THE PROCTOR EFFIGY

A Theme for Bitter Remarks by Senator Spooner, of Wisconsin.

MR. GEORGE AROUSES HIS ANGER

By Declaring Jefferson Davis a Man Always Faithful to His Trust.

WARM WORDS FROM SENATOR PLATT,

Who Contends That All Citizens Should Have National Protection.

There was a lively debate in the Senate yesterday over Chandler's resolution in regard to the outrage at Aberdeen, Miss. Senator George took occasion to eulogize the late Jefferson Davis, and was promptly called down by Senator Spooner, who waxed highly indignant. No action was taken on the resolution.

WASSINGTON, January 28.—The Senate to-day resumed the consideration of Mr. Chandler's resolution in relation to the maltreatment at Aberdeen, Miss., of Henry J. Fanz, and Mr. George made an argument against it, declaring his belief that the adoption of the resolution would be a serious infraction of the Constitution and a very serious encroachment on the rights of the people of Mississippi. He took up the clause of the Constitution (section 2 of article 40, which Mr. Wilson, of Iowa, and other Republican senators referred to yesterday as authorizing the resolution) and argued that no decision of the Supreme Court and no act of Congress had ever given such a construction to it.

There could be no doubt, Mr. George said, if the decisions of the Supreme Court were to be relied on, that the Senate, as a part of the law-making power had no jurisdiction to pass a law to punish the men who had committed the Aberdeen outrage. If that were so, then he asked what right and what power had the Senate—and under what construction of the Constitution—to make an inquiry into the transaction, and for what purpose?

AN UNPROVOKED INSULT.

Mr. George went on to say that not only did he condemn the hanging in effigy of any respectable officer of the United States under any circumstances or under any provocation, but that in the case of Secretary Proctor there was no provocation for the insult. He had never heard from any other Democrat any other comment on the conduct of Secretary Proctor—for which that indignity had been attempted to be inflicted on him—except that he performed a painful and delicate duty with consideration to the feelings, the prejudices even, of the people of the South. Among the distinguished sons of Mississippi Mr. George referred to Jefferson Davis as a man who had never betrayed his trust or failed in the discharge of his full duty, whether he served the United States or the Confederacy.

Mr. Spooner was not ready to admit that there might not be circumstances under which jurisdiction might be conferred by Congress on courts of the United States to secure a citizen of the United States in his Constitutional rights of life, liberty and the pursuits of happiness, which the States denied him by force and by fraud.

MILLER'S COURSE COMMENDED.

As to the course of the Attorney General in the matter, Mr. Spooner said he was glad that the day had come when the United States had an Attorney General that would take notice of an outrage on an American citizen. The hanging in effigy of Secretary Proctor had not only brought out the feeling of bitterness that existed in the South, and which had no counterpart in any village of the North, but it had also brought into the sunlight that recklessness, that cruelty, that brutality, that indifference to law and to decency which the country had, for many years, occasion to complain of.

Referring to the accidental letting fall of the rope which held the Proctor effigy in Aberdeen, Mr. Spooner declared that if Fanz had been an old Indiana soldier, that effigy would have fallen into the street, not by accident, but with a rush and a whirlwind of indignation. He then pictured Fanz, whom he described as a mere boy, being led down the street of Aberdeen like a slave in the olden day, surrounded by two or three hundred people, with a brawny man marching behind him and laying on his defenseless head and body and face, for nearly 200 times, a lash which with every blow cut his face and head until he was so disfigured that he could hardly be recognized.

A HARSH CHORD STRUCK.

An appeal, he said, had been made to the mayor of the city, and had been made in vain. "Think of it!" he exclaimed in passionate tones; "alone, far from his home, away from friends, lashed and scourged in the market place, in the presence of 300 chivalrous gentlemen, and not one to step forward and arrest that brutal arm." That night, Mr. Spooner said, Fanz had been marched out of the city of Aberdeen, been put into a train, and where he was now, nobody knew. He expressed his regret that the Senator from Mississippi (Mr. George) had felt called upon to pronounce a eulogy on Jefferson Davis.

It was to have been expected that homage would be paid to Jefferson Davis throughout the South on the occasion of his death; it was to have been expected that he would be borne to his last resting place, surrounded by his old companions, and to the music of muffled drums. But he (Mr. Spooner), had hoped that no one would deem it necessary to pronounce a eulogy of Jefferson Davis in the Senate Chamber of the United States. It would strike a harsh chord in the breasts of millions of men all through the North.

OTHER REBELS AS BAD.

The people had not regarded him, although the chief of the Confederacy, as falser to the Union and to its flag and to his oath, than thousands of his confreres. But the people had not believed what the Senator (Mr. George) said to-day about Jefferson Davis—that, whether under the Constitution or the Confederacy, he had never betrayed a trust. The people believed, on the contrary, that he had sat in the Senate Chamber, betraying daily, and hourly and nightly the highest trust ever reposed in man. But it was not for that that they execrated his memory. It was because they had held him responsible for the atrocities, the unspeakable, devilish, horrible cruelties visited on Union prisoners at Libby prison, Belle Isle, Salisbury and Andersonville.

It was because they charged him with the responsibility of holding men prisoners of war to starve them. He (Mr. Spooner) did not know what the resolution would accomplish in the way of legislation or of Constitutional amendment, but it would subserve one purpose. It would turn the light on that transaction at Aberdeen. It would prove the existence of a spirit of bitterness and brutality there.

THE LAW OVERLOOKED.

It would show that there was a community, claiming to be intelligent and lawabiding, where the love of Jefferson Davis' memory is stronger than respect for law, stronger than love of liberty, stronger than the impulses of humanity—the law of God written in every human heart. If the resolution would accomplish nothing else, it would subserve that one good purpose.

Mr. Gray said the Senator from Wisconsin had evaded the issue raised by Mr. George. The hanging of a high official in effigy, while a thing to be condemned most severely, was not so unprecedented an outrage, Mr. Gray said, as the Senator had described it; and he referred to the fact that, quite recently, President Harrison had been hung in effigy in the State of Indiana. He moved to amend the resolution by adding the words, "and also the letter of instruction to the said marshal to which the report of the said marshal was a response;" and also to add to it the following: "And that he be requested to inform the Senate whether in the alleged assault on Fanz any right secured to him by the Constitution or laws of the United States was invaded or violated."

WANTS DUDLEY LOOKED AFTER.

Mr. Butler offered an amendment, instructing the Attorney General to furnish all the papers in the office of the District Attorney of Indiana, or on file in the United States Court there, relating to the charges against W. W. Dudley for corrupting or offering to bribe Indiana voters in the last Presidential election.

Mr. Platt said he understood Mr. George's contention to be that Congress was powerless to pass any law to protect a citizen of one State in his rights in another State. If that were so, it was pretty important that the country should understand now weak, powerless, insignificant—he had almost said contemptible—a Government they lived under. That had not been the idea of the American citizen. It had not been the idea of the expounders of the Constitution, or of the courts. He held that, under the Constitution, there was power in Congress to protect the citizen in the enjoyment of the rights guaranteed to him by the Constitution and to punish those who deprived, or attempted to deprive, him of those rights. And if there were not laws already on the statute book to punish, in any State, any infraction of the rights guaranteed by the Constitution, it was high time that such laws were passed.

NO ACTION TAKEN.

The debate was further continued by Senators Gray, Chandler and Hoar. The first part of Mr. Gray's amendment was agreed to. The second part was not voted on.

Mr. Call offered an amendment calling on the Attorney General for a report as to the hanging in effigy of President Harrison in Indiana and of the then President Cleveland in Kansas.

Without action on any of the pending amendments the resolution went over till to-morrow. After an executive session the Senate adjourned.

The Department of Justice is trying to discover the whereabouts of Fanz, the victim of the recent alleged outrage at Aberdeen, Miss., with a view to his examination in regard to that affair.

A NEW BANKING BILL.

Mr. Dorsey, of Nevada, Proposes a Measure Making Bonds the Basis of Circulation—Par Value to Limit the Amount Issued.

WASHINGTON, January 28.—Mr. Dorsey, of Nebraska, from the Committee on Banking and Currency, reported a bill to provide for the issue of circulating notes to national banking associations. The text of the bill is as follows:

That upon any deposit already or hereafter made of any United States bonds bearing interest in the manner required by law, a national banking association, making the same shall be entitled to receive from the Controller of the Currency circulating notes of different denominations, in blank, registered and countersigned as provided by law, not exceeding in the whole amount the par value of the bonds deposited: provided, that at no time shall the total amount of such notes issued to any such association exceed the amount at such time actually paid in of its capital stock; and that all laws and parts of laws inconsistent with the provisions of this act be repealed.

Mr. Bland, Missouri, raised the question of consideration against the bill, and the House determined—yeas 143, nays 110—to consider the bill. After considerable debate, in which Messrs. Bland, of Missouri, Anderson, of Kansas, Pendleton, of West Virginia, McRae, of Arkansas, and others took part, the bill went over. The opponents of the bill claimed that the measure was in the interests of the banker rather than of the farmer and the laborer, and that it was antagonistic to the free coinage of silver.

CARTER'S USELESS KICK.

A Vain Protest Against the Distribution of House Patronage.

WASHINGTON, January 28.—At last night's caucus of the Republican members of the House, Mr. Carter, of Montana, made a complaint about the disposition of patronage by doorkeeper Adams, and offered a resolution of inquiry. All of the members, however, with the exception of Mr. Carter agreed that the doorkeeper had acted wisely in making his appointments.

The resolution was accordingly tabled, receiving only the affirmative vote of Mr. Carter.

A NEW METAL WITH A LONG NAME.

Mr. Hatzfeldt, of Kentucky, Thinks He Has Made a Discovery.

CINCINNATI, January 28.—Schmiedbarenguss is the inconveniently long name given to a new composite metal for which almost marvelous properties are claimed. It is composed of pig iron, wrought iron, copper and aluminum bronze alloy and a flux. It is produced direct from the gas cupola without annealing, yet it can be welded and hammered like iron or steel and can be manufactured, it is claimed, at a less cost than malleable iron or steel castings.

At a test made January 20 in Louisville, it is said to have endured a tensile strain of 168,000 pounds per square inch, that being the limit of that machine. The new composition is the discovery of Mr. Hatzfeldt, of Newport, Ky., who has made many experiments in producing aluminum.

Chicago's Death List Growing.

CHICAGO, January 28.—Before 12:30 today 86 certificates of death were received at the Department of Health. This number was greatly in excess of that yesterday.

It doesn't take all day to get anywhere from the Sturtevant House which is located corner of Broadway and Twenty-ninth street, N. Y. This is of importance to those who come to New York to spend a few days.

Coughing

IS Nature's effort to expel foreign substances from the bronchial passages. Frequently, this causes inflammation and the need of an anodyne. No other expectorant or anodyne is equal to Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It assists Nature in ejecting the mucus, allays irritation, induces repose, and is the most popular of all cough cures.

"Of the many preparations before the public for the cure of colds, coughs, bronchitis, and kindred diseases, there is none, within the range of my experience, so reliable as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. For years I was subject to colds, followed by terrible coughs. About four years ago, when so afflicted, I was advised to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and to lay all other remedies aside. I did so, and within a week was well of my cold and cough. Since then I have always kept this preparation in the house, and feel comparatively secure."—Mrs. L. L. Brown, Denmark, Miss.

"A few years ago I took a severe cold which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continual use of the Pectoral, a permanent cure was effected."—Horace Fairbrother, Rockingham, Vt.

La Grippe Cured.

Captain W. A. Abbett, a well-known and much-respected citizen of Des Moines, Iowa, has fully recovered from a severe attack of "the grip." He took two 50-cent bottles of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and is enthusiastic in his praise of that valuable medicine. It afforded him much relief, he says, and brought him through sound as before he had the attack. Three of his children have also had the disease and been piloted safely through it to a complete recovery by the free use of this most excellent remedy. WSU
