THE ACTORS' PLOT.

How Two Thespian Knights Got Out of a Tight Place by First Terrorizing a Country Town

And Then Selling Burglar Alarms to the Scared Residents.

SAVING A COUNTRY BOY FROM DESPAIR

Having feasted our eyes on all this, let us enter the "Cave of Destiny."

There is probably no other branch of business on the earth in which a man of ordinary tact can continue so long without capital as the theatrical profession, but even in that some day the climax is sure to come.

Landlords, printers, bill-posters and other sources of supplies may be the victims of a little diplomacy by "stood off" for an indefinite period, but eventually the hard-hearted landlord is sure to be found, who through repeated experience has become calloused to all tales of woe, and upon whom tears and promises have no effect.

It was a Bonifacio of this description that brought the town of the Grand Marais and aggregation of metropolitan artists to a sudden close in a small town in Northern Michigan.

For months they had worked round the dials in the delirious excitement of comparative opulence. But alas, like the letter that failed to materialize, the "money" never came.

Strong personal effects guarded by the manager had taken to himself evens and silently departed. The doors of the dining room were closed, and the actors' mythology talks as was the return of the "Sixty," and the different members of the metropolitan aggregation gazed into the hungry eyes of each other and wondered what was to be done.

On April 26, 1881, the shareholders in the society were as follows:

Table with 4 columns: Name, No. of Shares, Name, No. of Shares. Lists names like De Plunkett, M. A. B. B., etc.

Such are the almost incredible results of the "Cave of Destiny" in 1881. It must be stated, too, that since that date the yearly receipts have steadily increased until, at the expiration of the 12 months closing with the commencement of this present year, 1889, they reached the enormous sum of $2,000,000.

The only possible method to abolish the gambling at Monaco, in view of the concessions made, would be to indemnify the society for an enormous sum which would be necessary to solve this end, and it is to be feared that, however desirous the new Prince of Monaco may be to break off his connection with the administration of Monte Carlo, it is for him, certainly at present, an impossibility.

A WONDERFUL CITY.

It Contains 30,000 Happy People Who Score the Mighty Dollar.

Lying between Assam and Barmah is the remote little hill State of Manipal, lately visited by Indian officers, one of whom, writing on the forests of the State in Indian Forests, gives an extraordinary account of Impihall, the capital.

It is situated in what appears a dense forest. "Neither spires nor chimneys out the blue sky, nor smoke ascending from the chimneys of the sylvan homes of the natives."

Nothing, in fact, bespeaks the busy nature of 30,000 to 40,000 people, and yet hidden away among these trees is the palace of the Rajah and his court, the residence of his favorites, and a family having a large income around the homestead.

The capital of Manipal is a royal residence dedicated to luxury and amusement. All are happy. The streets are crowded with smiling, healthy faces of all ages and both the marks of toil or labor. There are no schools in the State, and court favor and promotion are secured by success in polo.

Unfortunate is the man who is not allowed to trade. Imports and exports, except in certain articles that yield a royal revenue, are practically prohibited.

Retiring After a Quarter of a Century to Claim His Inheritance.

Philadelphia Record.

After nearly 25 years' absence A. M. Little is going home to Woodbury, N. Y., to claim his share of his father's estate.

Lytle ran away from home when a boy and shipped as a cabin boy on an East India merchantman. He followed the sea for several years, and ultimately located in Kansas City, Mo., where, as a druggist, he was accidentally recognized by his father.

The parents had searched everywhere for their boy.
