

A CLERICAL OUTCAST.

An Ordained Priest's Thirst for Liquor Leads to His Death.

TRIED TO REFORM MANY TIMES

But His Old Falling Got the Better of Him Every Time.

A HYPODERMIC INJECTION GIVEN.

The Man Refuses to Divulge the Name of the Physician Who Administered It.

The death of Rev. Herbert Feron, in Philadelphia, is being investigated. When but 15 years of age he desired to enter the priesthood, and was ultimately ordained. He was eloquent, well educated, earnest and sincere. But strong drink mastered him so much that he was unable to keep his engagements. While dying he refused to divulge the physician's name who administered a hypodermic injection.

PHILADELPHIA, March 3.—The coroner is to-day engaged in the investigation of the case of Rev. Peter Herbert Feron, the priest who died at the Pennsylvania Hospital yesterday. It has been learned that Mr. Feron was born in England and was brought to this country in childhood by his parents. He expressed a desire to enter the priesthood when about 15 years of age, and after the usual preliminaries was accepted as a student at the Institute of St. Joseph, at Baltimore, where he was ultimately ordained, and became quite a favorite as a preacher. He was eloquent, well educated, earnest and sincere. Soon after he began work in the ministry he became addicted to the use of ardent spirits, and every means was adopted to prevent the growth of the desire for intoxicants, but in vain. He lost all his regular appointments and still his friends pleaded with the authorities of the church in his behalf. He was again and again permitted to preach, but so often failed to meet his engagements that finally he became a clerical outcast—in a word, a priestly tramp. He went to Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis, St. Paul and other cities, and preached on occasion offered, but his old falling got the better of him every time. At last he returned to Baltimore, the city he called home, and after a season of recuperation, he started out anew, this time as an unauthorized missionary, the church having refused his return. He went to a number of cities and sought engagements in vain. He wrote to many vicars in all parts of the country, but got no commissions.

HIS WEAKNESS FOR DRINK.

About ten days ago, according to information lodged with the coroner to-day, Father Feron came to this city. He had sought the priests of his order or the prominent officials of the Catholic Church, but in a circumlocutory way got acquainted with a Catholic lady and after a number of visits and a lengthy explanation, she secured his position. He told her how he had sought service in behalf of the church in vain, and finally intimated his weakness for drink. She sympathized with him, and sent him to her physician. He to the doctor his condition, and asked for a morphine prescription. This was refused. He then pleaded for an injection of morphine, as he had been "suffering the torments of the damned." Dr. Burns declined to administer the sedative, and Feron left his office.

The unfortunate fellow then visited a dozen physicians, but failed to obtain relief, every one advising him to go to a hospital for treatment. Finally he called on a doctor, who declined to give him a prescription, but in order to quiet his pain and horror, administered a hypodermic injection of morphine.

SUFFERING GREAT PAIN.

This relieved Feron, and he went to a saloon and took more liquor, which was sold to him as he appeared perfectly sober and said he was in great pain. Subsequently he was seen to fall in the street and was taken into a drugstore. Here it was found that his injuries were not serious, but his condition was such that medical treatment was necessary. The police patrol wagon was summoned with the idea that he would receive medical attention at the station house. Thither he was taken and committed as a "drunk." His serious illness was discovered later, and he was taken to the St. Charles Hotel, where he had registered on Friday as P. Herbert. At the hotel he was put in his room and attended, but his condition was such that the proprietors concluded to remove him to the Pennsylvania Hospital. Here last evening he died. He told the hospital physician that he had been given a hypodermic injection, but refused to divulge the name of the surgeon who had performed the operation, and soon after died. An inquest will be held to-morrow.

SELF-HELP THE BEST.

Senator Spooner's Objections to the Blair Educational Bill. WASHINGTON, March 3.—The Senate resumed the consideration of the Blair educational bill to-day, and was addressed by Senator Spooner. He said the Republican party was not committed to the bill, but that it was opposed by many party organs. He wanted the children of the nation to be taught to read, and especially to read the newspapers, but he did not think it sensible for Congress to pass a compulsory education law which it had no power to enforce within the jurisdiction of the different States. He did not believe in appropriation from the national Treasury for educational purposes unless in exceptional cases. He believed that with people, as with individuals, the help was the best help. He believed that the tendency of the day was too much to paternalism in government, and that the policy of the Blair bill was to do just the reverse. All this, unless it were necessary step, and he denied that it was a necessary step.

FIG IRON GOING DOWN.

Reducing the Tariff on Rails Won't Injure the Manufacturers. A Pittsburg iron man, in commenting on the outlook for trade last night, said: "The indications are that pig iron will go down to $19 or $20 per ton. The present price of $21 is a little too high, and the furnacemen at the figures quoted would still make a reasonable profit. As for other iron and steel products the indications are good. "The reduction of tariff on steel rails to $12 won't hurt anybody, and I see no reason for the outcry. Why the English maker to-day can scarcely compete with the American on an equal basis, is clear, and it is clear that very few people would translate the printed words 'complex wide shades,' into 'complete window shades, as intended.' This explanation is clear, and it is feared that the writing of the man who prepared the advertisement, will doubtless enlighten them."

Explained. Through an oversight, an announcement was allowed to appear in Danziger & Co.'s advertisement in yesterday's issue of THE DISPATCH, which made it seem confusing to its many readers. It is to be feared that very few people would translate the printed words "complex wide shades," into "complete window shades, as intended." This explanation is clear, and it is feared that the writing of the man who prepared the advertisement, will doubtless enlighten them."

HULLINGS FOR THE SENATE.

The Colonel Engaged Cutting Timber in Wild West Virginia.

Colonel Willis J. Hullings, of Oil City, is one of the most congenial business men who visit Pittsburg. He is well known in the oil trade, has always been prominent in State politics, and at present is a candidate for the Senate. He is now held by Mr. Allen, of Warren. The Colonel realizes that if Mr. Allen is nominated in Warren and he in Venango that the contest for victory will be a hot one. At present the Colonel is devoting his time to developing his lumber interests in West Virginia. His timber is located in the Cheat river valley, along the West Virginia Central road, and he expects to begin extensive operations in a short time. He has just completed three mills. His market will be in the East. He sells large quantities of spruce to the paper makers, and when it is mixed in certain proportions with rags it will make all varieties of paper. In chatting about Pittsburg last evening he said: "The people in this city don't know how much the town is growing. If I go away for a few weeks and come back I can see big improvements on every hand. I am amazed at the activity and development. Most of it certainly has been wrought by outside capital, but the old conservative people of the city are beginning to awake to its possibilities. Pittsburg is booming, and at such a rate of progress I don't know in what position she may yet land."

The Colonel is a great lover of nature and he loves over the picturesque scenery and the trout found along the Otter Fork river. To catch trout 13 inches long, he says, is quite common.

THE HONEY ABSENT.

But Milk Flowed Freely on the Southside Yesterday. It was a land flowing with milk, yesterday morning, when George McCutcheon, the meat and milk inspector, condemned the milk arriving at the head of South Nineteenth street and spilled the condemned lactical fluid in conjunction with the Southside Water Company, the bacteria and other specimens of animal life condemning the milk. Inspector McCutcheon said that he would not care as far as the milk was concerned, but objected to the water. Mr. McCutcheon said it was the most amazing thing in the world to see the crowd gathered to see the alleged milk pouring down the gullies and anxious to know who was being milked and to such an enormous extent. Cups and tin dishes were brought into requisition to save some of the rejected milk, and many people on the Southside took samples of the condemned fluid home to use in domestic purposes.

OPENING OF NAVIGATION.

The Old Rail and Lake Rates of Last Year Reopened. Navigation between Cleveland and Detroit will commence for the season to-morrow. The winter was such a warm one that as a general rule the Lower Lakes were open and comparatively free from ice. Railroad rates expect that the Upper Lakes will clear up in a few weeks, and navigation was resumed about March 23. It has been many years since operations were begun so early in the spring as in 1890.

We have almost reached our majority.

Years in business next June.

The past month's business, February, 1890, has so largely exceeded any February month's business in our history that we feel like saying so and asking ourselves the reason—there are many, the principal ones—and we felt like saying almost the only reason is the extensive and magnificent assortments of choice goods, and the FACT that they are sold at much less prices than generally prevail.

SILK SALE,

This week, that will demonstrate the above facts, in a most forcible manner.

If you want Silk Bargains come and get the newest and the best.
