BULL ON THE BRIDGE.

Travel on the Great Pennsylvania Railroad Was Suspended.

ALL THE TRAINS WERE DELAYED.

The Wild Western Animal Controlled the Tracks and Only

RESIGNED AT DEATH'S STERN DEMAND.

Considerable Excitement for a Time in the City of Brotherly Love.

A bovine on the Pennsylvania Railroad bridge, at Philadelphia, caused great confusion and delayed traffic. The corporation was finally victorious in the struggle.

PHILADELPHIA, February 16 .- A bull controlled the Pennsylvania Rallroad yesterday afternoon. It was not an ordinary bull, but one that was obstinate, self-willed and determined. The majesty of the responsible position of President George B. Roberts had no terrors for that bull. General Manager William J. Latts ordered the removal of that bull, but the bovine paid no attention to the instructions issued from the third floor of the Broad street station and held the tracks. Up went the arms at the Seventeenth street tower signaling trains to move, but the bull said nay and he was obeyed, Passengers from New York were delayed. An emigrant train rested on the tracks for nearly half an hour without turning a wheel. People who wanted to go West anxiously inquired what was the matter. Trainmen conically answered: "It's the bull."

Hot messages came over the wires from the North, the South and the West asking for information as to the cause of the delay. There was but one answer: "It's the bull."

IT'S THE BULL.

Suburban and commutation ticket buyers flocked about the closed gates and demanded admission. "This is funny. What does it all mean?" they inquired. "It's the bull," was the reply. Nothing more could be said. What time does the next train go out for Brvn Mawr?" was asked at the bureau of

"Why, it's 6:20 now, How do you make that out?"
"It's the bull."

With various expressions of wonder, sur-prise and expectation travelers wandered in and about the station. Some thought there had been a terrible accident, others that there was a strike on the road and not a few that something had happened they did not even pretend to guess at,
"It's a bull," passed through the growd, without a single one knowing what it meant and without an official able to enlighten

THE MAN SAID "SHOO."

The bull that controlled the Pennsylvania railroad had come from the West and was shout to be corraled in the abbatteir drove rards when he took a notion that he would make a break for liberty. Dashing through the gate leading from Thirtieth street he rushed up the steep 20-loot bank and was on the railroad tracks. The animal was calm. He was free and strammeled. He could either start back to Pittsburg or move on to Philadelphia, as he might elect. He surveyed the field and was apparently undecided which way to go, when a rash individual standing near the tower house at Thirtieth street, shouted:

The bull would not shoo. He was not that kind of a bull. He was dignified and resented the attempt of a solitary man to shoo him. Waving his head from side to shee him. Waving his head from side to side, he looked at that man, and when he in column front.

THE ONWARD RUSH.

The man discovered that he had made a mistake as the bull neared him with head He climbed the tower without the sid of an elevator, but made the animal furious as he stuck his head out of the window and repeated, "Shoo!"

With a snort of disdain the bull charged for Broad street. He met nothing on his way, and made rapid progress until he resched the Schuylkill bridge. Relaxing Every day brings additional proof that his speed as he touched the trestle the bull was seemingly puzzled. He could not understand the lack of a firm loundation. First one hoof would sink into empty space, and the bull would flounder about. When he again found a solid footing it would be but a second before he would lose his equilibrium. In his endeavors to keep upright the bull swayed from track to track.

HOLDING THE BRIDGE. The telegraph operator at the Thirtieth street tower had send word to the Broad street station to stop all outgoing trains, and to Powelton avenue and South street to halt the incoming trains. There could be no traffic while the bull held the bridge with its two tracks. The animal retained his dignity if not an upright position, and with great determination forged ahead toward the city proper. Not a train could move. The bull owned the road, and for the time being was a beast of great power, if not of wealth.

Floundering from side to side of the bridge with uncertain step he kept moving until an unhappy misstep brought him on his side, and a snap told the tale of a broken leg. He could go no further, but he quite is effectually blocked all travel as if he had been on his feet.

been on his feet.

Business could be delayed no longer.

Trade and pleasure could not be thwarted. The buil had to go, or else the trains could not go. A skirmishing party from the abattoir armed with axes and knives approached. A blow on the head and a slash in the throat proclaimed a victory for the Pennsylvania Railroad. Bones were strashed to the arm. Railroad. Ropes were attached to the car-cass and, with the aid of a switch engine, the dead brute was pulled to the West Philadel-phia side and thrown over the embankment. Then President Roberts went his way to his beautiful home at Bala station, Vice President Thomson speeded toward Merion and the traveling public were free once more to go at will. No more was heard the explanation: "It's the buil."

NEW IDEAS IN ART GOODS.

George Kurtz Gives Seme Interesting Information About the Latest Crazes. During a conversation with George Kurtz, of Jeseph Eichbaum & Co.'s, that gentleman remarked: "It is something curious how many crazes develop in the art trade. At present the demand is for Trenton or Beeleek wares, an entirely new and beautiful article lately placed on the market and once more china painting is all the rage. Next to it in popularity are the matting acreens which some of our amateurs are decorating beautifully in color and by the introduction of photographs here and there, surrounded by clever designs in scroll and "By the way. Brass goods are coming into vogue again; most likely on account of that material's wonderful cheapness at present. Articles which sold readily for $20 and $30 a few years ago, can now be dupli-cated for $4 and $5.

Children Enjoy

And a Debt of $10,000 Wiped Out Through E. M. Ferguson Will Locate a Summer Resort in Connecticut. The following telegram was received last night from New London, Conn. The party CHICAGO, February 16 .- Rev. Dr. Ives, of Auburn, N. Y., the "Church debt referred to is Mr. E. M. Ferguson, President raiser," demonstrated again to-day the fitness of his soubriquet. The occasion was of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Na-

June, and it is his intention to make it a beautiful summer resort and watering place.

The property consists of about 5,000 acres. The property consists of about 5,000 acres.

The wealthy Ferguson family of Pittsburg, who recently bought Fisher's Island, are going to lay out the eastern end of it in a big game preserve in English style. They will build a solid wall of masonry seven feet high across it from shore to shore, dividing it into two nearly equal parts. At the extreme eastern point an old house is to be repaired and used for agame-keeper's lodge. Then the eastern part of it is to be stocked with various kinds of small game. The whole island had already been stocked with quall and loug-legged jack rabbits before the Fergusons purchased it, and two or three times a year the Fisher's Island Game Club, which controlled the island hunting, used to shoot of rish on the island. They have already issued an order forbidding coastwise farmers to visit the Island and carry off seaweed and kelp, as they have been in the habit of doing for a great many years, and even scientific collectors are to be warned off. The castern part of Fisher's Island is a land of lovely grassy hills and deep hollows clothed with thick scrub-oak thickets. In the hollows are small fresh water ponds in which delicious perch and the Islands salvy forth to desirey the crops and "garden salvy forth to desire the the fisher's Island is about seven miles long and from one-half a mile to a mile in width. HEADQUARTERS
REPUBLICAN EXECUTIVE COMMITTER.
ALLEGHENY, PA., February 15, 1890. To the Republicans of Allegheuy:

By a most decided vote the Republicans of Allegheny, on Friday, February 14, nomi-nated the Hon. James G. Wyman, he carrying every ward, with the exception of one. The election is conceded to have been honestly conducted, and no question is raised as to the title of Mr. Wyman as the choice of the majority of the Republican voters of Allegheny.

It is the duty of those who voted on Friday to come to the polls on Tuesday and cast their ballots for the nominee.

During the ensuing term of the Mayor our city will become a city of the second class, and can we afford to place the management of our grand Republican city in charge of the Democracy? There will be five po-lice magistrates to be appointed by the next Mayor, and other very important duties de-volve upon him, which, if the Mayor should be a Democrat, would result disastrously to the Republican party of this city in the fu-ture. Under Republican rule the finances of the city have been managed so ably that the credit of the city stands second to none in this country. Do you wish to risk a we think not.
