credit to their order. The bill will differ from others, in that it will invest a Committee of the House, consisting of Judicial peers and certain lay peers, with power of penal discipline over the House of Lords. The action of the committee will be subject to confirmation or rejection by the House itself, but if the bill is literally construed upon lines designated, the membership of the House of Lords will be materially decreased. Even a hereditary House divided against itself cannot stand.

Truth:

I can hardly imagine that the public are in the very smallest degree interested in the shrill shrieks of the plagiarist that proceed from time to time out of the lips of silly vanity or incompetent mediocrity. However, as Mr. James Whistler has had the impertinence to attack me, with both venom and vulgarity in your columns, I hope you will allow me to state that the assertions contained in his letter are as differently untrue as they are deliberately offensive. The definition of a disciple as one who has the courage of the opinions of his master is really too old, even for Mr. Whistler to be allowed to claim it, and as for borrowing Mr. Whistler's ideas about art, the only thoroughly original ideas I have ever heard him express have had reference to his own superiority as a painter over painters greater than himself. It is trouble for any gentleman to have to notice the lungbrations of a so ill-bred and ignorant a person as Mr. Whistler, but your publication of his insolent letter left me no option in the master.
