

TURNING TO AMERICA.

Millions of Portuguese Trade to be Lost to English Merchants.

MR. BLAINE COULD SPOIL IT ALL.

Several Monarchs Finding it Expedient to Talk of Economy.

OTHER FOREIGN ITEMS OF INTEREST

(BY CABLE TO THE DISPATCH.)

LONDON, January 25.—[Copyright.]—The Portuguese embroglio is taking an American turn.

The patriotic effervescence would have subsided by now, but it continues with such unusual vigor that Englishmen are beginning to suspect that it is being kept going by foreign gold.

That the British trade with Portugal is worth stealing is proved by the fact that Lisbon, Oporto and other cities are swarming with foreign commercial agents who are hooking large orders from merchants, frightened out of their business senses by the popular clamor and strife.

That the trade which seems to be slipping out of English hands amounted last year to nearly $15,000,000, and its loss or material reduction will bring ruin to many firms, is raising questions of compensation, the settlement of which may require some blood-letting.

But there is another side to the question at which sensible Portuguese are already looking with anxious eyes. British imports from Portugal were valued last year at nearly $20,000,000, made up chiefly of wine and fruit. Imports have easily overtaken the latter from other markets, and a slight increase in excise duty on the former would cause widespread ruin in Portugal.

THE CHEAPER PLAN.

If the anti-British agitation be permitted to go the length it threatened, Lord Salisbury would not hesitate to attack Portuguese wines. Such action would be generally approved by his own countrymen, and it would probably prove cheaper and more effective than sending a fleet to the Tagus.

Portugal has received scant sympathy in Europe. The Russian and French newspapers have abused England with vigor equalled only at Lisbon, but their Governments are not prepared to give more than a pliantic support.

Spain has went profusely over her dear neighbor's troubles, but the Portuguese are beginning to suspect they were only crocodile tears, and a fundamental Lisbon newspaper to-day warns the Spanish Government that they had better not imperil good relations by hinting at the annexation of Portugal.

The Spanish papers have even gone over the Iberian peninsula's lack of symmetry, and would like to round things off by taking in Portugal. But the Portuguese do not worry over their geographical position, and think that if there is to be any annexing it should be done by them.

ALL EYES ON AMERICA.

In Europe all is selfishness, and patriots are turning their eyes westward to the great Republic which, as all the world knows, is great-hearted, generous and just. Portugal is prepared to make a bid for an American alliance.

The United States may at once have the trade which Portugal has long enjoyed by peridious Alibion and valued last year at $2,000,000, if she will only lead a hand against England. Some enthusiastic patriots have publicly expressed their willingness to throw in the Azores and Madeira trade, worth nearly $1,000,000 a year, and to subscribe a line of steamers between New York and Lisbon. Some are even prepared to admit Mrs. McMurdo's claims, and in the absence of the treaty, give six months' notice of the whole amount demanded by Mr. Blaine. Thousands of Portuguese are convinced the offer has only to be made to be joyfully accepted. Why, then, the asked, should the American Minister have been petitioned the Portuguese Geographical Society's meetings except to show his country is in sympathy with them?

WHY HE WAS SO SERENE.

At the meeting referred to England and everything English was assailed with the coarsest abuse, but Mr. Loring sat serene through it all. As a matter of fact, he did not understand a word of what was said, and thought the feeling displayed only a new form of scientific enthusiasm. But this explanation had not been made public in Lisbon, and the American Minister was at a meeting—that is enough for the patriots and those who are using them as tools.

It will require another note from Mr. Blaine on Mrs. McMurdo's claims, and straighten things out. Then the boycott will be extended to the Americas.

AN AMUSING CEREMONY.

The Royal Family of Germany Nails a New Standard to its Staff.

(BY CABLE TO THE DISPATCH.)

LONDON, January 25.—Kaiser Wilhelm presented a new standard to the Gales du Corps, yesterday, in place of that given them 150 years ago by the great Frederick.

The bronze hat of Potsdam, the place in which the ceremony took place, did not look as though the court was in mourning. It was full of army and state officers, in resplendent uniforms, and included two Emperors and two field marshals, Moltke and Blumenthal. The officers held the flagstaff, while, in accordance with custom, the royalties nailed a silken banner in its place. The Emperor drove the first nail without hitting his thumb, the Empress the second, the Empress Frederick the third, and so on down to the youngest member of the Emperor's family. His Majesty acting for his 3-month-old baby and his boy Oscar, 13½ years old, who could not be trusted with a hammer.

On Monday the Emperor will celebrate his birthday, but without the pomp usually intended. His Majesty being in mourning not only for his grandmother, but also for two of his most intimate friends, the Duke d'Acosta and Prince Schwarburg-Budolstadt; but he could not well refuse the presents which are arriving in large numbers.

NOT IN LOVE WITH BOURNEMOUTH.

Even the Prince of Wales Disgusted at Albert Seeberry.

(BY CABLE TO THE DISPATCH.)

LONDON, January 25.—The Prince of Wales went to open a hospital at Bournemouth, the fashionable watering place from whose pine trees and balmy air Secretary Daniel Manning derived such benefits that the inhabitants maintain he would be alive if not had he not prematurely returned to America. The Prince has returned utterly disgusted, for there are degrees of snobbery and flattery at which even he draws the line. On one of the Prince's arches at Bournemouth was an inscription likening him to the Savior, and the Prince couldn't stand that.

Less complimentary, but almost as original in its way, was the conduct of the clergy at the principal church in town, who received the Prince at the door in surplices with the ceremonial of the reception of a corpse. It is understood that the clergy meant well, but the Prince fled, and Bournemouth will see him no more.

Buffalo Bill Safe in Naples.

LONDON, January 25.—Buffalo Bill and the Wild West Show arrived in Naples to-day, crossing the Mediterranean in a violent storm from Barcelona, but arriving with the men and other animals in good condition.

The Crew Makes Life Miserable.

LONDON, January 25.—Following the example of the Sultan of Turkey, the Czar is overhauling his household accounts. He has discovered numerous irregularities and enormous waste, and those responsible are being made to feel that life is not worth living.

WILL FIGHT IT OUT.

The Husbands of Tennis Chaffin and Victoria Woodhull on the Warpath—Defending Their Wives in Dead earnest.

(BY CABLE TO THE DISPATCH.)

LONDON, January 25.—Sir Francis Cook and John Biddolph Martin, with their respective wives, known in America as Tennis C. Chaffin and Victoria Woodhull, after undergoing years of persecution at the hands of hidden enemies, have determined at last to hunt these enemies down. In addition to the advertisement in the Times offering $1,000 reward to anyone revealing the names of the persons engaged in the conspiracy to defame Lady Cook and Mrs. Martin, and £200 pounds for the name of the printer and author of the leaflet in question, there was to-day issued a circular headed "Victoria Woodhull and Tennis C. Chaffin: a Revival of a Page of American History."

The circular begins with an offer of the rewards made in the Times, but giving in addition to the address at Hyde Park gate, No. 142 West Seventeenth street, New York. The circular quotes a number of articles from the Sun, Evening Post, Times, Herald, and other newspapers of 1873, in which the acquittal of the sisters is published, and a letter of Mrs. Woodhull, all tending to refute the accusations made against the two ladies. It was only after much persuasion that Mr. and Mrs. Martin could be induced to speak about the matter, although they had themselves made it public. But they were finally prevailed upon to reveal such information as did not tend to defeat the discovery of their traducers. Martin evidently intends to make it very warm for somebody. He says that he and Sir Francis have determined to have no stone unturned to bring the guilty ones to justice, and that they have every prospect of succeeding, only a few links being wanted in the chain of evidence. They attribute the conspiracy to defame the characters of their wives to the influence of persons interested in the Beecher trial, and have already, in the opinion of high social and political standing who are proved to be implicated in the crime. The motive of it has not yet been discovered. Mr. Martin and Sir Francis Cook are both very wealthy men, and are in no light to a finish. Mrs. Martin is greatly broken down in health, and is only now recovering after an attack of congestion of the lungs.

BITS OF BRITISH POLITICS.

Goschen's Budget Trembling Him, and a Gladstone Victory is Nigh.

(BY CABLE TO THE DISPATCH.)

LONDON, January 25.—Mr. Goschen's budget is giving him trouble. The people are getting an exaggerated idea of what the surplus ought to be, and they are now speaking of £5,000,000, which is almost certain to be the outside mark. Every man who pays taxes wants rebates, and many are certain to be disappointed. Goschen is, therefore, hard at work explaining the demands which he has upon the surplus, and particularly hints at the Farnell Commission as an item which will make a considerable inroad upon his hoard. He cannot satisfy everybody, and it looks as though he will make more enemies than friends by his prospective financial proposals.

There is a probability of the Gladstonians winning the seat at Glasgow made vacant by the death of Mr. Craigellier. They have selected Sir Charles Tennant as a candidate, and he avows himself as an out-and-out supporter of the Grand Old Man's Home Rule policy, while the other candidate, Mr. Parker Smith, believes Balfour formidable. The fight will be a hot one, but Sir Charles Tennant's popularity, as well as his principle, ought to stand him in good stead.

NEW BUSINESS FOR THE SULTAN.

He Goes to Work at Budget Making and Talks of Economy.

(BY CABLE TO THE DISPATCH.)

LONDON, January 25.—The Sultan has suddenly taken a fancy to budget making, and this week the finance department, after days of feverish activity and nights of restless agony, has evolved a statement showing a deficit of 30,000,000 francs. The Sultan thereupon cheerfully consented to a reduction in the salaries of all State officials, of 15 to 20 per centum. He even graciously hinted that the expenses of the Imperial household might be reduced by 25,000,000 francs yearly, but his majesty would probably make short work of any minister daring to take him at his royal word.

VICTORIA GETTING GIDDY.

Her Majesty Witnesses Some Tabloids, One of Them Quite Interesting.

(BY CABLE TO THE DISPATCH.)

LONDON, January 25.—Queen Victoria has been quite giddy, the old lady having this week actually attended tableaux vivants organized by the Princess Beatrice without the aid of the assistance of her husband, who is still sailing abroad. The successful picture is said to have been one representing the murder of Rizzio, the lover of Her Majesty's beautiful but improper ancestress, Mary Queen of Scots.

The Princess Beatrice made a porly Countess of Argyll, and the Princess Louise was a satisfactory Queen of Scots.
