avoid paying money due her. An effort was made to fasten the crime on other parties. The accused was arrested at Waverley, O., while attending his alleged victim's funeral.

PHILADELPHIA, September 15 .- Startling developments were made yesterday in the case of the murder of Annie LeConey, who was found in her uncle's dining room at Merchantville, last week. To Clerk Edward Burroughs is due the credit of first discovering the clew which the detectives have followed until it led them to arrest Chankley LeConey, with whom the murdered girl lived as housekeeper.

Garrett W. Murray, the 19-year-old colored laborer who was in the field with Chaukley LeConey, was arrested Friday night. It was charged that Murray received part of the money taken from the dead girl's chest by her uncle, to conceal the bloody clothing, which have been found. PERSISTENT QUESTIONS.

Burroughs was foreman of the Coroner's jury and irritated Chaukley Le Coney by insisting on learning the money relations existing between the dead uncle, Richard Le-Coney, and Annie LeConey. His questions revealed the fact that some thousands of dollars were due from the estate to the murdered girl for wages as housekeeper. Chaukley Le Coney grew pale as Edward Burroughs pressed his questions, and stepping out of the room, he called Samuel Burroughs to him, and, in evident anger. said: "What does Ed mean by these insulting questions?" Burroughs looked him in the face and said solemuly, "Chaukley, you are suspected of murdering your niece." Chaukley left Burroughs and dropped the question. It was Prosecutor Jenkins' idea not to state publicly any suspicion of Chaukley Le Coney's guilt, but all the time he was kept under strict surveillance. Chaukley wanted to accompany the body of his murdered niece to her father's home near Chillicothe, O., and for that reason his arrest was yesterday ordered.

IMPORTANT STATEMENTS. Murray has made many important state-ments. Yesterday, Mr. Jenkins turned Murray over to Detective Warner, who took him to John Cherry's, near by, for dinner, Cherry had already started the theory that the poor girl was killed because she claimed a large sum as wages. Warner fed Murray lavishly and secured an admission from him that the clothing stained with blood was hidden by him at the request of Le Coney. When Wagner was done with the negro the latter was sent to an obscure cell. theory of the State is that Chaukley Le Coney killed his niece to save money to himself and other heirs of Richard Le Coney, whose estate was about to be settled. It is believed that the dead girl's clothes were afterward arranged so as to give the impression that some outrageous hand had murdered the girl in an attempt on her

ARRESTED IN OHIO. Chaukley Le Coney is behind the bars to-night charged with the brutal murder of his niece. Annie E. Le Coney, near Camden, N. J., last Monday morning. Marshal Donovan received the following dispatch:

PHILADELPHIA, September 14. Please arrest and hold Chaukley Le Coney, charged with murdering his niece, Annie Le Coney. He left here yesterday with her remains for her father's, James Le Coney, at Waverly. Don't let him escape.

WILSON H. JENKINS,
District Attorney, Camden, N. J.

Immediately on the receipt of this telegram the arrest was made by Officers Donovan and Schwartz. The prisoner when ar-rested seemed very cool, and simply re-marked that he had not been in town long enough to do anything when placed behind the bars, and when the telegrams read to him he turned to brother, James Le Coney, who had ac-companied him to the jail, and said: "Oh, pshaw, I wasn't in the house at all," and then continued: "I suppose I will have to stay in this jug all night."

He said that he would get even with District Attorney Jenkins. His brother, the father of the murdered girl, is a firm believer in his innocence, and denounced his arrest as a shameful outrage.

An immense crowd was present. The principal speaker was Hon. John W. Mason, of Washington, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, a member of the society. Mr. Mason, who is personally very close to President Harrison, confined his remarks chiefly to the pension question, arguing in favor of more liberal laws in this regard. He declared himself in tavor of a service pension for every honorably discharged the cells in the Forty-seventh street police station there was to-day a young woman of plump face, well-rounded figure and black hair and eyes. She is the originator of an ingenius device for lightening other persons' pockets, which has not only the merit of novelty, but has also met with success, On July 6 the prisoner called at the house pension for every honorably discharged soldier. She pressed her hands against her stomach and doubled up in seeming agony, while her features were distorted, and her bonnet and hair were all awry. Mrs. McNamee was greatly alarmed and wanted to send for a doctor, but the young woman said that she was somewhat relieved, and didn't think a doctor at all "It's a cramp." she said. "I have them pension for every honorably discharged soldier. In concluding he said:

We are told a pension and retired list upon so large a scale would bankrupt the country, and that the country must of necessity wait until some of its creditors die and discharge the obligation before an attempt is made on a large a scale. Let us see how this is. It is estimated that something over 2,000,000 soldiers were enlisted, that more than a million are dead, leaving about 900,000 honorably discharged soldiers yet alive. Of this number 323,020 were on the pension list at the close of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888, and the entire pension roll for that year, including widows, children and the pensioners of the War of 1812 and the Mexican War, amounced to $78.775.841. It is estimated that the dependent pension list, which would make the total list a little less than $84,000,000.

But suppusing it to be $100,000,000, the $100,000,000 would pay all the pensions proper and there would be on the retired list only such soldiers as were more than 60 years old and not on the regular pension list, which would make the retired list comparatively small. With immense and increasing revenue of this country, these sums could be met without imposing upon the people any onerous burden of taxation. It will be remembered that the Government has a daily income of more than a million dollars, including Sunday. This sum is paid largely by importers, distillers and brewers. The money would be paid out in small sums to more than half a million peonle scattered all over the country, lit would not go into banks, syndicates and trusts to be manipul lated to the detriment of the business interests of the country, but would pass into the proper channels of trade in every part of the U nion. With such a sum going quarterly into every section of the country, we should have no Wall street corners, no financial panies, no "black Fridays. often. The only cure for it is to lie down.

If I were at home I should go to bed and

in Ohio Politics-Veteraus Generally Are

Indignant. . General Charles L. Young, of Ohio, a director of the Gettysburg Battlefield Monu-mental Association and Past National Senior Vice Commander of the G. A. R., arrived in Pittsburg last night, via Washington, over the B. & O. He said he saw General Geo. S. Merrill, of Massachusetts; Chas. H. Grosvenor, of Ohio, and many others at Washington, and the absorbing topic there, as at Gettysburg, appeared to be Tanner's removal.

General Barnum, of New York, about expressed the feeling of the soldiers generally at Gettysburg, saying he felt deeply sorry the resignation had been made. It was General Barnum who formulated the resolution finally adopted in a modified form at the Milwaukee National a modified form at the Milwaukee National Encampment, indorsing Tanner.

"The comrades generally," said General Young, "seem to think the action removing Tanner indicates a change of policy on the part of the administration regarding the pension question. As there are 800,000 pen-sioners in the United States, it would not take a very large percentage of these to Miss Brown's pocketbook contained $4 in money. Lieutenant Bartkiewitch had $17 and a gold watch. No pocketbook was found on him, or in fact, any other proof of the crime. Still, somebody seized him, and when he was taken before Miss Brown, in Belmont's office, she identified him at once as the man who had grabbed her $4. sioners in the United States, it would not take a very large percentage of these to raise a howl when their direst interests are thought to be menaced in pension matters. "It is to be hoped there will no step backward in the liberal pension policy promised specially by the party in power. Tanner has a very wide constituency, and this alone has gained him sharp rivalry within the party lines. As there are no formulated charges against Tanner and the Govern Bartkiewitch's voice shook with emotion this atternoon as he told a DISPATCH reporter his story, speaking both French and English. Pressed for his reason for coming to America, the Russian looked down for an instant, then raising his eyes manfully, he party lines. As there are no formulated charges against Tanner, and the Government is apparently willing to give him another position, it looks very much as if Tanner was being sacrificed to satisfy his opponents. Of course, Tanner is not a John Sherman or a James G. Blaine intellectually, but there is no hustler on the instant, then raising his eyes manually, he said, simply:

I met a countrywoman of yours in Paris, a sweet American girl, and we are engaged to be married. It was to see her that I came to this country. I had $300 and 100 Russian roubles. I went to Boston because my fiancee lives near that city, though I cannot bring myself to tell you her name. Finally I came to New York because of a dispatch from Cracow which are lectually, but there is no hustler on the stump in this country who has such power with the great mass of the veteran vote. The Democratic soldier vote of Indiana and Brooklyn was the principal element that elected Harrison. I have heard some men named as Tanner's successor, and I am surprised that such men as General George S. Merrill or Warner would think of acception the Commissionership." you her name. Finally I came to New York because of a dispatch from Cracow which arrived at Rutiand Square, saying a letter with money had been sent to me to New York. I had been to the postoffice after my letter, and inding nothing, was told that the New York branch of Kidder, Peabody & Co., of Boston, was in the Equitable building. While standing in the hall a moment somebody jostled against me violently and threw me against another man, who seized and held me. I was then taken before Miss Brown as the man who had assaulted her. She was told to identify me, and she said I was her assailant.

None of the Russian Guard think that he had anything to do with the case.

ing the Commissionership."

Speaking of Ohio politics, the General looked forward to a lively time in the Buckeye State, but there again the Tanner question crops up. On account of the heavy soldier vote of Ohio, which will be largely influenced by the outcome of the Pension Commissionership, it will require careful manipulation by the Republicans to hold their own. If Tanner is cared for and succeeded by an able and liberal comrade, the suspicion of retrenchment in the pension office may be allayed. The Senatorial question, General Young thought, would overshadow the Gubernatorial. It will be a hard fight with such men as the Paynes, father and son, Colonel Brice and Charle Foster in, which means plenty of resource and a very large vote. There are no dis-turbing elements in the German vote this year, which is generally solidly Republi-
