The people who hold this view go on to affirm that the Bible tha and chronology. And the interence from that premise is that the Bible is not such a valuable book as most Christiaus think it is the second statement of the text. Here, above all other places, we learn the lesson of y which to label that sort of reasoning, which to label that sort of reasoning, hope.

In comes this argument, and affirms that your description from beginning to end is equally mistaken. You have never read the book, in the first place, or, granting that you may have glanced between its covers, the idea which you would give us of that remarkable record of vanity and introspection is wholly beside the point. We spection is wholly beside the point. We deed, I would go further and affirm that Frederick Robertson knew more about religious truth than David or Isaiah. Of urse he did, because he lived these days when we have the ord of Christ Himself to teach us about God. But all this has really no more connection with the value or authority than the fact that Prof. Brashear knows

WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN. Whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning—tor our learning in religious faith and duty. The Bible, as some old divine said, was written to tell us not how the heavens go, but how to go to heaven. There is no word anywhere in heaven. There is no word anywhere in Holy Scripture where the smallest claim of infallibility is made for its writers in any other matter than their deliverances of the revelation of God and their declarations of Lord is delaying His coming a long ion of God and their declarations of His will. It might have pleased God to have made them the messengers of all imaginable truth. The Bible, like the sacred books of Egypt, might have comprised an inspired arithmetic and an inspired grammar contains the contains a comparison of the world, and note the small progress of the good, and wonder if the kingdom of God will ever come at all. It will come. "One day is with the Lord as a thousand and an inspired geography, and so on through the list of all possible text books. It might have pleased God so to have instructed the race that all the latest improvements and conveniences should have adorned the life of Adam and Eve in Eden. The scientific revelation might have been given them once for all. There might have been given them once for all. There might have been given them once for all. The scientific revelation might have been given them once for all. There wight have been a railroad station at Ur of the Chaldees, and conversation by telephone between Dan and Beersheba. That it did not please God so to do is one of the things we have to be thankful for. The word "discovery," the word "investigation." the word "gradual" would have no place in our dictionaries. Half of the pleasure of living would have departed out of human life. There would have been

As a matter of fact, God left the messengers to whom He gave the revelations of His will just the the same sort of men, so far an ordinary knowledge was concerned, that they were before. He did not remove one of them out of the surroundings, the limitations, the defective ideas, the ignorances of his age. He no more taught them to think or speak in the language of exact science, as we know it to-day, than He taught them to speak English. ev would have been nearly as unintelligiole in one case as in the other. There is every reason in the world to expect that as com-pared with the knowledge of this day, the mowledge of Moses will be found deficient. Moses was not a professor in an institute of technology. The truth with which Moses were written for our learning in religion. It matters not at all to us though mistakes be found to the number of 20,000 in the science, in the geography, in the history of the writers of the Bible. These things are quite beside the point. They do not concern us has God left. beside the point. They do not concern us. They only show what we know siready. That God left the men of the Bible with their personality untouched, with the limitations of their age about them. They only emphasize the marvelous way in which the men of the Bible exceeded all other men resident in their days upon the earth, in the kind of truth which they set out to teach. It is not likely that King Josiah knew any more about geology than King Sennacherib, but in the religious learning of the two—what a significant difference!

The right use of the Bible is to go to it for example, for represent ter instruction in right example, for reproof, for instruction in right living. I would like you to notice that when St. Paul here and in other places speaks of the helpfulness of the Bible, the part of the Bible which he has always in mind is the Old Testament. For that, of course, was all the Bible there was in St. course, was all the Bible there was in St. Paul's day. These books of the Old Testament, with their records of religious cruelty, with their chronicles of extirpation, with their polygamists and slave holders, with their insistance upon ritual—St. Paul advises all Christians to read the Old Testament Scriptures, and declares that to all diligent readers they will be "profitable for salvation." Even our Lord Himself had said that the Old Testament Scriptures were as much as men needed. "They have Moses through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope."

There are set down in this sentence two facts about the Bible: First, that the Bible was written for our learning; and, second, that the result of a diligent learning of the Bible will be hope. Here, then, is defined the purpose and the lesson of the Word of God.

The sentence was written only as a parenthesis in an argument. St. Paul had quoted

The sentence was written for our learning.

Auditor Duncan says: "It appears that M. W. Dallas and J. E. Dallas, M. W. Dallas & Co., made a voluntary assignment on the 12th of December, 1873, to S. H. Nesbit, in trust, to A MIRROR OF HUMAN EXPERIENCE.

There 'was shortcoming then and sin as there is now, and there were brave and earnson is this comprehensive definition of the purpose and the lesson of the Bible. I can of transgression. There were good men who not think of any phrase which better fell. There were instances of those who had sets forth the reason why the Bible was all that the earth can furnish, and yet were written, than that it "was written for our learning;" nor can I bring to mind any single word which more adequately sums up the best of all that the devoutest students. There were obscure and humble people up the best of all that the devoutest students who were of more account in the sight of God than all the Nimrods and Pharoahs of "hope."

It is well, in these days, to emphasize the fact which St. Paul states here that the in the Old Testament. Nor is there any Bible was written for our learning. It is possible temptation but we may get arms to plain that the learning which he means is inght against it out of that ancient armory. simply and solely that which is related to religious hope, the Bible was written, St.

It has been its of the sun and moon than Joshua could a gradual process. At every stage of it have been. As a result of this conviction there have been defects of all sorts. That is the declaimer has but a small opinion of the Bible. The argument is that the Bible was in the oldest and longest and truest of all in the oldest and longest and truest of all the records of the race how nan has grown. Gradually be grows in knowledge of the world about him. Gradually he grows in knowledge of the world about him. Gradually he grows in knowledge of the world about him. Gradually he grows in knowledge of the world about him. Gradually he grows in knowledge and love of God above him. It would, indeed, have been remarkable if a trained scientific specialist like Laplace had not known a thousand times more about the habits of the sun and moon than a sturdy soldier like Jeshna. It would have been discouraging, indeed, if in the England of the nineteenth century after Christ men had known no more about the vorld we live in than was known in Syria in the filteenth century before Christ. If there are really any educated Christians to-day who would think of disputing these assertions, then there is some reason for making them. But they are perfectly self-evident—there is no need of getting excited about the rimph of the right. In the days of Noah, in the days of Abraham, in the days of Noah, in the days of Abraham, in the days of Noah, in the days of Noah, in the days of Abraham, in the days of Noah, in the day intended to teach men geology, natural history and the habits of the sun and moon; and that, proving to be a good deal behind these scientific times in regard to these matters, it is therefore discredited from Genesis to Revelation.

It would, indeed, have been remarkable centuries which lay between the entering in of sin into the world and the advent of the Savior. Generation after generation came into being and passed away again, looking for One who, in their day, came not. But He did come at last.

HOPE IS THE LESSON. than the fact that Prof. Brashear knows more about telescopic lenses than Phillips Brooks does, has to do with the congregation of Trinity Church, Boston.

Patience, the Old Testament teaches. Hope is the lesson of these ancient pages. As it was then so it is to-day. Still is defect about us. Still are we far from any kind of completeness, physical, moral, men-tal, spiritual. But behind us lie the ages of

MANAGING A PAPER

Mr. Duncan Surcharges the Advance Assignee With $5,031 57.

SOME MATRIMONIAL TROUBLES Hattle Clark Sent to the Penitentiary for a Rather Long Term.

A MARRIED WOMAN'S JUDGMENT 18 VOID

R. C. Duncan, Esq., auditor to pass on testimony and report distribution in the natter of the voluntary assignment of M. W. Dallas & Co., to Rev. Dr. G. H. Nesbit, has prepared his report to Common Pleas No. 1, and it shows, in some respects, a rather remarkable state of affairs surrounding the running of a religious newspaper and the conduct of business.

Auditor Duncan says: "It appears that ment on the 12th of December, 1873, to S. H. Nesbit, in trust, to pay the creditors of said firm. The property assigned was a weekly religious newspaper, known as the Pittsburg Advance, and the necessary outfit therewith, also books and book accounts, subscription list, and a note in the hands of Joel H. Bigham, all appraised at 55, 104 57, $4,000 of which was the value put on the subscription list of $000 names. The assignee took possession February 21, 1874, and sold the assigned estate on July 17, 1874. He charged himself with $5,104 57, and claimed credit for the subscription list, which is billed as a total loss, as also Bigham's note, then deducting necessary expenses, he showed a balducting necessary expenses, he showed a bal-ance in his hands of $161 22. The amount real-ized by the sale was $763 25, and the sum total realized from an estate appraised at $5,104 57 was $237 22.

A QUEER AGREEMENT. A previous auditor found in favor of the account rendered by the assignee showing a balance of only $164 22 in his hands, and exceptions to his report were sustained by the Court. Mr. Duncan, however, finds that the assignee entered into an agreement with Dallas, one of the assignors, whereby they, Nesbit and Dallas, were, in the words of a witness, and Dallas, were, in the words of a witness, "to stand together without any charge or compensation, and to see if the paper could be made to pay its indebtedness; if it could do that, it was to belong to, us equally."

Under this arrangement the paper was run by the assignee for about 18 months, during which time sie says he lost about $5,500, and its circulation fell from 8,000 to 2,000 or 2,500 when the property was sold at assignee's sale for $237 12. The auditor says that during this time the assignee acted as absolute owner, though he claims to have paid some creditors of the assigners. There is no statement of the business during these 18 months. The auditor finds from the testimony that at the assignee's sale of the property, the assignee through other parties became the purchaser of the assigned estate, and continued to conduct the paper himself thereafter.

MISMANAGEMENT CHARGED.

MISMANAGEMENT CHARGED. He also says that in his opinion the delay of the assignee in having the estate appraised, and in promptly disposing of it, and particularly in entering into the above mentioned agreement with M. W. Dallas was a gross mismanagement of his trust, and such a violation of the docof his trust, and such a violation of the doc-trine which forbids a man who fills a position of a fiduciary character to derive or attempt to derive any personal benefit or advantage from such trust as should render him liable to the total appraised value of the estate. The auditor, therefore, finds that the credit which should be allowed the assignee in the sum of $73 for nec-essary expenses, and that he should be charged with the difference between that sum and the appraised value of the estate, and therefore surcharges the assignee in the sum of $6,081 57.

Judge Ewing Decides That a Married Wemnn's Note is Void. Judge Ewing yesterday morning handed down an opinion in the case of William A. Mc-Donald against D. A. McDonald and Mary F. test on a motion to strike off two judgments on notes for $480 each, on the ground that they had been given by a married woman. The act of June, 1857, declares a woman a femme sole trader, and allows her to issue securities when acting for her own estate. Similar cases have been contended, and the constitutionality of the act not questioned. Previous to the passage of the act, the acts of 1845 and 1872 prevented a married woman giving just such securities unless her husband joined.

Judge Ewing, in his opinion, holds with the former acts, and that a judgment note given by a married woman is void, and therefore orders it stricken off. had been given by a married woman. The act AUCTION BALES.

SENTENCES PASSED.

BACK TO THE OLD LAW.

Hattle Clark Sent to the Penitentiary for Larceny.

In Criminal Court yesterday Mr. Marshall asked for a postponement of the argument for a new trial in the Porter conspiracy case. Next Saturday was fixed for the hearing in the motion, when the arguments will be made.

Sentences were passed on the following cases: Edward Klaster, to years to the workhouse for larceny; John Conboy, one year to the same institution for aggravated assault and battery; James Jenks, three months for larceny; George Fletcher and Henry Thomas, one year each for the same offense; Peter Musser, three months for felonious assault and battery; Margaret Wilson was fined $550 and got four months for illegal liquor selling, and Hattie Clark, the only one sent to the Penitentiary, was sent there two years and ten months for larceny. Larceny.

NEW TRIALS REPUSED.

But One Was Granted to Mrs. Hamill Against the Royal Arcanum. New trials were refused yesterday in the cases of Joseph K. Cass against Robert A. Bole; Lewis H. Lewis against Bridget Rattigan, and Urling & sons against Stewart & Henry. A new trial was granted in the case of Lenora Hamill against the Royal Arcanum, an action to recover an insurance benefit for the death of her husband, who was a member of

of a Bill. The answer of James Pickands, J. W. Frie and J. M. Bailey, trustees for the syndicate certain of the creditors of Graff. Bennett Co., was filed yesterday in the suit brought by others of the creditors to have the sale of the others of the creditors to have the sale of the firm's property to the trustees set aside. The answer denies the allegations of fraud and improper conduct, and also denies that the plaintiffs ever made proper application to the assignee, Judge Bailey, in respect to the improper conduct of the other defendants. They admit that the Court was never advised of such allegations of misconduct, but deny that such facts existed. The dismissal of the hill is asked for.

THE WAR OVER.

The Injunction Against the Pittsburg Incline Dissolved. The injunction obtained by the city re ing the Pittsburg Incline Company from con-tinuing work on their incline was dissolved yesterday, an agreement between Chief Bigelow and James McLaren, President of the incline company being filed. The agreement allows the company to continue the work, but it must be under the supervision of Chief Bigolow and the plans be approved by him. The incline is to be 10 15-100 feet above the street at the north curb line, and 18 45-100 feet above the street at the south side property line.
