HE WAS MUCH ADMIRED AND RESPECTED

In the pleasant home of Dr. C. C. Hersman, of 1902 Carson street, Southside, hangs a picture, highly prized, not so much for its intrinsic value as for the reminiscences of bygone days, and the many interesting events which go to make up the career of a Confederate soldier which it recalls. It is the picture of Stonewall Jackson's boyhood home, situated on a beautiful, slightly elevated piece of ground, in a bend of the West Fork river, a tributary of the Monongahela, about five miles below Weston, Lewis county, W. Va. The picture represents the house, of the old plantation style, on the left, and the old Jackson mill erected on the bank of the West Fork in 1837 on the right, with a portrait of the late Confederate general, neatly arranged in a high stone wall, partly hidden by a ceived the brevet rank of Second Lieuter mountains which go to make up the Allegheny range. In the extreme left, standing near the house, is a large sycamore tree study before he went to West Point.

Jackson, however, was permitted to live in the old house until through the influence of Dr. Carmack and others he became a cadet at West Point. For several years before this he was a constable in the northern half of Lewis county, and although a minor, his uncle's influence secured him the office. In July, 1842, being then 18 years of age, he entered West Point. His literary prepara-tion was defective, and entering a large and distinguished class, he at first held a low killed. It was lost for many years, and was from behind a stone breast. The one soatterward found by Mr. Barrett, who, by the way, is Mrs. Dr. Hersman's brother-inlaw, in the old house after it had come into the possession of Mr. Clifton. Stonewall Jackson cwned a valuable farm, on which was a race course and mills; the atter having been repaired several times is still in operation, and supplies the farmers for miles around with flour by the old-fashned mill-stone process.

When Mr. Clifto : bought the place the house and mill were almost in ruins. He remodeled the house in which Jackson had ived until he became a cadet, and turned it into a summer cottage. A rustic porch extends along two sides. It is supported by sycamore posts in the natural wood, merely trimmed, with no dressing, which gives it a men during the war, although they had the II has als been repaired, and has a much different appearance than when Jackson played about it in his childhood days. In the old home still stands the little furnace which claimed to be the place where Cummins Jackson, Stonewall's nucle, 18 said to have been detected counterfeiting money, and had to leave this home. The mine from which he obtained his ore, said grave. to be not far from the house, has never been found: neither were his molds ever discovered, so that his friends say now that there is no positive proof of his ever having been a counterfeiter. It is said by some that he had an underground way from the basement to the river, and that he threw his implements into the mill pond.

A short distance from the house, on the river bank, is an old family burial ground containing the graves of members of the Jackson family dating back far into the eighteenth century. There are many conflicting accounts about the life and ear ieutenant General Thomas J. Jackson. Members of his own family say that much that has been printed about him is incorrect. Through the kindness of Mrs. Laura Arnold, Jackson's sister; Granville Brake, a cousin of J. H. Cliston, Dr. Hersman's father-in-night John Brick was locked up in the law and the doctor himself, the following Twelfth ward station for disorderly con- different, yet both appeal to the scriptures, data is furnished, and as the most of it comes from Mrs. Arnold, it ought to be considered correct, although it differs in many points from the biographies published in the various enevelopedias:

BORN IN CLARKSBURG. Stonewall Jackson was born in Clarks-bury, Va. (now West Virginia), January 21, 1824. His father, Jonathan Jackson, died when he was 3 years of age. Four years later his mother died. Left alone at the age of 7 years, he received shelter at first from his father's sister, Mrs. Brake.

But he left there, saying: "Uncle Brake and I don't agree. I have quit him and shall not go back any more." He set out from Clarksburg and traveled on foot of the former home to his grandfather, in Lewis county, about 18 miles distant, then belonging to Cummins Jack-son, a half-brother of his father, where he was received kindly, and found the home he to be no other way than to pay it himself.

AN IDOL WORSHIPER.

Father Wall Inveighs Against the Evils of Telling Fortunes.

YOUNG PEOPLE RUINED BY SEERS.

Dr. McAlister Preaches a Sermon on Modern Creed Revision.

LIVE TALKS ON TOPICS OF THE DAY

Rev. Father Wall, rector of St. Paul's Cathedral, scored the people of his parish yesterday, particularly the married women, on the practice of patronizing fortune tellers and other wizards who read the past, present and future, as they cast one eye on your hand and the other on your pocketbook. The reverend gentleman denounced them, and said he had positive knowledge that young people had their lives ruined as the result of consultations with fortune tellers. An effort was made to find out whom he meant, but this could not be learned. It is supposed that a recent case told in the confessional was the cause of Father Wall's remarks.

Father Wall began by saying that all persons who visited fortune tellers for the purpose of learning their fortune violated the first commandment of God. He said they became idolators by so doing, and worshiped an idol, at whose feet they fell down on their knees. He told the story of Moses on Mount Sinai, who worshiped God while Aaron and his people were worshiping a golden calf in the valley.

MOSES WAS ANGRY.

When Moses came down and found what the people were doing he was so angry that he threw down the two stone tables he carried and broke them. The people threw all their jewelry, rings, etc., at the feet of the idol and danced around it, while the spirit of God was on the mountain. There were 23.000 of them, and God made a law for fear the people would fall into idolatry. Father Wall said:

When a person visits a fortune teller to ascertain his fortune, he goes to find out what God alone, and no one else, knows. When you give to a fortune teller your presence and make him or her believe that they have a foreknowledge of seeing the inside view of the future, you adore him and make him believe he has power not given to the devil. Many people believe that when they have anything stolen or lose their friends, the first thing they should do is to run to a fortune teller. If you think he can peer into the tuture you make him the equal of God. Therefore you have strange gods before Him, and violate the first commandment. You are guilty of a mortal sin, and should expect the punishment of God for an indulgency in this practice.

IT IS IDOL WORSHIP. "We find youths, young girls, and es pecially married women, making a practice of this sin. If you deliberately visit a fortune teller you are indulging in a mortal sin. If you go out of pure thoughtlessness it is not so bad, but it is a sin nevertheless. It is the same thing as going to an idol and that on a certain occasion when he was so giving your heart to it. This is idolatery of invincible that the Union forces said: "We the worst kind. I would like to impress on would just as soon charge a stone wall as | your mind that fortune tellers compose the worst characters in the community. One class of the business is fortune telling and the other is the seduction and rain of youth. To my own personal knowledge I know of persons who have been ruined by consulting these people. I warn all persons of the congregation, and hope you will extend this knowledge, that it is a mortal sin against self shot while riding across it. This, how-ever, is doubted by his relatives. He mar-their nefarious business, for the designs they ried a Miss Neale, and his widow still lives have on the morality of youth." near the old home, A daughter, Miss Neale Father Wall also preached on the necessity of further contributions to pay for the decoration of the church. "Many people," for the way the work has been done. Of course we cannot be insensible to a feeling of gratitude at what has been accomplished ing into a battle that they might win if I do not want your praise, but do want your right, but never otherwise. He was buried money. This congregation could easily give in Lexington, Va., and during the Hunter raid through Virginia the Union soldiers $20,000 at one sitting, but instead of that we only got a little over one-fourth of it."

ON CREED REVISION.

Dr. McAllis Relates a Story About the pects some day to write a true account of Grent Editor, Hornce Greeley.

Rev. David McAllister selected as a text for his sermon in the Eighth Street Church yesterday, the following from Luke ii:34: "This child is set for the fall and rise of Israel." These are the words of the venerable Simeon when he entered the Temple with the Savior in his arms, and those rejecting Him predict their own fall. The sermon was on the revision of the Presbyterian confession of faith, said the preacher: "If men accept Scripture as ultimate and supreme authority, what remains is a mere question of interpretation. One man may have a certain opinion, another one entirely for their definition of the law of Christ. It was sad to observe during the debate of the past week on the question of the revision of Confession of Faith, how some individuals become woefully wrong in their opinions. One speaker denounced Calvin. I do not think that man ever read Calvin. Most men have not who talk that way. If that had been all it would be simply the challenge of a human interpretation f Christ's law. Another declared Paul taught some of the doctrines in the confession he would reject even Paul, and still another, if they were the utterances of the Bible, he would tear that book to shreds." Mr. McAllister then referred to a conversation he had with the late Horace Greeley, when he assailed some of the principles of Scripture in an editorial in the New other, but soon became acquainted, and in the exchange of con-fidences following Brick was struck York Tribune. The question arose as to what was the standard of right and wrong. what was ultimate? Dr. Allister contended that as the Bible was the purest word that man ever knew; it should be the stand-ard. Greeley then made the following char-"What name did you give?" asked the acteristic reply:

"If the Bible says hang a man, put a murderer to death, then I say hang the Bible."

The next thing to consider was the acceptance of the authority of Christ in civil society. The State must define what is right and what is wrong in its own sphere. It punishes what is wrong according to its own definition. The whole subject of criminal laws is in the realm of morals, Here again comes the question of the stand-ard of right and wrong. It simply means the acceptance or rejection in its own sphere of the moral standard of Christ. If the State rejects that moral standard and defines crime by another standard, it makes some-thing legally right which by Christ's law is morally wrong. Simeon's words predict the fall of such civil power, but if it accepts and onforms its whole organization, life, constitution, statute laws and all practices to the laws of Christ, it shall rise. Its welfare
